POMFRET

The current Catholic Transcript (Hartford) says editorially:

Rev. George J. Donahue, the well-placed and contented pastor of Pomfret, has favored us with three delightful little volumes, all redolent with the happiness of a man that has learned to love the higher things of the soul and hold converse with the rare spirits living in books. What Xenophon says of Socrates, Father Donahue is ready to declare of Newman, Augustine, Bernard, Fenelon, and the other distinguished intellects that speak from the shelves of his beloved Pomfret study. The most pretentious of the three books bears the title of "Cardinal Newman." The volume is designed to introduce to the most eminent ortorian and the "Angel" of the English language, those who as yet "knew nothing of the great convert." The second, conceived in the same spirit, introduces the reader to a wider and less restricted field. It bears the title of "Books and Their Spiritual Value." It is a delightful essay compressed to 22 pages. The third, "The Poetry of the Mass," will afford inspiration to every devout worshipper that is keen to appreciate the spirit of the great drama that is enacted daily and upon ten thousands altars from the rising to the setting of the sun.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

December gives little indication of a building slump during the winter as during the first 10 days of the month nineteen permits were granted by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. Numbered among the permits are several for new dwelling houses, four and five car garages and two concrete silos for the storage of coal. The total expenditure of the new construction work called for in the permits will reach approximately $40,000.

Building operations in Norwich continued to make good progress during the week in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions.

The permits issued during the first ten days of December are as follows:

To Mattie F. Harvey to erect a frame garage 17 1-2 x 28 feet on Hamilton avenue.

To Vincent Strano to build an addition to his house at 327 Central avenue. The addition will be 5 x 9 feet and will give an extra room.

To John Senetski to erect a frame house at the corner of Happy and John streets. The house will be 25x27 feet with cement foundation and cellar. The extension will be furnished in half shingles and clapboards. The interior will be in hardwood and plaster.

To Contractor P. F. Sweeney to add a frame porch to the house at 129 Cliff street for Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald. The porch will be 6 x 10 feet.

To Otilia E. MacInnes to add a veranda to the present house at 42 Union street. The porch will be 6x6 feet.

To Lewis R. Peckham to erect a frame shed, 18x34 feet, on Corning Road to be used as a storage place for tractor and farm implements.

To Contractor P. F. Sweeney to build a frame 4-car garage on Spalding street for Sarandos Sakellaridis. The garage will be 20 x 40 feet and will have concrete foundation and floors.

To P. F. Sweeney to make alterations to the present building at the corner of Roath and Cliff streets for Mrs. C. Kilbosa. The work also includes the building of a brick and frame addition 14x24 feet two stories high. The first story will be of brick with plate glass windows and the second story of frame construction.

To P. F. Sweeney to alter present frame garage, owned by Sarandos Sakellaridis at 33 Spalding street, into a cottage house. The roof will be raised and also the building. There will be 6 rooms and bath.

To Charles Jaskiewicz to build an addition, 18x40 feet, to the present building at 354 West Main street.

To Antonia Reczkowski to build a frame house, 26x26 feet, on Spring Garden avenue. The house will have six rooms and bath and will be of frame construction with cement foundation and cellar.

To Louis Rubin to add to present frame barn off Elizabeth street. The addition will be 6 x 12 feet.

To Henry G. Montie to erect a frame house, 24x26 feet, on Kinney avenue for himself. The house will have a cement foundation and cellar. There will be six rooms with bath and sun porch. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and shingles while the interior will have hard pine trim and oak floors.

To John Pflaum to add to present house on Stonington road. The addition will be 12 x 18 feet.

To John C. Tracy to add to the present frame garage owned by Don Houghton on Elmwood avenue. The addition will be 10x19 feet.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were ten sales of real estate as compared to nine sales for the corresponding week in 1926. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $91,595 and $225,075.

There were eleven sales of real estate in New London during the past week, an increase of seven sales over the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans, for the respective weeks were $72,675 and $33,500.

New London

One of the most extensive realty developments in this section to develop in months has followed the organization of the Ridgewood Construction Co. by J. E. Silverstein and C. L. Brockett of Hartford. The company is developing a tract of land near Ocean Beach in Ridgewood park. There are 300 lots in the tract and it is expected that 50 new cottages will be erected in the near future. Already construction on 10 of the new houses is well under way. All of the cottages will be of frame construction containing five, six and seven rooms. Three of the new dwellings have been practically completed and at least 10 are expected to be finished before spring. The property is being improved with pavements, electric lights, sewers and water service. The development of Ridgewood park was in reality started a few years ago and in that time a dozen or more new cottages have been erected, streets laid out, a new bridge erected connecting the park with Ocean Beach in Bentley avenue, and improvement of the road connecting with the Goshen highway. In view of the present realty situation in the vicinity of Ocean Beach the expansion of the beach is naturally following a course in the direction of Ridgewood park.

Ground has been broken for the construction of a new cottage in Rogers street for Joseph Scarpa. The new dwelling will be 26 by 27 feet, of modern design, containing five rooms with all modern improvements and conveniences.

Work is now nearing completion in connection with the remodeling of the Elks club at 81 Washington street. The work consists of a complete remodeling of the club lodge rooms on an extensive scale with attractive and rare ornamental plastering, new electrical fixtures, new window and door sash, and ornamental iron grill work.

Work is progressing favorably on the foundation work of a new apartment house being erected by Contractor Thomas Occhialini in West street for Victor Castaldi. Work on the foundation was somewhat held up because of a heavy ledge located in the rear of the site. The new building will be of three story brick construction containing 12 three and four room apartments each equipped with tile baths and open fireplaces and finished in modern style. The basement is designed with quarters for the janitor. Dumb waiters will be installed for use in all apartments.

Building Permits.

Silvio Bartolucci, brick dwelling, 51 Cutler street, $12,000.

Francesco Ferrigno, store, corner Jefferson avenue and Bank street, $6,000.

J. A. St. Germain, dwelling, Montauk avenue, $8,000.

Joseph Scarpa, dwelling, Rogers street, $6,500.

Southern New England Tel. Co., cement block garage, 55 Howard street, $1,000.

G. H. Swanson, garage addition and alterations, 36 Georgianna street, $100.

Luke M. Marley, inclosed veranda, 20 Lilley street, $400.

E. Ruthberg, addition to shed, 172 Shaw street, $600.

Antonio Piro, garage, 26 Linden street, $600.

Montville.

Ground has been broken for a new Methodist Episcopal church at Montville, which will replace the structure destroyed by fire several months ago. The new building will be of Colonial design and located south of the Montville school. Definite plans have not been completed as yet but dimensions have been determined and work is progressing on construction of the foundation pending final completion of plans for the edifice.

Waterford.

Plans are being prepared for a new library building in Waterford following announcement by Mrs. Edward C. Hammond, of Waterford, that she intends to present the town with the library, in memory of her father and mother, James and Anna Rumrill.

Mystic.

A New London architect is preparing plans for alterations to the building on West Main street, Mystic, owned by L. Sklarew, of Mystic. The ground floor will be arranged for two modern stores, with plate glass and copper show windows. The upper two floors will be remodeled for apartments, with new plumbing, new floors and new plastered side walls. The roof will be of asphalt shingles.

A new cottage being erected at the State Oral school at Mystic for the superintendent has been inclosed and is now ready for the plastering. The new structure is a modern building with all conveniences containing seven rooms.

Westerly.

Building operations for the past week at the addition to the Westerly Memorial and Public Library have advanced to the point where the side brick walls of the second story have reached nearly to the height of the roof. On Elm street the frame is being raised for the new residence being built for Mrs. Catherine R. Welch.

The falling of the rear brick wall on the property of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Chester on Railroad avenue has delayed construction work for the rear wall of the cellar foundation was wrecked by the falling mass of brick. Work inside of the Morrone & Castagna block on Canal street has progressed to the point where the interior is now nearly ready for plaster.

During the first week in December, Westerly Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi has issued the following zoning permits which are nearly a duplicate of the building permits issued by Building Inspector Thomas Wills from his office in the Washington Trust building:

The first number was community singing of "America the Beautiful," with Miss Rollins at the piano. Mrs. Howard read a paper on "Value of Recreation," which Mrs. Barber had written. This was an excellent paper, containing many helpful points. Rev. H. A. Coolidge spoke on "Home and the Play Spirit." Some parents feel that they have not time to play with their children, or seem to think it beneath their dignity. They lose much of value that they might have in comradeship with their children. Next came a song in which nearly all joined, "Jingle Bells." Miss Kathleen McGounty spoke on "Recreation of the Child at School." H. R. Howard spoke interestingly of the importance of "Community Recreation." He felt that New England is not as fond of play as the west and south, and thus misses much joy of life that it might have. We should have some play everyday. A general discussion of different points on recreation followed. Miss Rollins conducted two very enjoyable games, in which parents, teachers, children and friends joined. Sandwiches and cocoa were served by Mrs. Mabel Horton and her helpers.

BULLETIN No. 13.
X-RAYS AND RADIUM IN CANCER.

Radium and X-rays have two principal uses in the treatment of cancer. They are employed to effect a cure and they are used to relieve the suffering and extend the lives of incurable patients. Often they are employed to give help when it is too late for surgery. Sometimes surgery and X-rays or radium are employed together.

There is no great difference between the effects produced by radium and X-rays. In either case the object is the destruction of the cancer. The healthy parts surrounding the cancer are to be left unaffected.

In a well-equipped hospital choice between X-ray and radium depends upon the peculiarities of the case to be treated. Among these is the accessibility of the cancer. In cancer of the tongue, for example, radium is more conveniently used than X-rays.

X-rays and radium are to be regarded as tools and are like the surgeon's tools and other instruments and procedures employed in medicine. They have no magical properties which physicians of good standing recognize. Unscrupulous persons who are willing to trade upon the credulity of cancer victims sometimes make absurd pretensions for radium. These lead to disastrous results. Both radium and X-rays, can, when carelessly and ignorantly handled, aggravate and even cause cancer, as has unfortunately too often been found out by scientific men. The story of Bergonie, who did so much to cure cancer in others, only to succumb himself to cancer induced by X-ray burns, is tragic.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES.

The Tail of a Bear.

A Tiger growled to a Buffalo: "Pray grow a little fatter.
"In seven days I'll eat you up, with neither knife nor platter."
The seventh day a Monkey cried:
"Pray, Buffie, what's the matter?"

The sad tale told, the Monkey
straddled on his partner's back,
And journeyed to the Tiger's lair,
where he began to crack
And crunch two big round orange fruits, with noisy lick and smack.

"How good these tigers' heads," he cried. The trembling Tiger ran.
Meeting a Bear, he begged, "Come catch this Monkey if we can—
A fearful beast who eats alive a tiger, bear or man!"

But each one feared his friend would quit, so lest the matter bungle,
They tied their tails together tight, and zigzagged through the jungle.
Slip-slipping, sliding, pushing, pulling
—wangle-wangle-wungle!

Stealthily they stole upon the Monk—they heard his fearful crunching.
And Tiger-Cat and Bruin-Bear both frightened by such lunching,
Forgot their pledge, and tried to run.
What heaving then and hunching!

Until at last old Bruin's tail broke off in two completely,
And grew upon the Tiger's stump quite naturally and neatly!
Now ever after both brave beasts hold both their tongues discreetly.

Hang Up the Baby's Stocking

Hang up the baby's stocking;
Be sure you don't forget;
The dear little dimpled darling!
She ne'er saw Christmas yet;
But I told her all about it
And she opened her big blue eyes
And I'm sure she understood it.
She looked so funny and wise.

Dear! What a tiny stocking!
It doesn't take much to hold
Such little pink toes as baby's
Away from the frost and cold.
But then for the baby's Christmas
It never would do at all;
Why, Santa Claus wouldn't be looking
For anything half so small.
I know what we'll do for the baby,
I've thought of the very best plan;
I'll borrow a stocking of grandma,
The longest that ever I can;
And you'll hang it by mine, dear mother,
Right here in the corner, so!
And write a letter to Santa,
And fasten it on the toe.

Write, "This is the baby's stocking
That hangs in the corner here;
You never have seen her, Santa,
For she only came this year;
But she's just the blessedest baby!
And now, before you go,
Just cram her stocking with goodies,
From the top clean down to the toe."

Do Your Duty.

Folded hands are ever weary,
Selfish hearts are never gay;
Life for thee hath many duties,
Active be, then, while you may.
Be strong to hope, O heart!
Though the day is bright,
The stars can only shine
In the dark night,
Be strong, O heart of mine;
Look towards the light.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES

Some of our birds can travel through the air at an amazingly fast rate of speed. For instance the homing pigeon can average 55 miles an hour, almost a mile a minute, in its flight. However, the majority of our smaller birds do not travel that fast. Sparrows average 25 to 30 miles an hour and wild geese can fly at the rate of 50 miles an hour. Such rates are really astonishing, considering the size of the birds. Man has to have specially constructed vehicles to take him from place to place at fast rates of speed, but birds are provided by nature with their means of transporation.— wings.

Some migratory birds cover long distances in non-stop flights. Some of them easily cover 1,000 miles in their flights without stopping. The golden plover, which spends the nesting season in Labrador, seldom alights after it starts its 1,700 miles flight far to the southward.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

How To Build A Camp Fire

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you how to build a camp fire. Building and caring for an out-of-doors fire is the final test of the camping art. The first step is the selection of a site. This should be in a cleared space, somewhat protected from the wind; yet the last direction must be taken with caution, enough breeze must be had to carry the smoke away.

Laying the fire is really the crucial part of the task. No two woodsmen agree as to the exact manner of doing this, but in the essentials they are fairly of the same mind. If flat stones are to be had they make an excellent foundation. On these, pile the small dry twigs quite loosely. Around and over but not too closely put some of the larger sticks. Apply the light to dry papers that are so placed at the side and bottom that the wind will carry the fire to the small twigs. Feel the anxiety, for a few minutes that follows the last match and then the crackling of the dry branches will be the finest music you have heard in many a day.

The fire can be kept as long as you need it, from your supply of dry wood. When you break camp, do not fail to cover the few sparks that may remain for these forgotten in your haste may mean the destruction of much property and perhaps the loss of life.

Three Ducks

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time that I have written to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my story.

There were three little ducks. They were too small to swim. One of them said, "I am old enough to swim, but when he went into the pond he felt that the water was too cold for him. For it was in winter.

The Gray Squirrel

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a gray squirrel. One day as I was walking in the corn field, I happened to see a little gray squirrel take a cob of corn and run with it to the big tree. I guess it was carrying it to its home in the big tree. There are many squirrels around our farms. They run up and down the trees, both red and gray.

Our Thanksgiving Dinner

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about my Thanksgiving dinner, when the guests all arrived from New London, Middletown and Colchester, and they were all seated at the table, I counted them. There were sixteen not including my baby nephew. When they were all seated around the table, my uncle asked for blessings and we all bowed our head in prayer, and thanked the good Lord for all his kindness to us for all the year. It was the first Thanksgiving my uncle and cousin ever spent in the country.

The day looked so dreary my aunt was going to postpone the trip, but my uncle said, "under no considerations. We must go for I can't miss this trip to the country today." He wished to see what Thanksgiving was like in the country, where the farmers have all their own nice things to eat. We had roasted turkey, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, mashed turnips, cranberry sauce, chilly sauce, bread and butter, mince pie, apple pie, squash pie, tea, and coffee and cake. I hope all the Wide Awakes enjoyed themselves at their Thanksgiving dinner.

About Sugar

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I am writing to you. I think you would be interested about sugar cane. It grows very tall. There are two kinds of sugars, the sugar cane and the sugar feet.

Sugar cane is grown in the southern states and ouisiana is the leading state.

PETER POTER, Age 10.

Our Own Town

Dear Uncle Jed: I think you would be interested about our own town. One day some men from Europe were wandering through the woods. While they were walking they saw some trees which looked like the "cedar of Lebanon." This is how Lebanon received its name. We bought Lebanon from a chief of the Narragansett tribe. They called it the five mile grant.

Lebanon is the birth place of five governors, three governors of Connecticut.

The British offered a prize to anyone who would capture Trumbull. There was an attempt made by a British soldier. He came walking up to the back door and said to the colored woman that he was sick. The colored woman got suspicious of him so she took a hot kettle of water and her tongs and frightened the soldier away. Trumbull was a painter, storekeeper, farmer and a governor. Trumbull was Washington's assistant. The house in which he lived is the meeting house of Lebanon. If you will come and visit Lebanon you will see many interesting things in the war office.

Our Thanksgiving Program

Dear Uncle Jed: Would you like to have me tell you about our Thanksgiving program?

We gave a play which told the story of the Pilgrims. The first scene took place at the home of William Bradford in England, 1608. The second scene showed the Pilgrims, on the Mayflower, coming to America. After this scene the fifth grade read "The Landing of the Pilgrims."

The third scene was called "The First Thanksgiving Council." It was held in Gov. Bradford's office.

At this meeting the Pilgrims made plans for the first Thanksgiving.

We then recited a Psalm in concert, because the Pilgrims said that Psalm on the first Thanksgiving day.

After this we sang the first and last stanzas of America. Then we went home. We had a lovely time and I wish you could have been here.

The Pilgrims.

Dear Uncle Jed: Would you like to know how the Pilgrims spent the first Thanksgiving?

When they first came over to America the Indians were good friends with them. After a while the Pilgrims thought of having a feast. They invited the Indians. The men went hunting, the boys went fishing and the women cooked wild turkey, deer, and many other things. Thanksgiving morning they went to church to pray. At noon they had their feast. All of the Indians and Pilgrims had a good time eating and playing games. This was the first Thanksgiving. It lasted three days. I hope you had a pleasant Thanksgiving.

A Visit In The Country.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I hope you and the other Wide Awakes will enjoy my story.

One summer vacation I was on a visit in the country at my cousin Uldege's house. After supper about six o'clock was a half mile trip to our grandma's house to bring the milk. The harness was put on the Billy Goat and he was ready to pull the load. Uldege was to drive and I was to care for the milk bottles. When we went up hill we got off because the load was too heavy. About quarter of seven we were back and Billy was in the barn ready for his night's rest.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing

Dear Uncle Jed: As I read your most interesting letter this morning in our Wide Awake page, about old worn paper money I remember well when I visited Washington this summer, of the souvenirs I saw at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Made from old paper money, among them was the Washington monument, souvenir book of choicest photographs, beautiful post cards, writing paper and envelopes. I saw the new paper money and postage stamps being engraved and printed. Some of the stamps were red, others green. But all the paper money I saw was green. You should see how fast they count a pile of bills. After my visit I bought one of the guides made from worn out paper money.

What I Want for Christmas.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to you. I will tell you what I wrote to Santa Claus. Do you think he will come to me? This is what I wrote:

Dear Santa: Again I come to you with a little letter. Sometimes I am good, and sometimes I am bad. But Santa won't you bring me something just the same? I'd like a raincoat, and some books, and lots of other things. But I can't ask for too much 'cause I have brothers and a sister, and they want you to bring them something, too, so I will leave it up to you. We all love you loads and wish you well.

My Thanksgiving.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell you how I spent my Thanksgiving. When I awoke I found it was raining. I got up and dressed myself and went downstairs. I ate my breakfast. Then I played games with my sisters. When we got through we ate our dinner. We had two chickens and cranberries and other good things. After dinner we played more games. At night I wrote to my father who is working up in the towns which were flooded. I hope you had a pleasant Thanksgiving.

A Birthday Party.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my second letter to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my story. One day we went to my cousin's house. It was her birthday. She had two little girls, and a birthday cake with nine candles on it. We had a wonderful time playing games. This is what we played: Look at the moon, grandmother. Then we began to dress with paper dresses. We danced, sang, etc. We had to go home then because it was late.

The Grasshopper

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have ever written to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will like my story.

The grasshopper is one of man's worst enemies. It destroys his crops. Men who have spent their lives studying about insects say that the damage done by bears, wolves and mountain lions does not equal the trouble done by these pests.

They eat his sugarbeets, clover, timothy and other garden vegetables. They fly about the country in swarms eating bark and tender twigs.

Sometimes the swarms are miles wide. This is called a grasshopper plague.

EVELYN ST. ONGE, Age 10.

Playing House

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about playing house. Sometimes my sister and I play house. I play that my sister is my baby. She makes believe she picks blackberries and I play I bake cake, we have very much fun playing house. We play there is a daddy. My sister takes his lunch. We pretend we live on a small farm and keep one cow and two horses. Sometimes I am the baby.

CAMP HAPPINESS.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story to you and the Wide-Awakes.

Did you ever hear about Camp Happiness? It is on the banks of the shetucket river, and it is a camp for girls. One day last summer I went up to visit the camp. Some of the girls were taking their riding lesson. I thought I would like to try it, so I rode the Teddy horse. We went about a mile and I liked it.

COURTESY.

Dear Uncle Jed: You do not receive courtesy as a gift as you do knowledge. Courtesy is something you can develop through your own efforts. Everyone should be courteous in little things as well as great things. It is the practice of using courtesy for small things that prepares us to use it at all times. At home is a fine place to start although many believe that it is not necessary to have courtesy in such a place. People who are courteous are usually liked by all persons.

OLGA TYNDA, Age 11.

A Chicken Thief

Dear Uncle Jed: One day last fall we were awakened by a number of squawks in the hen-yard. My father and brother went down to the hen-yard to see what was the matter. When they reached the hen-yard they saw nothing out of the ordinary, but the hens were in great excitement.

A few nights later as we missed two or three chickens, my brother set a trap near the hen house. In the morning to his great surprise, there was a large black skunk in the trap.

We were all pleased when we heard that he had caught one.

The Red Rose

Dear Uncle Jed: I have heard that many of the children have sent you stories, so I decided to write. This is my first story.

Once a red rose said to herself, "Oh, I wish I could be a blue violet." As she said this a fairy appeared and said "Do you really mean to be one?" "Yes," was the reply. Then the fairy disappeared. The rose bloomed the whole year, and what do you think happened to the rose? Why she was changed into a blue violet and was happy all her life.

HELEN DUKE, Age 10.
Colchester.

A Picture

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write about the picture, Taos Indian Roasting Corn, painted by Irving Couse.

The first thing that attracts my attention is the Indian. He is roasting corn. Beside the Indian I see a basket and a jar. In the basket there is some corn and in the jar is some water. There are some designs on the jar.

The house is made of sun dried bricks called adobe. The house is called a cliff dwelling house. Then the cliff dwellers began to live in groups of buildings called a pueblo. A pueblo is a house of six or seven stories piled one on top of the other. Ladders were used to get from one story to another.

EVELYN SEATON, Age 10.

The First Thanksgiving

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and I hope you and the Wide-Awakes will enjoy my story. Four days before Christmas, in the year 1620, one hundred Pilgrims landed from the Mayflower at Plymouth, Mass. There they built a little settlement, hemmed by a stockade to protect themselves from the Indians. During the first winter about fifty died, Captain Standish's wife among the number.

When spring came, the settlers planted the acres which they had cleared and by autumn had a plentiful harvest. Governor Bradford, knowing that God's goodness alone had saved them, set a day for Thanksgiving.

For three days the feast was held, and Massasoit, the Indian chief, came with his braves and ate the white man's food.

JOHN THE BAPTIST MODEL FOR CATHOLICS, PRIEST SAYS

Through out Advent, we hear much about the life and words of John the Baptist, said Rev. Myles P. Galvin, preaching at the third mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday to a congregation which filled auditory and gallleries. Father Galvin had just read the gospel for the third Sunday in Advent, John 1: 19-28, the replies of John the Baptist to the queries of the priests and Levites sent from Jerusalem. We know of the Baptist that he was the cousin of our divine Lord, was to be the announcer of His coming. At an early age John withdrew to the desert for a life of prayer, meditation and recollection, in preparation for his great mission, that of trying to persuade men to prepare for the advent of Christ. Yet John's career was not so much a matter of eloquence as it was putting his belief into practice. It is the obligation of the preacher to set an example—to teach and lead by practice rather than by precept alone.

In reality, John needed no preparation through penance and prayer; he was holy and pure, had been sanctified in his mother's womb. Christ Himself spoke of John as the greatest of all prophets. While he needed not the life of discipline in the desert, yet he adopted it to impress upon the Jews the necessity of penance and mortification. The Jews were the chosen people of God—even when their straying had merited chastening, yet they had been brought back to God. But now the end of patience had been reached—the seed of Abraham was to be put to the test. Would they accept or reject Christ? History has given the answer!

John tried his best to prepare them for the coming of the Redeemer; they must clear their lives of faults, make themselves worthy of the Saviour's coming. And John is still preaching to us. While the church in her entirety is stable in her preparedness for Christ's advent, individuals are still being put to the test. John continues to ask of them, "Will you accept Christ?" Still is the Baptist warning men, "Get rid of sin if you would have Christ make your hearts His resting place." Get rid of the roots of sin, the preacher admonished—the occasions of sin—that person, place, thing, which has been responsible for sin in the past. If we avoid occasions of temptation, we will avoid sin. Recognising these sources of evil, realizing the importance of keeping away from them, Father Galvin exhorted his hearers to make a firm resolution, to declare "That's the last—I'm through with them!" Then a good confession, more ardent love for Christ, he advised, if we want to be fittingly prepared for the coming of the Saviour on Christmas morning.

Father Galvin assisted Rev. John J. Reilly in giving communion to many scores of men, women and older children after Saturday's confessions. During the services Organist Henry J. LaFontaine directed the Junior choir in singing "Jesus, Saviour of My Soul," the "Hymn to St. Joseph," and after communion the chorus sang the parish hymn to St. Patrick, always melodious and inspiring.

For the Italian Catholic congregation at 8.15 Father Galvin read the low mass, Rev. Father Reilly preaching the Advent sermon. Here also there were many at holy communion.

In his announcements at the first mass at 7.30, the rector, Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. H. May directed attention to the zealous work of the Catholic Women's club in the recent sale for the benefit of the parish poor. Members of the congregation were asked to accept the invitation to sing Christmas carols at the Norwich Town community tree, on Christmas night at 6.30.

Economies of Operation

FOR fifty years Swift & Company has been handling perishable meat products. During that time an efficient money-saving system of marketing has been developed.

Science has been utilized to find new uses for many products that once were waste and better uses for old products. Multiplied uses have increased volume. Increased volume has resulted in decreased manufacturing and marketing expense. Experience, science and skill have reduced waste to a minimum.

Swift's marketing system means only one profit—and that is low. For the entire operation of converting live animals into Premium Ham and Bacon, Brookfield Sausage and other finished meat products and distributing them to the retailer, Swift & Company receives a profit from all sources averaging only a fraction of a cent per pound.

The National Distribution Conference in 1925 found the wholesale expenses of the packers' branch houses to be the lowest of the seventeen trades studied.

These economies of operation make possible full market value for live stock and lowest possible prices for meat. Swift & Company serves both producer and consumer efficiently and well.

INCREASE IN UNFILLED STEEL ORDERS CAUSE FOR RALLY IN THE STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Establishment of a new high since December, 1924, by sterling exchange and a brisk recovery in stock prices divided speculative interest in today's markets. Sterling Cables sold at $4.88 1-2, or within about 3-8 of 1 cent of the generally accepted 'gold export points.' The rally in stocks, which embraced practically all groups, ranged from 1 to 7 points in some of the more active issues.

Upon more mature consideration of the federal court decision in the St. Louis & O'Fallon case which involves the determination of methods regarding railroad valuations, Wall street was inclined to take a more hopeful view that the final adjudication of the suit by the United States supreme court would uphold the railroad's contentions or that changes would be made in the transportation act itself. Rails, as a group, showed a small net decline on the day although Canad'an Pacific, Missouri Pacific preferred and a few others closed 1 to 2 1-2 points higher.

Bullish sentiment in the stock market undoubtedly was created by the unexpectedly large increase in the November unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation, which seemed to bear out current reports of a good inquiry for materials for early 1928 delivery, and by the optimistic view taken by Secretary Hoover of the American Petroleum institute's efforts to conserve the oil resources of the country. Credit conditions were again watched with intense interest, but no changes were discernible during the day, call money ruling in plentiful supply at 4 per cent, while time money and commercial paper rates held steady at last week's prevailing quotations.

Hupp Motors, in which William C. Durant is reported to have a large interest, was one of the individual features of the session. The stock advanced slightly more than 2 points to a new high at $5 3-4 on total sales of nearly 150,000 shares, two blocks of 10,000 shares each changing hands at $5. Nash touched a new 1927 high at 99, and Packard at 38 1-2. Pierce Arrow preferred advanced 2 1-2 points and General Motors, Hudson, Chrysler and a few others advanced a point or more.

U. S. Steel common, which sold down to 128 last week, changed hands above 145 today, closing just below that figure for a net gain of 2 3-4. American Steel Foundry soared more than 7 points to 69 1-4 and American Machine & Foundry advanced nearly 4 points to 184. Lindbergh's proposed flight to Mexico revived interest in the airplane stocks, Wright soaring 12 points to 48 1-3, as against a low mr 24 1-2 earlier in the year, and Curtiss advancing 2 points to a new top at 18 7-8.

More than a score issues reached new high levels for the year or longer, the list including American Agricultural Chemical common and preferred, Manhattan Shirt, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Reid Ice Cream, Jewel Tea, Calumet & Arizona, Life Savers, Porto Rican Tobacco A and B and Fidelity-Phoenix Insurance, International Business Machines and Continental Can.

Commodity markets were reactionary. Cotton dropped $2.50 to nearly 13 a bale on selling inspired by unfavorable foreign trade advices, including reports of depression in the Lancashire Cotton mills. Wheat yielded nearly a cent a bushel in reflection of favorable Argentine crop reports. Coffee and sugar prices eased slightly.

Except for a jump of 16 points in Spanish pesetas to around 16.75 cents, and the new high in sterling, there were no changes of importance in the foreign exchange market.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Reddy Fox Gets Even.

Will some one please tell me why
That to get even we all try?
—Peter Rabbit

There is something queer about this getting even, or rather about the desire to get even. You will find this desire in people whom you would least expect to find it in. Very often it doesn't pay, but this seems to make no difference.

Now Reddy Fox had been bitterly disappointed when Terror the Goshawk had snatched one of Farmer Brown's chickens from right under Reddy's very nose. You see, at the time Reddy had been very, very hungry. But when he got back to the Old Pasture and thought it over it wasn't the fact that he had missed that good dinner that troubled him most. No, sir, it wasn't that. It was the fact that Terror the Goshawk had snatched that chicken just as he was ready to spring on it.

"I'll get even with that fellow," grumbled Reddy to himself. "I don't know how I'll do it, but I will. He doesn't belong down here, anyway. He's a robber! Just as if it isn't hard enough for us folks who live here to get a living without having to share that living with some one who doesn't belong here at all. I'd like to set my teeth in his neck—that's what I'd like to do! It isn't often I am foolish enough to want to fly, but right now I wish I could fly. Then I would hunt up that fellow and I'd teach him to stay where he belongs."

Now all of this was very foolish talk, as Reddy well knew. But he was so disappointed over losing that chicken and he was so provoked that an outsider who didn't belong in the Green Forest or on the Green Meadows, but belonged away up North, should have had that chicken dinner that he just had to say something.

Thereafter wherever he was hunting Reddy kept an eye open for Terror the Goshawk. He just hoped and hoped that there would be some way of getting even. He couldn't think of any way that he could get even, but he still hoped that there might be a way, and he didn't intend to miss the chance if it should offer. So he spent considerable time in the Green Forest, where he knew that Terror was likely to be found.

Not since he had so nearly caught that chicken at Farmer Brown's had Reddy been near that henyard. He knew that Farmer Brown's Boy had seen him and he didn't know that Farmer Brown's Boy knew anything about Terror the Goshawk. So he thought that, of course, Farmer Brown blamed him for taking that chicken. But if he didn't go over to the henyard he looked over there very longingly at times.

Early one morning as he sat on the edge of the Green Forest looking over toward Farmer Brown's he saw something that made him grind his teeth and at the same time made his mouth water. Seemingly out of nowhere a great bird shot down into the henyard. There was a tremendous racket among the chickens and then Terror the Goshawk came flying over toward the very spot where Reddy was, and Terror had another chicken. Reddy crouched low. Terror alighted close by Reddy and started to tear the feathers from that chicken. Just then there was a sharp crack over toward Farmer Brown's and there was a sharp whistle. It was the whistle of a bullet. Farmer Brown's Boy had taken the chance of getting Terror with his rifle. He had missed him, for the distance was very great, but that bullet had come so close that it had frightened Terror and he took to his wings, for already Farmer Brown's Boy was racing down from the farmyard.

That bullet had frightened Reddy, too, but he hadn't run. Here was his chance to get even. He sprang forward and seized that chicken. Then away he sped. Now at the moment he did this Farmer's Brown Boy hadn't been looking. He had been climbing over a fence. So he didn't see Reddy get that chicken. As it happens, there was a hard crust and so Reddy left no footprints. When Farmer Brown's Boy reached the spot he found only a few feathers.

"So that hawk got away with that chicken after all," muttered Farmer Brown's Boy. "I've got to drive him out of the Green Forest."

These were dark days in the Green Forest for Mr. and Mrs. Grouse. They were dark days for a number of little people in the Green Forest, but for none were they quite so dark as for Mr. and Mrs. Grouse. It wasn't that the sun didn't shine and it wasn't that the ground wasn't covered with snow. You see, it wasn't that kind of darkness. It was the kind of darkness which we call fear and worry.

It had reached such a state that Mr. and Mrs. Grouse were going hungry most of the time. They got barely enough food to keep them alive and they didn't enjoy any of the food they did get. And it was all because of Terror the Goshawk. Terror's favorite dinner is a dinner of Grouse. As long as he can catch Grouse the other little people needn't fear him much.

"It doesn't seem to me that I can stand this much longer," said Mrs. Grouse to Mr. Grouse. "I don't get enough to eat. I'm wasting away. Yes, sir, I'm wasting to skin and bones, and it's all on account of that dreadful bird. We've been smart enough to keep out of his claws so far, I think, that either one of two things must happen."

"What?" inquired Mr. Grouse.

"Either Terror the Goshawk must leave this part of the Green Forest or we must," replied Mrs. Grouse. "I can't stand this much longer. When I'm not worrying about myself I'm worrying about you."

"You don't mean that we should leave the Green Forest altogether, do you?" inquired Mr. Grouse.

"No," replied Mrs. Grouse. "If we should leave the Green Forest I don't know where we'd go. We'll have to move over to another part of the Green Forest, just as far from here as we can get. We might even go a little way up on the Green Mountain."

Mr. Grouse scratched his bill thoughtfully. "It's a bad time of year," said he. "It's a very bad time of year to make a change. We might starve to death. We know where the food supply is around here. We know that we can always get food of one kind or another here. But the moment we leave places we are familiar with we will know nothing whatever about the food supply. Have you thought of that, my dear?"

Mrs. Grouse nodded. "I've thought all about it," said she, "and I've made up my mind that I would rather starve to death than furnish a dinner for Terror the Goshawk. There he is now."

Mr. Grouse peeped out from under the hemlock bough, under which they were sitting. Sure enough, there was Terror the Goshawk in a tree only a short distance away, and his fierce eyes were fixed on that very bough under which Mr. and Mrs. Grouse were hiding. It was evident that he knew just where they were. Mr. Grouse shivered. There was somethingGrouse shivered. There was something very shivery in the stare of those that it was a big, heavy hemlock bough under which they were sheltered. Certainly Terror couldn't break this. And even as he thought this, Terror left his perch and came gliding down straight toward their hiding place.

SALEM PIONEER'S BODY IS IN NEW LONDON CEMETERY

The body of Matthew Turner, pioneer farmer settler in the town of Salem, was removed Saturday from its resting place of 103 years at the former Matthew Turner farm in Salem, and was reburied in Cedar Grove cemetery, New London, beside the graves of his grandson, Guy Turner, and his great grandson, Elisha Turner. Matthew Turner's son, Isaac Turner, is buried in the Elisha Palmer burying ground at Montville.

Matthew Turner, who died in 1824, was buried in a private burial lot on the Turner farm in Salem, now a part of the Fairy Lake farm. His descendants, not knowing his resting place, searched for several years and were finally successful early this summer.

Two New London relatives, Mrs. John W. Barlow of 127 Federal street, a great-great-grandaughter and Rear Admiral Frank Thornton Arms, U. S. N., retired of 51 Glenwood avenue, a great-great-great-grandson, made arrangements for removing the body.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

Postmastress Tracy is already getting her annual Christmas exercise. She is an expert at getting rid of surplus mail so that no one has to wait.

Mr. Cutler continues very ill.

Very few from this town were caught in the state police check-up on crooked auto lights.

The children are rehearsing for a Chistmas entertainment in Central Village school, also at the Congregational Sunday school.

There are cases of scarlet fever down in Plainfield and several houses are quarantined. One family, that of Joseph Walsh, had six down at one time, two very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Handy of Taftville were among week end visitors in Central Village.

New England Industries

Druggists' Preparations, Patent Medicines, and Compounds, Perfumery and Cosmetics.

New England makes less than 10 per cent. of the country's output of the articles considered under this heading, but the value of New England products and the number of wage earners employed in this section have kept pace with the records for the United States as a whole. There were 143 plants operating here in 1923, compared with 3,315 in the country at large. This was a decrease from 279 in 1914. Wage earners per plant have averaged 7 throughout that nine-year period. Massachusetts leads the states of this section, producing 67 per cent. of the total value of these products and claiming 65 per cent. of the establishments.

Reports of a survey conducted by the United States department of commerce in co-operation with the New England council show that 20 per cent. of the plants reporting have been in operation for over 50 years, and one for more than a century. Less than nine per cent. have been established since 1920. Almost half of those reporting in this survey have retained their original management.

Branch plants have been established all over the world by 15 per cent. of these concerns; the largest number are outside the United States, in South America, Europe, and especially Canada. The number of branches established by individual companies varies from one to three.

Chemicals, drugs, alcohol, and essential oils are the chief raw materials, and for the most part these are purchased outside New England.

Less than one-fifth of the producers report the use of piece work or other incentive wage methods, the average of all workers so paid being 13 per cent. Fluctuations by seasons are not great, and over 40 per cent. of the firms report absence of slack periods. Improvements have been generally reported in relations with workers, production control, and standardization of product. Cost of production was reduced 20 per cent. in one plant.

Total sales improved 4 per cent. in 1922 over the previous year, and 15 per cent. in 1923. They decreased 5 per cent. in 1924 but rose to 10 per cent. in 1925. Extension of territories, new products and new sales methods were responsible for increases, while competition and changes in nature of demand were reported as reasons for decreases. A maker of a veterinary ointment resorted to exporting because he found few horses in use for heavy work in this country.

New England is a major market for half these concerns, but less than 16 per cent of the whole group sell their entire product here. In this region the use of automobiles and electricity have decreased the need for veterinary remedies while good health has decreased sales of patent medicines. Brands or trademarks are used for 70 per cent of total products reported. Almost every producer sells through a wholesaler or jobber, or direct to the retailer many combining these methods.

A shack on Meridian street, Groton, was destroyed by fire today on orders of the board of selectmen. The improvised structure was occupied until recently by John Aberle, now an inmate at Spicer home, the town of Groton's almshouse. When Aberle was taken to the home the selectmen condemned the shack because of its extremely unsanitary condition. This morning employes of the borough went to the shack and after applying kerosene to it, the soaked timbers were ignited. It blazed briskly and an excited person sent a call for the Pioneer Hose company and an alarm was rung in. Before the apparatus could be started, the driver of the company was instructed not to respond to the alarm.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Strand Theatre

A Poor Girl's Romance with Creighton Hale and Gertrude Short and an all star cast is a surging heart drama by the greatest of romantic authors—Laura Jean Libbey—and brings to the screen an evening of suspense and delight such as you have never before experienced. You will relive all the heart-rending emotions of youth in this thrilling romance. Sock Me to Sleep is another feature of our weekly series and is a complete story. We also show a two reel comedy that you will enjoy.

Enjoy some delightful music by the Strand orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Herbert Rich.

Palace Theatre

Stories of the sea are a rarity on the motion picture screen, the reason being the difficulty encountered in the production of such pictures. In "The Cruise of the Hellion," the feature photoplay now being shown at the Palace theatre many unusual and spectacular scenes unfold themselves to the delight of the audience. The "Hellion" is the name given an old schooner plying its trade between New York and Calais. The crew assembled on board the "Hellion" is the choicest lot of villians ever beheld. Treachery stares the moment the ship clears the dock and their is no let up until the end of the picture. Fights of all kinds, heroic rescues, diving for treasure at the bottom of the ocean, a collision of race boats, these and many other exciting scenes are vividly portrayed in this mighty sea drama. The cast is headed by Donald Keith, a Paramount Junior star, Edna Murphy, Tom Santschi, Sheldon Lewis, Francis Ford and Sailor Sharkey.

On the stage the headline act is the Jean Hamilton revue, a song and dance divertisement consisting of five people, extremely talented in their own endeavors. Jim and Betty Page present, "Two Pages of Comedy," Neil Mack and Company offer a delightful comedy skit from the pen of Paul Gerard Smith, vaudeville's foremost writer, entitled "A Writing Room Wrangle," Flo Rayfield in comedy song numbers and The Vagges in their novel bag-punching act round out a perfectly balanced vaudeville program.

Broadway Theatre

"What Anne Brought Home," a comedy drama by Larry Johnston, was ably presented last night by the Myrkle-Harder company, which opened a week's engagement at the Broadway theater. The members of the company efficiently demonstrated their capabilities and put their play across in a highly creditable manner.

Paul Jarr Smith as the cantankerous Uncle Henry, with an all-consuming desire to start a cranberry bog, and who has no patience with Dudley, who has visions of a "fish farm," furnished many a laugh and interpreted this role satisfactorily. Richard E. Earle, as Sam Bennett, the father of three attractive daughters, one of whom was Anne, and Hilda Graham as Hattie Bennett, his wife, filled their respective parts exceedingly well, as did Bettie Fromen, as Alma, and Dorothy Ivest, as Nina, sisters of Anne. Fred Woodbury had the part of J. T. Raymond, the head of a utilities corporation, who plays an important part in the destinies of Anne and Dudley, Wray Meltmat, as Bert Hardcastle, the boastful, "hot air" artist, who by no means hated himself, gave a splendid characterization of this role.

The play is interesting and full of human interest. Anne, who with her parents and sisters, lives in a small village, is sent by her mother to a neighboring town for some thread and fabric. She returns with a husband, who is Dudley. Then the fun begins and the "plot thickens."

The company will present "White Cargo" todaxs matinee and night. This is said to be one of the most vivid plays produced in a decade. It is a dramatization of Ida Vera Simonston's book, "Hell's Playground." It is full of action, intensely dramatic and is out of the ordinary. It had a long run on Broadway and has been shown in all of the larger cities throughout the country.

The Charm of a Clock

That clocks are considered a necessity to the homelike room is testified to by Mr. John A. Ferguson of the Ferguson Jewelry store.

"There is no mistaking the fact that clocks are among the most popular gifts," said Mr. Ferguson. "There is something personal about a clock that seems to appeal to the person buying a present. And then, too, interior decorators are emphasizing the importance of a clock in adding to the attractiveness of a home.

"I was talking to a decorator just the other day and she spoke of a clock making a room live and I think that is the very thing about them that makes them popular as gifts. They seem so much more personal than a lot of other articles. You know how homelike the ticking of a clock sounds. A room may be as pretty as it can be, but without a clock it just seems dead."

"And" continued Mr. Ferguson, "it is very interesting to notice how the decorators use certain styles of clocks. They select the clocks that are suitable for the style of decorations they use. For the Early American room they always want an Early American clock. In an English room they use a clock with an English style case.

"Take for instance these Seth Thomas reproductions of the original New England models. They fit perfectly into an Early American room. Every one is familiar with the style and with the name. To use a clock that carries the name of one of the earliest American clock makers carries out the idea of your Early American decorations. Then there is another Seth Thomas model with an English style case. Many decorators insist on this particular design for their English rooms.

"Although a period clock will add an authorative note to the decorative theme of a room its most important function—truthfully recording the time—should not be forgotten. Fortunately, however, it is posible to secure a combination of accuracy and the charm, life and animation that only a clock possesses."

Exhibiting Photographic Landscapes

A collection of photographic landscapes, the work of Mr. Jean Kieffer, are on exhibition this week at the Butts' Art and Gift Shop. Many of these pictures were previously exhibited by Mr. Kieffer at Slater hall along with the work of other photographers in connection with a lecture given by Mr. Gilman under the auspices of the Norwich Art association, and an enlarged collection is now being shown at the suggestion of those who have already seen them.

These landscapes were taken in various parts of the United States and abroad, and a few in the vicinity of Norwich. A tree growing on the top of Raymond Hill has been made the subject of a picture "The Old Apple Tree" which will appeal to many a New Englander. "A New England Road," a photograph taken on the road between Niantic and Ocean beach carries the atmosphere of the New England byways and "Placid Waters" present a novel and artistic view of Montville pond. "Paris" brings memories to those so fortunate as to have been there; it is a print done in sepia and portrays a beautiful cloudy sky serving as a background for the Eiffel Tower and the Trocadero, the well known landmarks in the skyline of the old city by the Seine, the birthplace of Mr. Kieffer.

"Fast Falls the Eventide" and "Day is Over" very effective representation of sunset skies, were taken on the banks of the Thames, near London, and on the shore of the Lake of Geneva, near Lausanne, respectively. Prints of these subjects done in a very rich and brilliant blue effectively carry a suggestion of moonlight under the titles of "When Shades of Night are Falling" and "Nocturne."

These prints, effectively mounted and framed show that a great deal of thought has been given to the beautiful and the artistic, and should be a source of joy to those appreciative of these qualities as well as to those familiar with the subjects therein depicted.

"The best brakes ever developed for a motor car"

are on the Reo Flying Cloud—Try them out

"Every automobile manufacturer and every automobile engineer . . . who has subjected Lockheed Internal Hydraulic Four-Wheel Brakes to the most severe competitive tests, acclaims them the best brakes ever developed for a motor car."

THE HYDRAULIC BRAKE CO.
Automobile Topics, October 1, 1927.

The Reo Flying Cloud was the first car to have these brakes.

It appeared in January, 1927. We said then that we thought these were the best brakes any car, regardless of price, ever had.

Now comes the Hydraulic Brake Company, which makes other types of brakes than the Internal Hydraulic, but they know, as engineers know, which are the better.

They make tens of thousands more sets of external hydraulic brakes than they do of these internal hydraulics, yet they endorse the latter as the "best."

More costly? Yes. But Reo policy is to give the best regardless of cost.

But try them yourself

The best proof of this claim to the "world's best brakes" is a test that you make for yourself. So we hope you will ask for a demonstration. We want you to take a Flying Cloud out on slippery, greasy roads or streets. We want you to learn for yourself how swiftly, yet gently, they halt you in a straight line when you must STOP.

Be sure to try them out.

STATISTICIAN ARRIVES TO CONDUCT INDUSTRIAL SURVEY OF THIS CITY

John T. Alden, statistician of the Babson Statistical Organization, of Boston, Mass., arrived in the city Monday to begin work on the industrial survey of the city of Norwich, the contract for this work having been recently awarded to the Babson people by the chamber of commerce.

Mr. Alden was met by Secretary Pilcher and later introduced to Harold D. Larrabee, president of the chamber, and to Charles W. Taggart, chairman of the industrial survey committee.

Mr. Alden is not only a statistician but an engineer of recognized ability. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has had wide experience in making economic and marketing as well as engineering surveys. Some of his most notable work has been accomplished for the United Fruit company, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the Hoover Vacuum Sweeper company and other large corporations. He was called to give expert testimony in behalf of Henry Ford in the latter's defense in the late million dollar suit of Aaron Sapiro. His testimony in this case had reference to the commodity price trend.

Mr. Alden is one of the leading specialists of the Babson Organization and the board of directors of the chamber of commerce consider themselves fortunate in having him here to conduct the survey.

For the next few days Mr. Alden will spend his time looking over the city, meeting the business men and citizens, and absorbing something of the atmosphere and spirit of Norwich. He is expecting the cooperation of the people of the city in making his survey as complete an exposition of the possibilities of Norwich as possible.

"In order to make my report comprehensive I must have information and I trust sincerely that the good people of the city will help me," said Mr. Alden.

EARLY MAIL BEGINNING FOR CHRISTMAS DELIVERY

Postmaster Casper K. Bailey stated Monday that the Christmas rush has commenced in good earnest, and that he is gratified with the way that the public is endeavoring to assist the post office, by mailing early. Large numbers of Christmas greetings for local delivery are being received, all tied in bundles and marked "Hold till Christmas." These will be postmarked the last of next week, and all delivered by Saturday the 24th. He would urge the public to take advantage of this ruling, whereby he can hold this advance mailing and so insure a delivery before Christmas. Be sure and tie in bundles placing a slip on the package, requesting it held for the Christmas delivery.

HEBREW SOCIETY PLANS TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP

Plans were made for a drive to increase the membership of the Norwich Hebrew Benevolent association at a meeting of the board of directors which was held at the home of the president, Abner Schwartz, of 25 Perkins avenue. Following the business meeting, Mrs. Schwartz was hostess to the board at a banquet which she had prepared.

After the banquet brief and interesting addresses were made by President Schwartz and others. Alexander Pasnik gave a very interesting talk on the work of organizations such as the Norwich Hebrew Benevolent association which he observed during his recent travels in Europe and compared the work done in Europe with that done by the Norwich Hebrew Benevolent association. No association in Europe he said could excell the Norwich body in its work. The address by Mr. Pasnik was very interesting and appreciated by the guests.

Rabbi Stamm spoke on the subject of "Traditions Relating to the Burial of the Dead." This was of interest to those present as this association maintains a cemetery at Brewster Neck and has committees which are always ready to assist in the hour when needed for taking care of those who have passed away.

It was voted at the board meeting to hold its annual members meeting the last week in December at a date to be determined by the committee named to arrange for the meeting and the refreshments to be served at the meeting.

At the annual members meeting a board of directors will be nominated and elected, revised by-laws are to be voted on, and other important matters to be considered.

MADE PHI BETA KAPPA ADDRESS AT COLLEGE

Professor Henry W. Lawrence made the Phi Beta Kappa address at Connecticut college Monday evening, basing his remarks upon his forthcoming book entitled The Not-Quite Puritans: Some Genial Follies and Peculiar Frailties of Our Revered New England Ancestors.

Professor Lawrence said in part: "New England in the seventeenth century was probably no more wholesome than it is in the twentieth. Then, as now, a few great and good men and women tried in vain to 'sell' godliness to the multitude, but there were few buyers, although at that time everybody was compelled to attend the sale. Judging by the acts of the vast majority rather than by the words of a very small number, these early New Englanders were spiritually akin to our present generation. Some few of them were saints, a few more were hypocrites, but most of them were neither. Their amount of true holiness was, per capita, about the same as ours, but it took a somewhat different form, and they talked about it more than we do. Their normal human cantankerousness was often so camouflaged in pious phrases that it was, and still is, mistaken for godliness. Probably they were as bewildered as we are about how life should be lived. Certainly they were often discouraged with their efforts to regulate it, and they had many private doubts as to whether the method of sitting on the lid, after all, the best way to deal with human feelings.

"The seventeenth century specialized in repression. We of the twentieth have a right to demand that history tell us the truth about how the repressionism of Puritan New England really worked, among the masses of the people. It seems to have been no more than indifferently successful even in that age of lean adversity. A large fraction of the population submitted to, rather than shared in, that religious and moral fervor which has made the period notorious. They hardly qualified as belonging in the company of the saints. They were the 'not-quite Puritans.'"

LOSES IN SUIT FOR REAL ESTATE COMMISSION

By a decision handed down Monday by Judge C. B. Waller of the common pleas court, Nathan Weisler, a real estate agent of Montville, loses in his suit brought for a $300 commission against Peter and Mary Jesulaites and Mrs. John Ringwald, all of Ekonk Hill, Voluntown. The plaintiff sued both the buyer and the seller of a farm for $3,700 on which he claimed the $300 commission.

In his memorandum of decision, Judge Waller says:

The questions to be decided in this case are:

(1) Whether the plaintiff was acting as the agent of the defendants; of

(2) As the agent of Ringwald, the owner of the property; or

(3) As the agent of both.

Ringwald and his wife as owners of the property were named as co-defendants in the original writ and complaint but because of failure to make proper service upon them, the plaintiff later withdrew any cause of action against the parties.

The plaintiff states that he was originally employed by Ringwald to sell the property at the price of $2,700 with the express agreement that he should receive $300 commission, and that this agreement was "never called off" or the property taken from his hands.

It is the plaintiff's claim, however, that when he took the defendants to view the property, the defendants suggested that they carry on the negotiations with the owner without the plaintiff's assistance and that they should pay the plaintiff $300 commission in case they purchased the property.

The plaintiff states that this agreement was made because the defendants believed they could secure better terms from Ringwald.

The defendants deny that they ever made such arrangements with plaintiff or either agreed to pay him a commission.

It appears that about two months after the last visit to the property with the plaintiff that the defendants went alone to the owner, Ringwald, and entered into a contract with him for the purchase of the property for $2,400.

It does not appear that the plaintiff ever notified Ringwald that he was not acting for him and that he intended to look to the defendants for his commission.

The plaintiff's claim as I understand it, is that while he was still acting as agent for Ringwald, he entered into an agreement or contract with the defendants to recover compensation from them in case they bought the property.

Under the circumstances in evidence it does not seem reasonable to either that the plaintiff would have given up his claim against Ringwald for a commission in case of sale to the defendants or that the defendants would enter into an agreement with the plaintiff to pay the commission to him.

If the evidence justified me in finding that the plaintiff has established his claim and that he was in fact acting for both parties to the transaction without the knowledge of both and without their expressed or implied assent thereto, then the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover from either the owner or defendants.

But I am not satisfied that plaintiff has established any contract on part of defendants to pay him a commission in case they purchased the property.

Judgment may therefore be entered for the defendants.

NORWICH TOWN

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Methodist Episcopal church, the pastor, Rev. Albert E. Whitten, preached from Psalms 119—using Moffatt's translation of the 129th, 130th and 131st verses, Thy laws are wondrous mystery, my soul obeys them. The interpretation of Thy words enlightens and instructs the open minded; and I am open, eager, panting for Thy commands.

The Sheltering Arms service Sunday afternoon was conducted by Rev. Albert E. Whitten, who spoke from the text, Psalms 119: 97 to 100th verse. O, how love I Thy law, it is my meditation all the day. Thou through Thy commandments hast made me wiser than mine enemies; for they are ever with me. I have more understanding than all my teachers; for Thy testimonies are my meditation. I understand more than the ancients, because I keep Thy precepts. Rev. Mr. Whitten was assisted during the service by the choir of the Methodist church, which sang the hymns. Mrs. Lewis Aldrich accompanied for the singing, also gave several piano numbers. Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich were heard in a vocal duet.

The Methodist Christian Endeavor service Sunday evening was in charge of Rev. Mr. Whitten. The topic assigned was, "Good Mottoes For Christian Living." John 9:4; Ecclesiastes 9:10 was the scripture reference.

Between twenty-five and thirty children gathered at three o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Norwich Town Methodist church to sing Christmas carols, and the interesting and helpful object lesson given by Howard Bushnell, acting pastor of Goshen Congregational church. Three main points were emphasized in the address: Growth of mind, growth of body and growth of the soul.

A group of boys and girls sang Snow at Sunset in two parts, boys took the alto and the girls sang soprano. The singing was accompanied with piano and violin. Miss Virginia Ward and Miss Doris Rose were the pianists, and Mr. Bushnell, violinist.

Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, preached Sunday morning from I Corinthians 15:46; Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but—that which is natural; and afterwards that which is spiritual.

At the Junior Christian Endeavor service Sunday afternoon, Robert Hastings and Nelson Ladd were the leaders. "Fair Play for the Foreigners," was the topic. During the meeting, charts were shown of the several countries from which the many and varied things are contributed toward the material in constructing the telephone. There were 20 present. "At the Legend of the Diamond Dippers" was the theme of a story told by Miss Helen Woodworth, corresponding secretary of Connecticut Christian Endeavor, who was a visitor in Norwich over the week-end and who spoke along her line of work on two or three occasions.

At the meeting Sunday evening of the Congregational Young People's Christian Endeavor society, the leader was Robert Stott. The president, Reginald Avery, was in charge of the business meeting, when officers and committees for 1928 were nominated. The installation exercises are to take place in January. The several committees also presented their reports. There were twenty-six present to hear the address by Miss Helen Woodworth on "Christian Endeavor in Our State."

There is to be a meeting Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at the Congregational parsonage, when a committee of the parish will draft a constitution for the new missionary organization.

The theme assigned for this week at the mid-week service of conference and prayer of the First Congregational parish, is "If Christ Came to the Country, What?" Mk, 5:17, with reference to 1-20.

What would we have thought if our Dads had surprised us with a Gulbransen for Christmas?

Then picture the Children and Mother—THIS Christmas—a handsome, stately Gulbransen in the parlor!

Imagine their delight when they find they must actually restrain their impulse to pedal hard — for the Gulbransen plays at the lightest touch of a foot.

When they find many player rolls have the words printed on them and that all can gather 'round the Gulbransen and sing.

When they find that any roll can be played in seven different keys by the turn of a knob—high or low —to suit any voice.

When they learn that the Gulbransen is actually theirs — theirs to have and to enjoy for years to come.

Aside from the pleasure which it gives, the Gulbransen affords an unequaled education in music — particularly important in the home where there are children.

Make this supreme Christmas purchase now. It is not necessary to give a great deal of consideration to the buying of a Gulbransen or to "shop around." It's a clean-cut, straight-forward, dependable proposition. The price of each Gulbransen is branded in the back—you pay the same prices as does every other Gulbransen buyer in the United States. COL. C. A. LINDBERGH IS IN FLIGHT FOR MEXICO CITY OVER LOUISIANA 11:10 P. M.

Left Bolling Field, Washington, at 12.29 P. M. Yesterday on 2,000 Mile Non-Stop Flight to Mexico City—Started Off at 85 Miles an Hour—His Average Speed to Lynchburg Was About 95 Miles an Hour—Is Due to Arrive at Mexican Capital About Noon Today—President Calles of Mexico Has Proclaimed a National Holiday in Honor of Col. Lindbergh.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh soared into the air on his second international flight today, heading from Bolling field toward Mexico City at the invitation of President Calles.

Disaster threatened the young trans-Atlantic flier at the start, but the Spirit of St. Louis responded to the shock and succeeded in a third determined attempt to take off. The rain-soaked earth twice defied Lindbergh's efforts to lift the plane off the ground as it roared across the field. Finally it slowly ascended, skimmed over trees bordering the aviation grounds and winged southward into the gray mist which blanketed the Potomac.

As though exuberant with victory, Lindbergh and his silver partner started the 2,000 mile journey at such speed that some planes of a convoy sent out to cover the first stage of the flight could not keep pace. It was estimated here that Lindbergh was traveling at 110 miles an hour, but first reports of his progress estimated the speed at 80 miles an hour over Lynchburg, Va.

Lindbergh's decision to take off today on a non-stop flight from capital to capital startled Washington with its suddenness, as there had been indications that weather conditions might hold him up for a week or ten days. But weather bureau and naval hydrographic reports agreed that better atmospheric conditions were not in the offing, so he ignored a threatened rainstorm and started on his long journey, satisfied that wind conditions at least, were favorable.

Warned that flying weather tomorrow might be worse than today, Lindbergh said before leaving that he intended to make a bee line for Galveston, Texas, thence follow the Gulf coast until daybreak before turning inland after establishing his location. His path across the mountains to Mexico City, he said, would be guided entirely by flying conditions.

If the Spirit of St. Louis fulfills the schedule mapped out, Lindbergh should greet President Calles around mid-day tomorrow. He expects to remain in the Mexican capital about ten days and possibly will undertake a flight to Cuba or Central America before returning to the United States.

Before leaving, the young aviator said emphatically that no project is definitely being planned beyond the Mexican flight, but he has indicated that supplies which reach him shortly in Mexico would be available for such other flights as he may decide to make.

The present trip has no official significance involving the American government, but has generally been looked on in Washington as beneficial to good relations between the United States and Mexico. President Coolidge is watching it with all the interest that he assumes American citizens have in its success.

As for Lindbergh, after closely inspecting the many instruments which were built on the dashboard of his plane, he carefully placed in the cabin the few articles which he considered necessary. These did not include a parachute, nor did he wear one strapped around his heavy flying suit. A brown paper bag containing three meat sandwiches, and two canteens of water, were added to a week's supply of concentrated food for nourishment. The last would be used only in case of a forced landing in a deserted section. Capt. Emory S Land relative of Lindbergh, placed a high pair of leather boot-shoes in the cabin while the aviator was donning his leather helmet and goggles, but the plane carried no firearms, as some reports indicated.

It was 11 a. m. today before Lindbergh decided to hop off without further delay. He did so after reading the latest weather reports. At 12:29 p. m., his plane lifted slowly into the air, and a few minutes later the small group that had watched him start on another lonely journey, saw him disappear into the mist.

Characteristic precautions were taken by the flier before he finally stepped into the cabin. Mechanics had tuned and tested the engine thoroughly when the aviator and Major Harvey Burwell, commandant at Bolling field, walked around the field to pick the most suitable spot for the hop off. Then the Spirit of St. Louis was slowly rolled to the extreme northeast corner of the field, where the gasoline supply was increased to over 225 gallons and 15 gallons of lubricating oil provided.

After asking Major Burwell to telegraph to President Calles that the Spirit of St. Louis might be expected tomorrow, Lindbergh posed briefly for photographs and took his seat at the controls. He first tested the rear rudder guide of his plane, with the assistance of army mechanics. At that moment Assistant Secretary F. Trubee Davison of the war department arrived and exchanged greetings with the youthful flyer.

Col. Lindbergh then left two messages, one for Major Burwell, which said, "many thanks for your co-operation. It has been 100 per cent." The other was for Lieut. H. A. Dinger, of the army and said "I certainly appreciate your assistance in preparing for my flight to Mexico City. Please give my thanks to Staff Sergeant R. W. Hobe for the excellent inspection he has given the Spirit of St. Louis."

With the starting of the motor, Lindbergh looked neither to the right nor left, but confined his attention to the behavior of the engine. Apparently satisfied with its tune, he directed the path to be cleared and slowly got under way while enlisted men kept the plane pointing to the gale which had been picked. As the ship gathered speed, they dropped aside and Lindbergh attempted to get into the air immediately. Twice the plane fell back to earth after seeming to lift satisfactorily. Just when the remaining distance seemed too short, the Spirit of St. Louis tugged itself from the mire, sailed along a few feet above the ground and finally ascended gracefully and gradually until well above the earth.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 13—(AP)—Residents of Signal mountain, ten miles from Chattanooga, reported that an airplane believed to be the Spirit of St. Louis, passed over the mountain at 6.15 central time.

PLANE FLYING LOW OVER BALDWIN, MISS.

BALDWIN, Miss., Dec. 13—(AP)—The sound of an airplane motor flying low over this place was heard by several individuals about 8.55 o'clock this evening. Baldwin is about 160 miles southwest of Chattanooga, near where Col. Lindbergh was reported two hours earlier.

PLANE PASSED OVER EASTERN LOUISIANA

VICKSBURG, Miss., Dec. 13—(AP)—An airplane believed to be that of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, en route to Mexico from Washington, passed over Tallulah, La., tonight at 11.10 o'clock, according to reports to the Vicksburg Herald. Tallulah is 15 miles almost due west of Vicksburg.

MAY ENCOUNTER SHOWERS IN HIS NON-STOP FLIGHT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—(AP)—Possible showers, cloudy skies and mild winds faced Col. Charles A. Lindberg tonight in his non-stop flight from Washington to Mexico City.

The weather bureau made this prediction for the area from Alabama to and along the Texas coast, after compiling its evening reports.

The cloud bank, it is said, however, would be broken in many places, permitting the moonlight to filter through. The winds along the gulf coast were said not to exceed 12 miles in velocity where a 20-mile blow had been expected.

NATIONAL HOLIDAY IN MEXICO FOR LINDBERGH

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 13—(AP)—From President Calles to the poorest peon, Mexico is thrilled by the flight of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh from Washington as by nothing else in the country's recent history.

A few hours after the news of the trans-Atlantic flier's start from Washington reached Mexico City, President Calles issued a proclamation making Wednesday a national holiday in honor of Lindbergh, calling upon the people to pay tribute to the flier as an honored guest of the nation and ordering all government offices closed not only on Wednesday but on other days of the aviator's stay, when popular festivals will be given in his honor.

The president expects all business houses to close for Lindbergh's arrival, which will be the first time in history such a tribute has been paid to any foreigner.

MEAT PRICES MAY BRING BOYCOTT IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13—(AP)—A marketing committee was formed here today to investigate alleged unreasonable increase in the price of beef in Philadelphia and to urge consumers to use other meats as substitutes.

The local branch of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers, from whose membership the committee was formed, denied reports that their intention was to boycott the sale of any grade of beef Leo A. Kelly, chairman of the board of directors, said retailers were at loss to explain why beef prices were advancing and that the investigation was for the purpose of clarifying the situation.

Prices of beef were said to be at the highest point since the World war, while the average increase is about 25 per cent for all grades, the so-called choice beef has advanced between 70 and 75 per cent. Carcass beef for which retailers paid 17 cents a pound a year ago has risen to 28 cents, cuts are retailing at 75 cents a pound.

Other organizations controlling numerous retail meat shops have advised their customers to buy poultry and meats other than beef until the price of the latter drops.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS AVIATOR HINCHCLIFFE

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—(AP)—Mystery today surrounded the arrival in America of a man who said he was Captain Walter G. Hinchcliffe, British flier, reported to be negotiating to fly Charles A. Levine's trans-Atlantic monoplane, Columbia, in an endurance flight to establish a new record.

Although a man who said he was Captain Hinchcliffe arrived in Boston yesterday and would leave immediately for New York, despatches from London said the British flier was in Amsterdam, suffering from influenza and quinsy.

Samuel Hartman, Levine's attorney, said tonight he knew nothing as to Hinchcliffe's whereabouts or the reports that he was to pilot the Columbia in a projected endurance flight. Levine was not at his office today and could not be reached for a statement.

WILL ATTEMPT RECORD ENDURANCE FLIGHT TODAY

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Dec. 13—(AP)—Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock, of Detroit, will take off from the beach here at dawn tomorrow if weather conditions are favorable in an attempt to bring back to the United States the world's airplane endurance flight record.

In their monoplane Pride of Detroit, with which they recently circumnavigated most of the globe, they hope to stay in the air sixty hours, traveling a circuitous 30 mile route up and down the beach.

The present record of 52 hours and 22 minutes was set by Cornelius Edzard and Johann Risticz, of Germany in beating the best previous mark established by Bert Acosta and Clarence Chamberlain, American flyers.

The two aviators will alternate at the controls while each obtains sleep and nourishment. Their food will consist of coffee, soup, fruit and sandwiches.

The flight will be officially observed by authorities of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

FOREIGN GANGSTERS ARE OPERATING IN HERRIN

HERRIN, Ill., Dec. 13—(AP)—Herrin's latest outbreak, in which two policemen were wounded last night, was caused by an influx of gangsters from Chicago or St. Louis, officers believed today.

Sheriff Oren Coleman and Mayor Marshall McCormack, connected the shooting with seizure by Herrin police last Wednesday of an automobile, stolen in East St. Louis, containing burglar tools and a cap with the label of a clothier in Cicero, Chicago suburb.

Sheriff Coleman said he had suspected for some time that Cicero gangsters had taken up headquarters at West Frankfort in Franklin county, which adjoins Williamson county.

The policemen wounded were John Stamm and Elmer McCormack, a brother of the mayor. The three men were standing in front of the city hall when an automobile filled with gunmen twice circled the block and fired a volley each time. Stamm was only slightly wounded. A bullet pierced McCormack's left lung but he was expected to recover.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 13—(AP)—Courtmartial proceedings were opened today against 33 students arrested as an outgrowth of the rioting last week at Oradea Mara and a demonstration in Bucharest on Saturday.

At the same time it was announced that a 24-hour strike of students throughout Rumania had been called today in protest against the arrests among the students.

The government intends to present to parliament a bill asking credit of more than 38,000,000 lei (about $545,000) in order to pay damages caused by the student anti-semitic riots. In authoritative circles it is believed that the government will pay for the damages in full.

Members of the regency today authorized Dr. Filderman, president of the Union of Hebrews of Rumania, to communicate its regrets and disapproval of the riots to his union and expressed hope that the government will punish the guilty parties.

SLEW HIS FAMILY OF SIX AND THEN HANGED HIMSELF

HENNESSEY, Okla., Dec. 13—(AP)—Fighting a losing game in life harassed by debts and failing crops, Phillip Millis, 35, a farmer, in a fit of insanity today slew his family of six with an axe while they slept, and then hanged himself.

The victims were Mrs. Minnie Millis, 35, Tina, and Burrell, 13 years old twins; Marie 9, Wayne 5; and Dale, five months old.

Mrs. Warren Brumley, a school teacher who lived with the Millis family, awakened in the night to see the farmer, carrying a bloody axe, enter the room she occupied with one of the children. She fled to a neighbor's house, the only occupant of the home to escape Millis' attack.

Millis, who farmed the homestead he inherited, was usually of a kind disposition but he spoke harshly last night to his wife and children, Mrs. Brumley said.

MESSAGE PICKED UP FROM M'MILLAN IN THE ARCTIC

HUDSON, Mass., Dec. 13—(AP)—A message from Commander Donald B. MacMillan, head of the Rawson-Field-MacMillan expedition which is frozen in for the winter at Nain, Labrador, was picked up here tonight by Don Mesereve, operator of amateur station 1FL. The message was intended for transmission to Westinghouse station WBZ-WBZA, at Boston.

Commander MacMillan appealed to the station to send messages from friends of the members of the expedition in the vicinity of Boston.

May Curtail the Output of Textiles

New England Manufacturers Are Seeking a Remedy For Existing Conditions.

BOSTON, Dec. 13—(AP)—The probability that curtailment of output rather than a general wage reduction would be adopted by the majority of New England textile mills as a remedy for existing conditions in the industry, was voiced by representative manufacturers in many textile cities tonight. It was the widely expressed view that the action of the Amoskeag Manufacturing company today in announcing a 10 per cent wage reduction would not necessarily establish a precedent for other textile companies.

While none of those who discussed the Amoskeag cut was willing to go formally on record, it was the general view that curtailment would deal adequately with the situation. Many cotton mills in New England, acting individually, are restricting output in varying degrees ranging from 15 to 20 per cent curtailment to complete shutdowns. Poor business conditions together with the prospect of even more serious depression during the winter have made such action necessary, manufacturers said.

The mills, learning their lesson from the long depression which followed the war, know that they cannot continue to operate at or near capacity when this means piling up goods in the warehouses, it was said. Over-production, one leading manufacturer pointed out, results only in protracting the period of poor business.

The lessening of operations is also in effect throughout the south, all southern print cloth mills having curtailed at least 20 per cent. Ninety per cent of the narrow sheeting mills of the south have curtailed 20 per cent. In some cases the plants close at noon on Friday, while other mills have abandoned the night shifts.

The American Printing company in Fall River has closed down indefinitely and all the other print cloth mills have curtailed their operations in varying degrees.

The curtailment in Lowell was set at about 40 per cent. Reports from New Hampshire indicated that the cotton mills of that state have reached the amount of machinery in operation to about 20 per cent, although there, as in other parts of New England, the reduction was not uniform but in accordance with the situation as it affects individual mills.

In Maine, where 10 mills recently announced wage reductions, there has also been some curtailment.

AMOSKEAG ANNOUNCES 10 PER CENT WAGE CUT

MANCHESTER, N. H., Dec. 13—(AP)—Following in the footsteps of 10 Maine textile plants which had reduced wages previously this month, the Amoskeag Manufacturing company, whose mills here employ 9,000 workers, announced today a 10 per cent wage reduction, effective December 24.

The action of the Amoskeag brings the total of textile operatives in New England who have faced wage cuts during December to more than 20,000. On December 5, a ten per cent reducaion became effective in five plants in Lewistone, Me., employing 4,000; in the plant of the Edwards Cotton company, Augusta, Me., with 800 workers; and in the Lockwood mill in Waterville, Me., with a personnel of more than 700.

On December 12 a similar reduction became effective in the mills of the Pepperell Manufacturing company at Biddeford, Me., with 3,500 operatives; and in the plant of the York Manufacturing company in Cacco, Me., employing 2,500. In all cases southern competition and the present sluggish condition of the market for goods were given as reasons for the reduction.

AETNA MILLS TO CLOSE PLANT, SELL MACHINERY

WATERTOWN, Mass., Dec. 13—(AP)—Stockholders of the Aetna mills of this town and Newton, manufacturing worsteds and woolens, voted today to authorize the directors to close the plant and to sell all or any part of the plant and machinery. The mills were founded in 1863 and employed about 550 operatives.

SENTENCED TO ATLANTA FOR VIOLATING MANN ACT

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 13—(AP)—Benjamin Rosen, insurance agent of Boston, pleading guilty to violation of the Mann act, was sentenced to two years in Atlanta penitentiary by Judge F. W. Bryant in federal court today. Rosen admitted taking a 17 year old girl to various cities of Canada and eastern section of the United States.

AMERICAN CONSULATE AT CANTON IS UNDER PROTECTION OF AMERICAN GUNS

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 13—(AP)—American guns tonight were protecting the American consulate at Canton against disorders which it is thought may follow the seizure of the city by communists.

The communists, who gained control of the city in a coup during the absence of regular troops, were still in possession tonight and were understood to have established a soviet people's council on the Russian plan.

Chinese newspapers here, intimating influence from Moscow, say that four Russian officers are on the red army staff operating in Canton. A leader of the seamen's union and the former secretary of Michael Borodin, once Russian advisor to the former Canton nationalist government are said to have been prime movers in formation of the council, one of the two acting as commissar of war.

Looting and incendiarism persisted today, and there was some local fighting, but nothing of a serious character has occurred as far as is known, and there were no indications tonight of danger to foreigners.

Foreign representatives, however, are taking all needful precautions. American war ships and other foreign vessels have been busy bringing their respective nationals to safety and most of the foreigners, including a fairly large number of missionaries, have been evacuated.

Further, in view of a possible attempt to recapture Canton, the American gunboat Sacramento has landed field guns and placed them in position before the American consulate in the foreign section to protect the lives and property of Americans and Europeans. That this is advisable is shown in a statement from Nanking sources that Hanking forces are organizing a military expedition to suppress the communist revolutionaries in Canton and restore order.

Generals Pei Ching Hsi, foremost Nanking military leader, and Li Chai Sum, who were ousted from Canton last month in a military coup, have been named as chiefs of the counter expedition.

The Nanking forces, through their mouth piece, the Kuo Min News agency at Nanking yesterday accused the Canton Kuomintang delegation now in Shanghai for a party conference of plotting and provoking the Canton revolt. The Kuo Min branded Wang Ching Wei, former chairman of the central executive committee of the Kumintang party as a ring leader under bolshevist direction. The Nanking group demanded the arrest of the whole delegation.

Apparently a similar official demand for their arrest was made to the police in the French concession but it was ignored after the French had consulted Chiang Kai Shek, newly reappointed head of the Kuomintang nationalists, who declined to interfere unless he had further evidence in support of the accusations.

H. L. Stimpson Named Envoy to Philippines

Has Accepted President Coolidge's Appointment as Governor General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13 (AP)—At the urgent request of President Coolidge, Henry L. Stimson of New York, former secretary of war, successful mediator of the Nicaraguan civil war and close friend of the late Major General Leonard Wood whom he succeeds, has accepted appointment as governor general of the Philippine islands. The nomination was sent to the senate today by the president.

In accepting the post Mr. Stimson is understood to have put aside fears that his health would not permit a protracted stay at Manila. The president's appeal was to his patriotism and that coupled with his long standing interest in Philippine affairs induced the New Yorker to disregard the health considerations.

Secretary Davis of the war department said today that he had recommended Mr. Stimson for the post and was greatly pleased that the president had seen fit to make the appointment. Other war department officials predicted that the nomination would be generally welcomed by the people of the Philippines.

Col. Stimson has been a student of colonial administration ever since his duties as secretary of war brought him into contact with such problems. He has been particularly interested in the Philippines. Because of this factor and his long personal friendship with Gen. Wood, who was chief of the general staff during his administration as war secretary Mr. Stimson visited the islands in the spring of 1926 to study conditions there. Subsequently he discussed his observations with both the president and Secretary Davis.

The primary task awaiting the new governor general is the same that confronted Gen. Wood during his entire administration—that of finding a way to induce capital investments to the islands under proper safeguards so that the Philippines may realize their commercial and economic possibilities. The means to this end pointed out by Secretary Davis in his annual report involve amendment of the land laws by the insular government so that development of public lands may proceed on such a basas as will attract investors.

Col. Stimson's greatest public achievement, settlement of the Nicaraguan civil war, came as a result of his interest in Philippine matters. His name occurred naturally when President Coolidge was seeking a personal representative to send to Nicaragua in search of a solution of the difficulties besetting both the Washington government and the two Nicaraguan political factions, then deadlocked in civil war.

STIMSON DISTINGUISHED MEMBER OF NEW YORK BAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Henry Lewis Stimson, who today was appointed governor general of the Philippine Islands, is one of the most distinguished members of the New York bar, and has long been active in republican politics.

He served as secretary of war in President Taft's cabinet and this year went to Nicaragua as President Coolidge's representative to investigate affairs there. He is a colonel of the judge advocate general's corps of the army, and a graduate of the Army War college.

He was born in New York 60 years ago and is a graduate of Yale University and Harvard Law school. At Yale, he was a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity and of the Skull and Bones Honorary society. At Harvard he was affiliated with the Hasty Pudding club and was elected to Phi Betta Kappa.

In 1893, two years after he was admitted to the bar in New York, he became a member of the law firm of Root and Clark, of which Elihu Root, one time secretary of state, was the senior member. At the retirement of Mr. Root in 1901, the firm's name was changed to its present form of Winthrop & Stimson.

He served with the A. E. F., as lieutenant colonel of the 305th field artillery.

CATS WIN CONTEST OF MRS. BENNETT'S WILL

BATH, N. Y., Dec. 13—(AP)—Contest of the will of Mrs. Emma Bennett of Presqo, in which a part of her estate of $15,000 was set aside for the care of her cats, ended today in victory for the cats.

Under the settlement, relatives of Mrs. Bennett's husband to whom a portion of the estate was bequeathed, agreed upon concessions whereby a sizeable fund is created for care of the pets. Guy Cheney, of Corning, executor of the will, will ask Surrogate Smith to construe its terms as they affect the cats, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals probably will be named to assume the burden of their care.

The cats are living in Mrs. Bennett's former home.

DEMOCRATS IN HOUSE HIT AFFILIATED TAX RETURNS

By a Vote of 158 to 153 the Democrats Put Through an Amendment That Would Prohibit Parent and Subsidiary Corporations From Filing Affiliated Tax Returns or Their Earnings—One Republican, Gifford of Massachusetts, Voted With the Democrats—Congressman Merritt Failed to Obtain a Vote on a Motion Looking to Repeal the Federal Inheritance Tax.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—(AP)—The cordon of republican votes defending the tax bill in the house was pierced today for the second time by a democratic attack that hit directly at large corporations which file affiliated tax returns.

The democrats, by a vote of 158 to 153, put through an amendment which in effect would prohibit parent and subsidiary corporations from filing affiliated tax returns on their earnings. One republican, Gifford of Massachusetts, voted with the democrats.

The proposal, like the one adopted yesterday which would reduce the tax rate for small corporations with a net taxable income of $15,000 or less, is subject to another vote before passage of the bill. At that time the democrats can be called upon to sustain their positions on a roll call vote.

Both of the amendments were sponsored by Representative Garner of Texas, the minority leader on the house ways and means committee, which drafted the revenue measure. He said that one objection raised to the bill adopted yesterday in favor of smaller corporations was that it would increase the total tax cut proposed by the committee. Estimating that today's proposal applying to affiliated returns would affect approximately 950 large corporations, and increase by $24,000,000 annually the federal taxes they pay, he argued this would balance the loss under the other amendment which, he said, would benefit seventy per cent of the corporations in the country.

Chariman Green declared that provisions in the bill applying to affiliated returns had been recommended by the joint congressional committee on internal revenue legislation, and that they were by far the best that could be worked out. He contended that the large corporations, despite Garner's argument, wanted the provisions eliminated and that the Texan really was working for their relief.

Gifford said that the only argument he had heard in favor of retaining the provisions was because they had been recommended by the joint committee and that the house should give careful consideration to such matters before writing them into law.

After the Garner amendment had been adopted, an effort was made by Representative Merritt, republican, Conn., to obtain a vote on a motion looking to repeal of the federal inheritance tax.

A discussion immediately ensued and the house finally agreed to postpone until either late tomorrow or Thursday a vote on the question which has been one of the most controversial entering into present consideration of tax reduction.

The ways and means committee in drafting the bill refused, after two days of public hearings, to accept the treasury recommendation that the levy be repealed, and a number of house members at that time indicated they would seek to bring the question before the house itself for determination.

Merritt argued that the estate levy constituted an infringement by the federal government upon a field of taxation belonging to the states and that the federal levy had been approved only as a wartime expedient.

Chairman Green, who favors retention of the levy, and Representative Begg, republican, Ohio, both contended the tax was not an invasion of states rights.

The house adopted an amendment offered by Green to provide that no claims in abatement on income, war or excess profits taxes should be filed in respect to assessments made after the present bill becomes a law.

PEACE CONFERENCE FOR COAL FIELDS UNDER WAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The absence of the principal coal mine operators in the Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Northern West Virginia bituminous fields, failed to prevent today the progress of a conference of the industry called by the federal government.

Secretary Davis at the labor department welcomed a small group of operators and a contingent of the miners' union, led by John L. Lewis, and at a session behind closed doors undertook to put in motion negotiations for a termination of the prolonged suspension of union mining in that portion of the bituminous region.

In his statement to the joint gathering, Mr. Davis expressed regret that "some operators have found it necessary to decline the invitation to discuss these matters of importance at this meeting." Warning the industry that if public opinion should be aroused, the government would "compel action for the national good, however distasteful that action may temporarily be to the parties immediately affected," he urged those present to "have a free interchange of ideas and a calm consideration of the matter still separating operators and miners."

After his address the secretary, with the aid of Hugh L. Kerwin, and members of the department's conciliation staff, followed the usual methods of mediation, meeting the mine owners present and the officials of the miners' union separately. It was estimated that the operators present represented mines with an annual output of 10,800,000 tons.

MILITARY STILL GUARD THE OKLAHOMA CAPITOL

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 13—(AP)—While the military continued to guard legislative chambers of the state capitol, members of the Oklahoma senate tonight were gathering for the avowed purpose of considering impeachment charges against Governor Henry S. Johnston and two other state officials.

Mac Q. Williamson, named president pro tempore when the senate last week resolved itself into a court of impeachment, notified all members that the senate would meet but the time and place was not designated. Senator Williamson announced that 22 senators, one more than a quorum already were in the city.

Assembling before dawn today at a downtown hotel, the house summarily voted six charges against the chief executive, one of which was based on the mobilization of military power to replace civil authority and prevent his impeachment. Bills of impeachment also were voted against Chief Justice Fred Branson, of the state supreme court and Harry B. Cordel, president of the state board of agriculture.

The impeachment session was called to order at 3:50 a. m. Many of the legislators were attired in pajamas and bathrobes and with only a few chairs in the makeshift chamber, some sat or lay on the floor while the business of the session was conducted.

Leaders emerging from the secret meeting said the allegations were in the hands of a board of managers to be presented the senate.

DEFENSE RESTS IN CASE OF REBECCA BRADLEY ROGERS

LA GRANGE, Texs, Dec. 13.—(AP)—State and defense attorneys in the trial of Rebecca Bradley Rogers, accused bank robber, argued for hours today over the question of whether testimony expected from a prosecution mental expert concerning the family history of Mrs. Rogers could be used to impeach testimony supporting the defense plea of insanity.

After the defense had rested its case, Dr. Joseph Wooten, of Austin, was placed on the stand as a rebuttal witness by District Attorney Fred Blundell. The defense immediately called for a showdown as to how he would testify, and meanwhile the jury was excluded. The court took the question under advisement tonight.

TESTIMONY BY THE SISTER OF MRS. REMUS

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Sister of the slain Imogene Homes Remus, Mrs. Grace Campbell of Miami, Fla., today testified in the murder trial of her brother-in-law, George Remus, former "king of bootleggers," how she had spent nearly two months in a vain effort to bring them to an agreement. She fought bravely to hold back her tears but they came along with great sobs when she told that Remus, in demanding the return of whiskey certificates held by Mrs. Remus, had threatened to divest her of every cent of her fortune and every shred of reputation.

Remus threatened that he would "crack a skull" unless he got back the certificates, which represented so much liquor in warehouses, she said.

Once, Mrs. Campbell testified upon one of her ten visits to Remus while he was a prisoner in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., she had asked him why "my sister cried and was so unhappy and could not sleep at night after seeing him."

"He replied that she did not understand him," testified Mrs. Campbell.

Her testimony was given in a voice so low that probably not more than a dozen persons in the court room, including judge, jury and lawyers, heard all of it.

Her chair was moved from the witness box to a position alongside the jury box, Judge Chester R. Shook then could not hear and he and the court reporterhad to move over an arm's length away.

Mrs. Campbell was said to suffer from heart disease and the lawyers were very gentle with her. On her part she tried valliantly to maintain control of herself and gave way only when quoting directly Remus' remarks to her sister.

CONTRACT CANCELLED BY THE SHIPPING BOARD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The contract of Swayne & Hoyt, a San Francisco company, for operation of the American Australia Orient Line was ordered cancelled today by the shipping board.

At its meetign today, ill's former colleagues adopted a resolution characterizing his action in accepting the loan as a "grave impropriety." They did so despite Hill's contention that the loan never had affected any action on his part while a member of the board.

E. A. CASE TELLS ROTARIANS OF PROPOSED TRADE SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 13—School Superintendent Egbert A. Case gave a concise outline of the proposition of establishing a trade school in Willimantic at the weekly meeting luncheon of the Rotary club held in the Nathan Hale hotel this noon. President Richard E. Dodge was in charge. He announced that next week the program would be in charge of the "prize winners" in a recent Rotary education written examination, with Jerry Sullivan as chairman, assisted by Harvey H. Bronson and Charles R. Pomeroy. At a regular Rotary meeting to be held the evening of January 10, the wives and lady friends of the members will be guests. John F. Ahern, Daniel F. Daley and William S. Lines were appointed a committee to arrange for the music and entertainment. Dancing and cards will follow. In preparation for the eastern Connecticut Rotary attendance contest the first twelve weeks in 1928, President Dodge appointed the following five captains to conduct the attendance locally: Fred L. Avery, Walter S. Barnes, Herbert W. Huber, John Reilly and Frank M. Smith. The club approved the appointment of Secretary Gerard E. Loiselle, Justice George E. Hinman and Valentine L. Murphy as a committee on revision of the by-laws. Raymond A. Parker was authorized to offer the co-operation of the club members to the town school committee in securing an athletic field. A letter of thanks was read by the president from Secretary and Mrs. Loiselle on the beautiful gift presented them on the occasion of their marriage.

The first speaker was Captain Frank P. Fenton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who asked for support in the drive for funds to secure a paid secretary for the chamber. On motion of Dr. R. B. Jones, the members voted their individual support to the project.

School Superintendent Case said that the movement for a trade school was started about five years ago. Local conditions showed a demand for such a school which represents phases of instruction not to be found in the present school system. There is an average of 100 graduates from the high school annually. Of these 15 enter college and 85 enter upon business careers, generally not of an industrial nature. About half of the total average represents pupils residing in Willimantic, the remainder coming from some dozen smaller towns surrounding this city.

The elementary schools turn out about 200 boys and girls annually who enter industry without specific training. By numbers they are the controlling element and their success is vital to the community. The intention of a trade school is to give these young people a chance to develop their capacities to achieve a manual skill of high value, as well as certain requisites of academic training. A survey showed that about 130 boys and girls eligible for a trade school course can be found lingering two or three grades below the average pupil in the elementary schools of the town. Most of these are by tradition productive workers and not productive thinkers. Superintendent Case went on to give facts and figures showing the advantages of having a state-controlled trade school. The town furnishes the building, coal, light, water, power and janitor while the state provides the more expensive services of teachers and supervision. He touched upon the task of securing an appropriation of $50,000 from the last legislature for a trade school here and thanked Representatives A. Linn Weatherhead and Charles B. Pomeroy for their efforts to this end. At the next special town meeting the voters will be asked to take action on a clause asking an appropriation of not over $38,000 to purchase a building for a trade school; $20,000 for the remodification of the building for school purposes and $2,000 for current operating expenses until April 1, 1928, when the management will come under the state.

The school will serve an aggregate population of 18,000 people in what is known as the farming areas and smaller communities about Willimantic. It is expected to open the school with a registration of 125 and plans include preparation to accommodate between 500 and 600 pupils within three or four years. The building which the school committee has in mind for purchase is the four-floor brick plant at the corner of Bank and Valley streets, occupied by the Goyer company. Before closing, Principal Case touched on the necessity of providing an adequate playground at the high school and securing an athletic field, mention being made of purchasing Windham field for this purpose.

The annual meeting of the Windham County Ministers' association was held at the Congregational church here today. Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones, of Mansfield, president, convened the session. The minutes were read by Rev. Mr. Gaylord, of Danielson, secretary-treasurer. Reverends Bowell and Chandler, of Woodstock, and Mr. Lyon, of Thompson, were voted in as members of the association. It was voted to extend an invitation to the New London County association to be guests of the Windham association next October. New officers for 1928 were elected as follows: Rev. W. L. Muttart, of Hampton, president; Rev. George Hawkes, of Abington, secretary-treasurer, and Rev. William Prentice, of Plainfield, as third member of the executive board. The meeting closed with a dinner at the Nathan Hale hotel.

The Willimantic Ministers' union met Monday as guests of the Congregational church and the pastor, Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock. Dinner was served by the ladies of the church. Rev. William L. Muttart, of Hampton, read an excellent 30-minute paper on Shakespeare As a Moral Teacher.

The goal of the local drive to secure a paid secretary for the Chamber of Commerce and provide sufficient working funds has been fixed at a minimum of $7,500. Under the chairmanship of William F. Jordan and Attorney E. Frank Bugbee, meetings of the captains and members of the executive committee are being held to make detail arrangements for the intensive drive which will get under way with a supper at the Nathan Hale hotel Thursday night.

John F. O'Brien, of Franklin, Mass., who has been appointed law assistant in the office of the legislative council to the national house of representatives by Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house, attended the elementary schools of this city and graduated from Windham High school in 1919. He graduated from Clark university in 1923 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts and in 1924 graduated from the University of Iowa with a degree of Master of Arts. This year he graduated from Harvard Law school with the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

Johnson of the Groton barracks as the result of an accident in Mystic, Dec. 10th, when he was in a collision with a car operated by Arthur Webber. The Webber car was badly damaged.

DANIELSON

CHAIN LETTERS ASKS OBSERVANCE OF SAFETY RULES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 13—A chain letter is circulating in Danielson. This one has to do with a "Safety First" campaign. Its headline slogan is "Cross Crossings Cautiously." It contains the resolution to which each recipient is asked to pledge himself that "I have resolved that from now on I will practice Safety First, and do everything in my power to save a life or prevent an accident to my fellow-man."

Like all such communications, this letter bears the impressive admonition "Don't Break the Chain." If you do, it is hinted rather boldly that one will have bad luck. On the other hand, if you keep the chain intact by sending a copy of the communication to nine persons to whom you wish good luck, you also will be treated prettily by Dame Fortune. The chain is said to have been started by an American officer—no further details offered—and should go around the world three times. And that's that contribution to the other time-using proposals of a busy holiday season.

Henry D. Crosby displayed a $5 Federal Reserve bank note today that he regards as a lucky bill, and all because of its number. This particular bill is of the series 1-A, is on the Boston Federal Reserve bank, and is numbered A-7777777-A—count these sevens! Mr. Crosby obtained the bill in the course of some business transaction of the past few days, but has no recollection where or from whom. The bill is practically new, showing hardly any signs of usage. Mr. Crosby regards the bill as a lucky one, and intends to have it framed as a harbinger of good fortune.

The special parking privileges that have been put in force for visitors who come to Danielson in their cars during the holiday season are bringing forth numbers of appreciative comments from those who have come here to trade. The consensus of all the comments is that it is nice to have unrestricted parking, so that one can go about shopping unburdened by worry about one's car. That is the effect that borough officials and the chamber of commerce sought in making the concession, which is working out so well.

The Bulletin has been asked to give publicity to the fact that a resident here desires a list of children of the really needy class this Christmas season, that he may arrange to make the holiday a happy one for them. Names of such children may be submitted in care of The Bulletin, Danielson. The names will be held in strictest confidence. Neither is the name of their would-be benefactor to be divulged. However, other benefactors may share in this good work if they desire. It is intended solely to bring happiness to children whose Christmas might otherwise be dreary and disappointing. The wish has been expressed that names of children may be sent in as quickly as possible. The offer is exclusively in behalf of really needy children.

With the completion of changes now underway, the entire street level frontage of the Exchange block will have been remodeled and modernized since the building passed into the possession of M. H. Berthiaume. What has been done with this building has served to improve the appearance of a central part of Danielson's business section, and is in line with other improvements carried out within the past two years and with others that are to follow during 1928.

From those who ventured onto dirt roads in the hinterlands of Windham county today, driving heavy cars, there came reports that numbers of routes are practically impassable as the result of heavy rains following the freezing period of the past week. On numbers of these back country highways the mud was so deep today that it was practically impossible to get a heavy car over them, though light machines were managing to negotiate a passage.

A special committee of the chamber of commerce having to do with the affairs of merchants and the special merchandising plans for the Christmas season held a meeting tonight to discuss various matters demanding attention at this particular time.

Up to early this evening Guiseppe Lombardi of Providence, who went to jail from the Killingly town court yesterday afternoon because he could not pay a fine of $200 and costs imposed upon him for carrying concealed weapons, was still locked up at Brooklyn. When he was taken over there Monday it was understood that friends of his would promptly come forward with the money to bring about his release. There were 56 prisoners at the county jail tonight, five of them bound over awaiting trial at the January term of the superior court.

Plans that are now formative appear to give assurance that inmates of public institutions, towns and county, hereabouts will have as happy a Christmas day as those who are concerned with the administration of the institutions can arrange. The plans concern holiday dinners and, in some instances, distribution of gifts.

Mrs. W. W. Woodward will during the course of the current week observe the 85th anniversary of her birth. Mrs. Woodward has lived the greater part of her life in Danielson. She retains fairly good health and keeps in intimate touch with all current events. Mrs. Woodward is the mother of Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department and of Judge W. Fenner Woodward of the town court.

Wednesday afternoon of this week members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist Episcopal church are to meet with Mrs. Jennie Humphrey of Furnace street.

Mrs. Harry O. Ware, who has been very critically ill at her home here was reported today as in improved condition.

More court appearances are anticipated on the part of persons who have failed to pay their personal taxes for 1924, 1925 and 1926. A number of such cases recently have been before the Killingly town court.

A. M. Thompson, member of the board, said today that the assessors are well along with their work of compiling the new grand list of the town, a work on which they have been engaged for several weeks.

Sections of state highway fences continued to be knocked down all through this territory in motoring accidents, the replacement cost representing a considerable item in state highway department expenditures.

Borough police are making it a regular practice this season to turn down police station, and as a result are not applicants for a night's lodging at the being bothered as they were before the rule was put into effect.

Local bankers say that the indications are that there will be a greater number of persons than ever before in the 1928 Christmas clubs now being organized. Hundreds of people already have taken out memberships.

Even though the state does develop a new route to relieve the congestion of travel through narrow Reynolds street, part of the Hartford-Providence trunk line through Danielson, residents along that street have said that they

PUTNAM

E. F. KIMBALL RESIGNS AS HEAD OF THOMPSON SCHOOLS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, December 13—The latest resignation in the town of Thompson is that of Elwell F. Kimball, superintendent of the schools in Thompson and principal of the Tourtelotte Memorial high school for the past seven years. The resignation, it is announced will take effect on January 27.

Coming so closely after that of Dyer S. Elliott, former treasurer and clerk of the town of Thompson, the resignation of Mr. Kimball is received with great surprise by the townspeople. The first inkling of the possible lack of harmony between the superintendent and the school board came at the recent town meeting, when John F. Reardon, chairman of the board and who is agent of the Grosvenordale mills, told the voters present at the meeting that the school board was being dictated to by one not in authority and at the conclusion of his talk presented papers which, he said, were from the superintendent of schools and outlined the work of the board at their next meeting.

Mr. Reardon is quoted as saying, "This practice has come to an end," and since then, according to the school board members, the resignation has been tendered and accepted.

In the meantime, auditors hired by the town, are continuing their work of examining the town books and will delve into the accounts of the Tourtelotte fund for the schools, which according to their report had been overdrawn during 1926 and 1927. It was following the audit of these two years, according to the report, that the town treasurer was found to be nearly $11,000 short in his accounts. A complete investigation of the school accounts will be conducted during the audit, it was announced by the school board, who promise further details in the matter within a short time.

In an interview with Mr. Kimball, regarding his resignation, he is quoted as saying that "he agrees with the Chicago superintendent who was quoted as saying, 'the greatest hinderance toward education is the school board.'"

When asked for a reason for his resignation, Mr. Kimball stated that it was principally because he wished to enter a college for study for a few months and then to return to a southern university where he said he holds a professorship and where he had taught during the past several months prior to returning here last September. He said that he had found radical

THE STIMSON APPOINTMENT

With much interest has the appointment of the successor of Governor General Wood in the Philippines been awaited. With due recognition of the high grade service that was performed by General Wood and with full regard for the importance of the post in respect to the good of the islands as well as the responsibilities of this government, it has been appreciated that a strong man was needed, a man who had some knowledge of affairs in the Philippines and one in whom the administration and the country could place the utmost confidence.

In the choice of Henry L. Stimson it is certain that President Coolidge has made a most excellent choice. He was immediately acclaimed as the right man for the place when he was selected to go to Nicaragua as the personal representative of the president for the purpose of bringing about a peaceful settlement in that country. He was especially successful in his undertaking for he was not long in putting a check on the destructive warfare underway and impending.

Mr. Stimson has been frequently mentioned as a desirable successor for General Wood. He is a former secretary of war having served in the cabinet of President Taft so that he has an inside knowledge of Philippine affairs. He will encounter changed conditions and face different problems, but it is known that he has the temperament and the ability to meet them and to give the islands the best possible administration. The islanders could ask for no better appointment.

In the selection of Mr. Stimson, President Coolidge has picked a man of that same high calibre as Ambassador Morrow who has been sent to Mexico. Fresh from his Nicaraguan success, even though the mission is decidedly different, there is good reason for believing that the appointment will get prompt endorsement from the senate and most certainly from the country. He can be relied upon to faithfully represent the administration and in doing that carry out the policies of General Wood which have done so much for the Philippines.

THE SOFT COAL STRIKE

At the solicitation of the bituminous miners, Secretary Davis of the department of labor has gathered in Washington the representatives of the miners and such of the operators as are willing to participate for the purpose of trying to bring about an agreement. The desire is to end the unemployment which has accompanied the coal strike which has been underway since the first of April.

Various coal companies have refused to have any part in the conference. They take the attitude that it is possible for them to get production without dependence upon union miners and they therefore have no reason for participating in a conference which will restore the mine workers to their jobs even though it be under a more favorable agreement than prevailed before. They profess to be satisfied with the situation as it is and consider that inasmuch as the miners went out and refused to negotiate new terms they have no further interest in getting them to return to work.

What result Secretary Davis will get is a question. If the conference is being held soon after the strike started and with the disposition of each side to respect and abide by the facts, it would seem as if there would be a good chance for a new agreement. If, however, there is still a willingness to be governed by provable conditions there's the probability that a new agreement can be effected between the miners and some of the operators.

There was a feeling at the time of the strike that the miners were unfavorably situated to get their demands through force. Their strike has not handicapped the supply. A sufficient number of mines are in operation in the non-union field to meet all requirements. Whatever other mines resume production must do so with full regard for the competition which comes from that source. The effort of the secretary of labor to end the unemployment and to assist in a reorganization of the industry since many of the miners may be forced to look for work in other directions is nevertheless to be commended and encouraged. He is bound to be handicapped, however, when the interest appears to be mostly on one side.

UNCLAIMED ACCOUNTS

What carelessness and the failure to properly surround valuables with due safeguards will do is interestingly shown by the announcement made by the treasurer of Massachusetts, who declared that $71,000 from unclaimed bank accounts will soon be turned into the state's treasury, and the disclosure that during the past 15 years the sizeable sum of $500,000 has been paid over to the state from such a source.

This indicates that the people of our neighboring state are quite as heedless about their bank accounts in many instances as they are elsewhere. Every city has institutions which are complying with the requirement that a list of accounts not claimed for a long period of years must be published. Such publication comes after endeavors have been made to get in touch with the owners of the books or relatives and is for the purpose of getting the aid of publicity.

While it is invariably true that most of such unclaimed accounts are small there are occasionally those, which represent a considerable sum, and just why such accounts should go unclaimed is not always easy to understand. Forgetfulness, old age, reticence about such matters resulting in the failure to find hidden bankbooks by those settling estates and other causes will explain the inability to find anyone to whom accounts should be paid after 30 or 30 years have passed without any additions or withdrawals being recorded.

But with $70,000 being turned into the state treasury of Massachusetts this year because the bankbook owners or relatives of the depositors cannot be located it is indicated that many who could make good use of such sums as they are entitled to are failing to get them because of the failure of somebody to properly recognize the value of the saving accounts and properly protect the passbook. Each year this same situation is disclosed and yet each year reveals the same long list of unclaimed accounts. In view of the need which most people have for money, in small as well as large amounts, it is a bit surprising that any account could remain unclaimed if proper care were used by the owner.

CONNECTICUT'S SENIOR SENATOR

Information from Washington to the effect that Senator McLean would not be a candidate to succeed himself came at the same time that former Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts announced that he would not be a candidate in the next congressional election. The chairman of the republican national committee was defeated in his last try for the senate and now declares that he will not participate in the next election.

There is a difference in regard to these two men in that a statement has been made by one and not by the other. The report concerning Senator McLean is based upon good authority, yet it lacks the effect of a black and white statement from the senator himself. When the proper time comes he will probably be heard from one way or the other, but from the expressions which followed the Washington report there are reasons to believe that there will be much opposition to such a move.

Senator McLean has repeatedly said, in the face of the statements which have been made by President Coolidge concerning his own candidacy, that he thinks the president will run if he is drafted. The senator hasn't said as much as the president, at least not for publication, and it is not improbable that in 1928 as on previous occasions when he has sought to withdraw and give someone else a chance that he can be persuaded to stand for reelection.

Endorsements at other times and expressions now leave no question as to the value which Connecticut places upon his services in Wasington and strong sentiment prevails in the state for the continuance of those services. Connecticut will hardly turn its thoughts to other candidates until something more definite and convincing comes from the senator himself.

THE WILDER CASE

A Connecticut compensation case that has aroused attention not only throughout this commonwealth but has come under careful scrutiny by other states is that which has just been decided by the supreme court of errors of this state. This is the so-called Wilder case which originated in Middletown and in which compensation was sought for a former librarian in the Russell library of that city. It was a case which showed that the woman had committed suicide but following the evidence it was maintained in the decision which was written by Dr. James J. Donohue of this city, then a member of the compensation commission, that the condition which brought about this act was traceable to her employment.

It was an unusual case in the compensation field. It was a case where the suicide added features markedly different from the ordinary case and where a decision either for or against the claim would have resulted in the matter being carried through the highest court. It called for a determination of the scope of the compensation law under those very conditions, even though it does not apply to the ordinary suicide case and is a case which would probably not be encountered by a commissioner on an average of once in a dozen to 15 years.

Its unusual features are what have attached such deep interest to it, to the compensation laws of this state, and to the supreme court decision which has now sustained the finding of the commissioner.

HER RETURN HOME

Sidney Rushton felt very much out of place and therefore very much annoyed. Nothing more disagreeable could have happened, she thought, than that she should have missed the express at Haverleigh and been obliged to take the old local with its jolting bumpers, uncomfortable seats and dingy lights. But there was no other train before midnight and she was eager to reach home as soon as possible. Even a few hours might make a great change in her father's condition.

In the smudgy panel mirror beside her seat she saw herself slender, fashionable, haughtily self-conscious, sitting erect lest she soil her expensive coat by contact with the worn plush.

Twenty years before Sidney Marsh had married Scott Rushton and slipped out of the old environment as she believed forever. But, one thing prevented her doing so—her father insisted on staying in Hillville. Even though Sidney was able to keep him with her for weeks at a time he always went back to the old place. Latterly he had stayed there more than ever, and now he had fallen sick there. For the first time Sidney was compelled to go back to the old home town for which she had developed a strong distaste as her husband's fortunes lifted her into an important new sphere.

She was resolved now to renew no acquaintances, connect no broken threads. If her father died she would be done with Hillville anyway, and if he grew better she meant to take him home with her.

At this point she was conscious of a hand laid on the back of her seat, and she looked up into a plain, kindly face that recalled old memories.

"I've been trying to make out it was you ever since we left Haverleigh," the woman said, holding out her hand in a gray cotton glove. "How do you do, Sidney? I'm glad to see you are going home to look after your father. He certainly needs you."

Sidney with a flush had accepted the cotton-gloved hand, trying to murmur something inconsequential but appropriate. She was further annoyed when the woman, without by your leave, slipped into the seat beside her.

"You haven't changed much in 20 years, Sidney," she went on coolly. "But you've grown to look more like your father as you get older. He is a splendid man. We are all going to miss him if anything happens to him. But Mrs. Cotton has been wonderful to him."

Sidney bit her lip. She didn't react favorably to this frank familiarity. Why not in the world was it that she could not have entered Hillville without running across Mary Andrews?

"I suppose you still are teaching?" she commented.

"Yes," Mary laughed a little. "Yes I've been teaching all these 20 years you have been away and married. And I like it yet. I'm in the Haverleigh High school, have been for four years. I go home Friday night—I call Mrs. Cotton's home."

So she lived at Mrs. Cotton's. There was no getting away from her then Sidney became silent.

"Your children must be about the age of my high school boys and girls?" pursued Mary.

"Roland is 19 and in Harvard. Julia, who is 17, is at a finishing school on the Hudson."

They were going down the grade into Hillville now, and the rattling and bouncing made conversation almost impossible. Presently the train stopped with a bump before the dim little station.

"There won't be anybody to meet this train," Mary Andrews said. "And it is a good ways to walk. I'm afraid it is going to be icy, too, with this sleet falling."

It was icy and Sidney, on her high heels, with only sandals to protect her feet, slid about terrifically. Mary, however, strode along confidently. When presently her feet began to go out from under her she was saved from a fall by Mary's steadying hand.

"Better take my arm," Mary said dryly, "Lucy Mack broke her arm here last week."

Lucy Mack! Another familiar name, Sidney sighed and grasped Mary's firm, muscular arm.

As a girl she had depended a good deal on Mary's hard-headed common sense, and now seemed to be doing it again in spite of herself.

It was a long troublesome walk and Sidney was extremely tired by the time they had reached Mrs. Cotton's. Mrs. Cotton met them in the hall; it was she who had sent the telegram to Sidney.

"Dad's just the same," she said. She called him dad as if he belonged to her.

Mary gave a look at Sidney's face. "I'm going up with you," she said. In the difficult half-hour that followed Sidney was very glad of Mary's calm, unemotional leadership. As they came down stairs Mary said:

"Hope you've come prepared to stay a couple of weeks Sidney."

"That long?" Sidney gasped.

Mary nodded.

"Or longer. He's comfortable, you know, but he'll have to wear out. It is all the same to him anyway, he is so old. But it is going to be hard on you, my dear. Still, I'm here, remember that, Sid."

Sidney choked. Suddenly she realized that out of all the world Mary was the only one there to whom she could look for understanding and sympathy. Her husband! He was intent on big money. Her son? Training for a B. A. Her daughter, planning for her week-end at a chum's home. Her father? Slipping like a wafted thistledown out of the world. No, there was nobody but Mary, sturdy, kind, generous Mary whom she had once made use of, then had felt she needed no longer. Tears filled her eyes. She put her arm about the comfortable figure and leaned upon it slightly.

Mary's plain face flushed a little and in surprise her eyes sought Sidney's. But she added merely:

"Lean on me all you want to, Sid—lean hard."

"I shall—but, oh, I don't deserve that you should let me," Sidney whispered contritely.——Detroit News.

YOUR HEALTH

LENGTHENS SPAN OF LIFE.

By Preston Hunt, M. D.,

Member Gorgas Memorial.

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as part of its Better Health and Longer Life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the Memorial, which has been organized and endowed by prominent doctors and laymen throughout the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.)

Thirty or forty years ago, the average American lived less than thirty-five summers. About twenty-five years ago a few of our leading physicians found, through scientific investigation, that it was possible to lengthen the lives of our people by either mitigating or preventing life-destroying and health-impairing diseases. The knowledge that had been acquired by the few advanced thinkers was so well disseminated throughout the entire profession during the next eight or ten years that practically every family physician was better qualified and equipped to save life than at any previous time in history and the profession came gradually to know that its members had no moral right to withhold this valuable and beneficent knowledge from the world.

Up to the present time science has already added to the average human existence more than one decade, but this is not enough, for there is yet within our reach an additional five to twenty years. Realizing this possibility, some ten or fifteen years ago the medical profession developed a conscience which impelled its members to thrust aside their former reticence and venture forth on an educational campaign. They knew that if they could acquaint the whole public with these pleasant truths it would be easier to secure the co-operation of the laity in this direction.

It has been proven beyond question that, with the co-operation of the public in general and the parents in particular, many diseases producing either death or serious disability can be avoided. This truism is so thoroughly established and grounded that it seems almost foolish to reiterate the statement, but there are still a great many intelligent parents and people who mentally resent and sometimes openly oppose and retard the application of scientific methods in life-saving and health-saving efforts. Some of our citizens still criticize the profession for disseminating health propaganda.

It is reasonable to presume, and, I think, an indisputable fact that the public is now in possession of adequate knowledge of health questions for practicable and workable guidance and without doubt or hesitation it not only behooves the people to committing an injustice to themselves, their children, their neighbors, their community, and humanity in general if they fail to exercise their privilege in protecting people from disastrous diseases. Heads of families and orphanages, guardians, or anyone responsible for the welfare of others can no longer escape this responsibility by pleading ignorance.

One may even say that the man or woman who allows a dependent to fall sick or die from a preventable disease is as guilty of taking health or life as is the careless or reckless motorist who injures or destroys a human being upon the public highway.

Neither can they longer plead financial inability, as every well-regulated community has a health department where the poor may have every advantage of protection against disease. Responsibility for unnecessary loss of health or life in avoidable disease rests upon the people, for the medical profession stands not only ready and willing but anxious to help in this fight for the prolongation of lives. Talk the matter over with your family physician. He will gladly show you the way to preserve health and life.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Craft of Terror the Goshawk

That which is difficult to gain
A little craft will oft obtain.
—Terror the Goshawk.

Of all the bold, fearless birds of the air Terror the Goshawk is one of the most bold and most fearless. What he wants he usually seizes, regardless of consequences. But there are times when he cannot seize what he wants and all the boldness in the world is of no avail. It is then that he employs craft.

Ever since he had come down from the Far North to the Green Forest Terror had been trying to catch Mr. and Mrs. Grouse. Time after time he had just missed them. Twice he had actually pulled feathers from Mr. Grouse. But each time that he had thought he had one of them they had escaped.

It had come to be now that Mr. and Mrs. Grouse seldom took to their stout wings. They remained on the ground, running from one hiding place to another. Terror wanted them in the air. Swift as are their wings, his wings are swifter. Now that they had taken to skulking from cover to cover, seldom even going up in a tree, Terror was having more difficulty. If only he could make them fly his chances would be much better.

He was thinking of this as he glared down at a certain big hemlock bough, under which he knew that Mr. and Mrs. Grouse were hiding. It was of no use for him to hurl himself down at that bough. He knew that. He knew, too, that they knew that he was watching them. He knew that this meant that they would remain right where they were for the remainder of the day if necessary. If only Reddy Fox would come along he would drive them out. And then a sudden thought popped right into Terror's head.

"Why shouldn't I drive them out myself?" he muttered. "I will! I'll make them get out from under that bough and then perhaps I'll have a chance to catch one of them."

It was then that Terror glided down to the snow, landing close beside that bough under which Mr. and Mrs. Grouse were hiding. He would simply walk right in under there and either catch them there or make them fly. At least, that was what he planned.

At first he saw nothing.

Of course, Mr. and Mrs. Grouse saw him coming. They saw him when he left the tree and came sliding down. They didn't know what to make of it. Their hearts were in their throats. They crouched as far back under the bough as they could get. Perhaps he didn't really know they were there. Perhaps he was just suspicious. They knew it would be a dangerous thing to fly. They wouldn't move until it was absolutely necessary.

Terror poked his head under the bough. At first he saw nothing. You see, the brown coats of Mr. and Mrs. Grouse were so near the color of the brown leaves from which that bough had kept the snow that they were very difficult to see. Had they moved the least bit Terror would have seen them. As it was, he blinked once or twice, then began to crowd his way underneath. There was nothing now for Mr. and Mrs. Grouse to do but to get out and get out in a hurry. And they did. Yes, indeed, they got out in a great hurry. And out after them came Terror the Goshawk. The moment he saw them start he said to himself: "This is the time I'll get at least one." And inside he chuckled fiercely.

The Gift of a Gulbransen
Is Something to Look Forward to —and Back to! Make This a Memorable Christmas.

How many homes there are where the Gulbransen actually arouses a new interest in life!

Evenings have grown rather dull; all the family feel the lack of entertainment, of attraction. Brother Bill and Sister Ann seem anxious to hurry to the "movie" down the street directly after dinner, or, that being impossible, over to the neighbor's. WHERE THERE IS MUSIC.

What easy work St. Nicholas would have if he had to choose presents for such homes only!

For, the one gift filling every requirement—satisfying all, Dad, Mother, and the children, yes, and Grand-Dad and Grandma, too—is the Gulbransen.

Why, the mere thought sets the imagination going; the mere suggestion of a Gulbransen to make the evenings cheery, to entertain friends, to draw the family together.

And in after years—when the Gulbransen has endeared itself to everyone—Christmas, 1927, will be looked back to as THE Christmas.

That Christmas Gulbransen is at our store—in just the style and finish you prefer.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS SUICIDE DEATH AWARD

The supreme court of errors upholds the award of compensation to the mother of the late Miss Edna A. Wilder, formerly librarian of the Russell library of Middletown, from which the Travelers Insurance company appealed on the ground that the death, suicide, was by the young woman's voluntary act.

The supreme court in an opinion handed down at Bridgeport Monday by Justice William M. Maltbie, agrees with Commissioner James J. Donohue of the second district that the "worry and anxiety and excessive nervous and mental activity" which Miss Wilder underwent in her work as librarian were "all contributing factors in the ultimate mental breakdown of the decedent and must be traceable to her employment." The commissioner's finding originally was upheld by Judge Newell Jennings in the superior court.

According to the award the library's insurers must pay all reasonable medical, surgical and hospital bills for the four and a half months preceding Miss Wilder's suicide, funeral expenses and $5,716 in 312 weeks.

MANAGER ENGAGED FOR NORWICH PROGRESS EXPOSITION NEXT SPRING

Sheldon H. Fairbanks, manager of the Boston and Providence Radio Shows, has been engaged by the local chamber of commerce to conduct a Progress Exposition here some time during the spring.

Mr. Fairbanks was formerly assistant, editotr of the "Cleveland Daily News" and later became publicity manager of the Boston chamber of commerce. In this latter position, he was called upon to manage one or two shows which were so successfully handled that the demands increased upon his time. Accordingly, during the last two or three years he has given himself exclusively to exposition work. He recently concluded a very successful Pageant of Progress in Haverhill, Mass., which was attended by between 9,000 and 10,000 people. The secretary of the Haverhill chamber, in speaking of Mr. Fairbanks' work there, states: "We were exceedingly fortunate in having the services of an expert like Mr. Fairbanks to steer us awayfrom the rocks. We leaned on him heavily and followed his advice and the result was that in the opinion of other experts who were present, we had one of the best set-up shows ever held in Nw England."

Under the plan adopted for the Norwich exposition, Mr. Fairbanks will furnish entertainment similar to the program in Haverhill, which included the Silver Mask Tenor, Bob Emery and His Joy Spreaders, the Ray-o-Vac Twins and several other popular radio stars. The show is designed to run for three days. A style show is included in the program. A total of approximately 60 booths will be set up for the exhibit which is designed to help Norwich citizens obtain a more complete understanding of their community and its porducts.

The board of directors authorized the publicity committee to arrange for dates and to secure the acceptance of a general chairman to head up the exposition. Max Hanover is chairman of the publicity committee.

FINDS GAUTHIER FREE FROM CRIMINAL LIABILITY

Anderson L. Gauthier, who is under $2,000 bonds from the Griswold town court on a manslaughter charge for the death of Mrs. Florence Hindon, is freed of criminal liability for the woman's death, according to a finding given Tuesday by Coroner J. J. Desmond. Mrs. Hindon was killed when she was struck by the automobile driven by Gauthier.

In his finding, Coroner Desmond says:

On Nov. 6, 1927, Anderson L. Gauthier was operating his auto eastwardly on the road leading from Jewett City to Voluntown; this automobile was a Maxwell touring car, and in it with Gauthier were Clarence A. Gaudette, of Voluptown, Francis J. Burton, of Glasgo, and Emy Lemoine, of Griswold. At, or about 5 o'clock in the evening of that day, and on their trip, when Mr. Gauthier was driving down "Popple Hill," so called, near Voluntown, but in the town of Griswold, and travelling towards Voluntown village, he observed another automobile parked on the northerly side of the road, headed toward Jewett City; he turned to his left, to pass this parked car, going at about 25 miles an hour, and as he was passing this stopped car, the decedent stepped out from behind it and directly into the path of the Gauthier automobile, and was struck by the forward end of the Gauthier car, which knocked her down, and fatally injured her. Gauthier had the headlights of his car burning, but did not see Mrs. Hindon until she came from behind the parked car and was within a few feet of the front of his car, and it was impossible for him to prevent his automobile from striking her.

Gauthier stopped his car within a short distance of the point where it struck Mrs. Hindon, went back to where she lay on the roadside, and then drove to Dr. Herbert T. Thurber's home in Voluntown, where one of the passengers in the Gauthier car told Dr. Thurber that there was a woman lying on the road on Popple Hill, and asked Dr. Thurber to go. The doctor immediately got into Gauthier's car and was driven by Gauthier, with his three companions back to the place of the accident, where he found the dead body of Mrs. Hindon lying on the southerly side of the road, near a barway. Notice of the accident was promptly given to Dr. George H. Jennings, medical examiner of Jewett City, and to Deputy Sheriff John T. Dolan, also of Jewett City.

The evidence in this case fails to disclose any criminal carelessness on the part of Anderson L. Gauthier and indicates that the death of Mrs. Hindon resulted from her sudden stepping from behind the parked car, and practically in front of the Gauthier automobile when it was too near her to avoid running her down. This lamentable fatality is another of the many instances that show the need, under present conditions of road travel, of the exercise of vigilance by the pedestrian in making sure that no approaching motor vehicle is near, before adventuring to cross the road.

I am satisfied, and find that the death of said Florence Hindon was not caused by the criminal action, omission, or negligence of any other person or persons.

FEW LIGHTS WORSE THAN NONE DECLARES STOECKEL

An unlighted country highway is better than a partly lighted one, Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel of the state motor vehicle department said Tuesday.

Reflected lights on the windows of automobiles are very dangerous and inasmuch as the majority of people today drive closed cars, streets which have an occasional lamp are much more liable to be scenes of accidents, he said. If there are many lights, a driver is aware of the hazard, and compensates for the added number of reflections. On the country highway, Commissioner Stoeckel asserted, the driver is not on the lookout and is often fooled by lights from an unexpected angle.

It is far better not to have any lights on a country road, he said, than to create this situation. If there are to be any lamps, there should be a sufficient number to completely illuminate the highway.

This opinion was given in a letter to the Michigan Mutual Liability company in reply to a message from W. J. Graves, of Detroit, consulting engineer of that company, regarding lighting conditions in Detroit. Mr. Graves' letter, which praised the commissioner for a bulletin issued Dec. 5 on the relation of mental conditions to auto accidents, added that Detroit was "thrice blessed" with well-lighted streets.

Nolle On Reckless Driving Charge.

A nolle was entered in the case against Zygmut Sajkowicz, charged with reckless driving, when he was presented in the city court Monday morning. The case had been continued three times since his arrest November 15th and the court decided that the case was a civil matter rather than a case to be decided in the city court. Sajkowicz was arrested after his machine struck and injured William Mitchell of No. 669 Main street, near the car barn on Central avenue. Investigation showed that the accused was not guilty of any criminal negligence.

ZONING BOARD GRANTS APPEAL BY MALMER

The joint zoning board of the city and town of Norwich met Tuesday morning at the office of Mayor Waters to hear the appeal by Otto Mulmer from a decision of the board of selectmen in refusing him permission to erect a private garage on his property on Laurel hill road. At the hearing it developed that the foundation for the garage has already been laid.

There was no opposition against the granting of the petition and circumstances in the case caused the board by an unanimous vote to grant the appeal so that Mr. Malmer can complete the garage. Mr. Malmer had completed the foundation for the garage when Selectman William S. Murray informed him that he was violating the zoning ordinance and the work was halted immediately.

It was found that Mr. Malmer was building the garage within three feet of the adjoining property line, while the zoning ordinance specifies a distance of five feet. The board in granting the appeal stated that they wished to make it clear that they were not establishing a precedent. Every case that comes before the board must stand on its own merits, the board announced.

EAST SIDE CHILDREN TO SEE SANTA CLAUS

Boys and girls of the East Side section are to have their annual visit from Santa Claus on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 18, under arrangements made by the Duwell club, which announces that Manager Fink of the Palace theatre has solved the problem of where to accommodate the 1,000 or more children by generously offering the use of the theatre for that afternoon.

The roomy stage of the theatre and the seating accommodations for about 1,200 will make an ideal place for the Christmas party, for which Manager Fink has promised to give all the assistance within his power.

As in the past all the school children of the East Side, whether attending the public or parochial schools, together with any children of Duwell members, non-residents of the East Side are invited to the party. Any children under the school age are invited to give their names to members of the Duwell club so that they may be taken care of.

Although the committee in charge, consisting of George Gross, chairman, Walter Corrigan, John Williamson, Peter Barber, William Shanley and James Pedace has not as yet drawn up a definite program, it is expected that practically the same ideas as were carried out in the past will again be adopted. It wouldn't be a Christmas party if Santa Claus wasn't in attendance, so of course, he will be invited to attend. And again there wouldn't be much use of his coming if there wasn't a Christmas tree, so naturally it will be necessary to have a tree, gaily trimmed and loaded with good things.

A varied program of entertainment adapted for children will be presented, and music for the affair will be furnished by the Palace orchestra. The final episode of the party, Santa's entrance via the chimney, and the distribution of good things, as usual, will be played up bigger and better than ever.

Attorney Josiah Greenstein acted as chairman of the organization meeting, which was attended by Mr. Schiller, who explained his plans to build a club house and lay out a nine-hole golf course, provide handball and tennis courts and a baseball diamond as well as a swimming pool.

The golf club will have special quarters in the club house, where there are to be showers and lockers and the entire accommodations will be ready for the opening of the season in the spring.

Mr. Schiller stated that Massie Miller, professional at the Norwich Golf club, had visited the site for the course and had declared that it had remarkable natural advantages for a nine-hole course, dwelling particularly upon the fairways which are in splendid condition even in their natural state without ever having been rolled.

A meeting of the officers is to be held shortly to formulate by-laws. Those attending the meeting were full of enthusiasm over the opportunity offered for enjoyment through the facilities that will be provided by the club and it is anticipated that there will be a large membership list secured.

MAJOR LEAGUE CLUBS STRENGTHEN THROUGH SEVERAL PLAYER TRADES

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—(AP)—Two of the biggest baseball deals of the winter were completed today in as busy a trade market as has ever marked the opening of the winter major league gathering.

While magnates went into a "huddle" behind closed doors, brisk negotiations in the hotel corridors developed these two outstanding transactions:

1—Exchange of Lu Blue, first baseman, and Harry Manush, outfielder, of the Detroit Tigers for Harry Rice, outfielder, and Elam Van Gilder, pitcher, of St. Louis Browns, along with a third player to be tossed into the bargain later by the Browns.

2—Another five-player transfer by which the St. Louis Cardinals obtained shortstop Jimmy Cooney, outfielder Johnny Mokan and catcher Clarence Jonnard from the Phillies in exchange for catcher John Schulte and pitcher Jimmy Ring.

Both deals were declared to be devoid of cash consideration.

Speculation focused on the identity of the third player the Browns are to send to Detroit, but it seemed fairly certain, despite reports to the contrary, that it would not be George Sisler, famous first sacker.

Sisler is still one of the principal prize packages on the market and his departure from St. Louis is regarded as a certainty in view of the acquisition of Blue, unless the latter is to be involved in another trade. Detroit, however, has Johnny Neun available for duty at the initial bag.

Washington, the Athletics, and the White Sox all were reported angling for Sisler, with the Senators most likely to obtain him. Bucky Harris, Washington's young pilot, was noncommittal on the subject, except to say that he was interested in any advantageous proposal.

Volunteer bargainers suggested that the Detroit-St. Louis deal might turn out to be three-cornered, with the Senators getting Sisler and passing him along to the Tigers for Johnny Neun, plus some other consideration. The general belief was however, that any club getting Sisler would likely keep him.

In parting with Blue and Manush, the Tigers lost two men who have been big cogs in the Detroit machine for years. Manush was the leading batter of the American league in 1926 but had a struggle to keep around the .300 mark last season. Blue's stick work also dropped off.

In completing their first big deal as pilots of their clubs, Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cardinals was considered to have gained a slight "edge" over Burt Shotton, new Philadelphia manager.

Ring, who figured in the famous Hornsby-Frisch trade last winter, goes back to the Phillies after a two year absence during which he has been badly off form. He was the mainstay of the Phillie staff before he left, however, and Shotton believes he is due for a comeback. There seems little to choose in the swapping of catchers, Schulte and Jonnard, but the Cardinals got a useful outfielder in Mokan and a good utility outfielder in Cooney. Already well equipped with pitchers, the Cards considered they could well afford to let Ring go.

Brooklyn has obtained four youngsters for tryouts next spring. They include Hugh Wise, former captain and catcher of the Purdue university team; C. B. Danforth and J. Robinson, two semi-pro recruits from Dallas, Texas; and Glenn Ropp, pitching product of the Pennsylvania independent ball fields.

HUGH DUFFY SIGNED AS COACH AT BOSTON COLLEGE

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Hugh Duffy, one of professional baseball's best known figures as player, manager, coach and scout, has been signed as baseball coach at Boston college for 1928, Graduate Manager Frank Reynold announced today.

The acquisition of Duffy at University Heights as baseball mentor reverses the procedure which left the position vacant this fall when Jack Slattery resigned to become manager of the Boston Braves. Duffy comes to B. C. after four years as scout for Boston Red Sox, a team he helped establish in 1909. College coaching is not a new role for him, however, as he guided Harvard's baseball destinies for several years before joining the Red Sox coaching staff.

MAYOR TOWER TO BE GUEST OF MAYOR WALKER

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Mayor John B. Tower of New Haven, Conn., has accepted an invitation from Mayor James J. Walker of New York to attend the intercity amateur boxing tournament at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. Mayor Walker also extended invitations to the mayors of Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Boston, which will be represented in a five-cornered tournament, but they were unable to accept. Mayor Tower will accompany a New Haven delegation to cheer its two competitors, Johnny De Rosa, featherweight, and Eddie Lynn, welterweight.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLAYED TO RECORD ATTENDANCE IN 1927

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The National league got only did a record-breaking business in 1927, eclipsing all previous attendance figures, but smashed two other marks for good measure by using more baseballs and postponing more games than ever before.

Handling an assortment of figures with the skill of a veteran statistician, President John Heydler advised the club owners, at the first session of their annual meeting, that the year's attendance had exceeded 5,300,000, that 36 big games had been postponed and that 51,996 baseballs tossed out by the umpires.

The attendance, barometer of prosperity, passed the 5,000,000 mark for the first time. Chicago, for the second straight year, led in home-game attendance exceeding 1,000,000 but the New York Giants played before the greatest total attendance, nearly 2,000,000 for games at home and away. The Giants played to bigger crowds on enemy fields than they did at home, drawing well over 1,000,000 spectators while on the road.

The clubs showing increased home attendance, in the order of their gains, were Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia. Attendance dropped off slightly in Boston and Brooklyn but to a marked degree in Cincinnati.

The club owners approved continuance of the three-umpire system at all games for 1928, voted an honorary life membership in the league to August Herrmann, former Cincinnati president, in recognition of his long services in the game, and decided to dedicate baseball's memorial to Christy Mathewson at Bucknell university, Lewisburg, Pa., next June 3 or 4. This memorial will take the form of a gateway to the athletic stadium.

The new board of directors, unanimously elected, is composed of Charles A. Stoneham of New York, Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburgh, William L. Veeck of Chicago and Emil E. Fuchs of Boston.

The American league, holding a special meeting preliminary to the annual session tomorrow, formally approved the recent sale of the Cleveland club, and welcomed the new president, Alva Bradley.

Mr. Bradley was accompanied to the meeting by his general manager, Billy Evans, and the Indians' new playing manager, Roger Peckinpaugh.

The only other business before the meeting was a discussion of what action the league will take on the proposed amendments to the major and major-minor league agreement. They are up for action at the joint sessions of the American and National leagues Thursday.

MEEHAN EXPECTED TO REMAIN AS N. Y. U. COACH

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The New York American will say tomorrow that the resignation of Joe Schwartzer, assistant football coach at New York university, probably means that John F. "Chick" Meehan has already signed his contract for 1928 as head coach of the Violet grid forces. Meehan announced sometime ago that he did not intend to return to N. Y. U., because of "circumstances" arising after the close of the past season.

The paper says that Schwartzer handed his resignation to Meehan last Thursday "to make the way clear for the return of the head coach without causing embarrassment in any quarter." Chick's new contract, the American says, is for three years at $15,000 a season.

Meehan, under whose leadership the Violets have sprung close to the top of the eastern football heap and have lost but four games in three years, made three demands of the N. Y. U. board of athletic control at a recent meeting. The paper lists them as follows: "A voice in the scheduling of games; better co-operation from the authorities and the right to consultation in matters pertaining to football; higher salary and the right to name his coaching staff."

N. Y. COMMISSION REFUSES TO POSTPONE MORGAN-GLICK BOUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The New York state athletic commission today refused a request of Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champion, that his title bout with Joe Glick, Brooklyn buttonhole maker, be postponed owing to a cut lip received in training. After examination by commission doctors, the Seattle, Wash., boy was ordered to go through with the 15 round match scheduled for Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Morgan suffered the gash today in a bout with a sparring partner and fear that the injury might impair his fighting ability caused him to appeal immediately to the commission. Examination showed, however, that the cut probably would heal before engagement time.

The show will climax a record week in indoor boxing here. A champion in the flyweight division will be crowned in the semi-final on the Morgan-Glick card when Corporal Izzy Schwartz, a furious little army warrior, tackles Newsbow Brown, of Sioux City, Ia. The winner will be recognized by the New York boxing commission as the successor to Fidel La Barba, California champion, who withdrew from the ring to attend college.

Last night, the light heavyweight muddle caused by Jack Delaney's retirement was clarified when Tommy Loughran, nominee of the local commission, defeated Jimmy Slattery, champion of the National Boxing association, for general recognition as the 175 pound title holder.

LOUGHRAN READY TO MEET ANY AND ALL COMERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The promise of Tommy Loughran made that he would fight "twelve times in 19 months if possible" when he came into undisputed possession of the world light heavyweight title seemed on the way to partial fulfillment today.

The husky young Philadelphian recognized for months as the 175 pound king of the New York state athletic commission, whipped Jimmy Slattery crowned title holder by the National Boxing association, only last night but this afternoon he was ready to make good his promise.

"Just one week's rest," he said, "and I shall start training for my first real title defense against Leo Lomski in Madison Square Garden, January 6. Then I want another match with Slattery as quickly as it can be arranged. Anyone else who aspires to the title has only to come forward and ask for a chance to fight and I'll accommodate them."

The New York commission revealed today that the decision giving its standard bearer the championship was not unanimous. Although Judges Tom Flynn and Charles Mathison voted for the Philadelphia adonis, Lou Magnolia, third man in the ring, voted the match a draw.

Although no figures were disclosed both Loughran and Slattery were believed to have received approximately $16,000 apiece for their efforts.

CRONIN HAS FOOTBALL AUTOGRAPHED BY RED GRANGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 13.—Jack Cronin of Putnam has returned to his home in the Sawyer District, after ending the season as a professional football player with the Steam Rollers of Providence. Cronin will be remembered as the star half-back on the Boston college team of two seasons ago. The Steam Rollers have had a very successful season this year and closed by defeating Red Grange's New York Yankees. In this game Cronin distinguished himself by making a fifty yard run for a touchdown. Among the many trophies he brought home with him is a football, on which is written the following words, "You're a better man than I am."

Jewett City Loses Game

Barthelet's All Star soccer team of Jewett City received a setback Sunday afternoon by a score of 5 to 0. Cottrell's A. F. C. of Westerly, played a wonderful game despite a stiff opposition having the ball continually around their goal.

L. Barthelet, goal tender for Jewett City, was nearly swamped at one time during the second half, the Westerly team scored the whole five goals during that period. The Jewett City boys were hardly able to get started because of loose playing, the ball was always in their territory.

The second game of the series between these two teams will be played at Westerly, Saturday, Dec. 17th. The lineups are

AGGIES ORGANIZE FIRST VARSITY HOCKEY TEAM

STORRS, Conn., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Staunch school spirit on the part of a small group of undergraduates at the Connecticut Agricultural college brought about the organization of the Aggies' first varsity hockey team, it was announced today.

Although the athletic association budget for the year had included plans for inauguration of hockey with the construction of a rink and purchase of suits and equipment for players, heavy expenses incurred in the construction of new athletic fields called for drastic cuts in the program and hockey plans were abandoned. Upon announcement of this, 20 students interested in hockey called a conference. They voted to bear the incidental expenses necessary to put a team on the ice and secured the services of Sumner A. Dole of the department of physical education, as coach. Although slated to coach the girls basketball team, readily agreed to coach and assist in the launching of the first Aggie hockey team.

No extensive outside schedule will be attempted this year. An attempt will be made to schedule games with Springfield, Vt., Norwich, and Middlebury, all games to be played away from home as a suitable rink is lacking here.

CONN. WOMEN'S GOLF BODY HOLDS SPECIAL MEETING

CHESHIRE, Conn., Dec. 13.—(AP)—The Connecticut State Women's Golf team will meet the Massachusetts team in the annual inter-state matches the second week of October it was decided at the special meeting of the executive committee here today. Tentative dates for the open day tournaments and the awarding of the state championship tournament to the Farmington club for the first week in June included other business transacted by the committee, Mrs. Russell Fenn, of New Haven, president, said.

The committee also decided to hold team matches on open days instead of playing a regular schedule, it was announced.

Open day tournaments will be played each month, starting in May when two will be scheduled. Two tournaments will also be scheduled in June and September, while July, August and October will have one each. The scene of these tournaments will be announced late next month.

SHARKEY WILL GO THROUGH WITH HEENEY

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight title contender, is "going through" with his scheduled bout against Tom Heeney in Madison Square Garden on January 13 and has no idea of seeking a further postponement on the plea of weak hands.

Reports from New York that Sharkey might use a two months' old injury to his left hand as a means of cancelling his appearance against Heeney and entering the role of emergency opponent for Gene Tunney, should Jack Dempsey's rumored retirement from the ring become an established fact, were exploded today by Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, with the announcement that the Boston boxer has begun training for the Heeney match.

A. A. U. GIVES REASONS FOR REFUSAL OF SANCTION TO THE PASTIME CLUB

Why the Pastime A. C. was refused an A. A. U. sanction is shown in the following letter of refusal from Mark F. Dunn, member of the board of registration of the Conn. Association of the A. A. U. The letter asking for sanction follows with Mr. Dunn's letter:

December 6th, 1927.

Mr. Mark F. Dunn, Commissioner,
Asso. of A. A. U.,
Board of Registration,
595 Main St., Middletown Conn.

Dear Sir: Please find enclosed our check for $15.00 applying for sanction to run an amateur show on December 16th, at Olympic hall, this city, under the name of the Pastime Athletic club.

We have the books of rules which shows us some of our mistakes. These will be corrected at our next show, such as seeing that only boys who have been registered will be used. In connection with this matter, I wish to state that my understanding of this particular thing was, when I talked with you in Middletown, that you or a representative of the A. A. U., would be on hand to register these boys for us. Every boy who fought on our card was willing to be registered, so in the future, we will guarantee on our card only boys who are registered with the A. A. U. With reference to out of town boys, we will not use any boys from Rhode Island. Also find that one inch padding is needed for the ring, this has been taken care of now. We will be glad to have you advise us if there is any further information regarding mistakes which you might have noticed on your visit here. We intend to stick to the A. A. U. rules and hope that you will be here to witness our next show.

Trusting that we may receive this sanction in due time, we are

Very truly yours,
THE PASTIME ATHLETIC CLUB.

Mr. Dunn's Letter.

Mr. John T. F. Burns,
P. O. Box 314,
Norwich, Conn.

Dec. 7, 1927

Dear Sir: It is impossible for me to grant a sanction for a boxing show in Norwich on Dec. 16th, for several reasons.

The situation is this: On reviewing the entire matter at a registration board meeting the board has the following major objections to such a sanction: First, there is no evidence so far obtained that there is a Pastime A. C. in existence in Norwich; second, Mr. Quinn admitted running a boxing show without sanction while fully aware that it was contrary to A. A. U. rules; third, that your matchmaker admitted that he also acts as a professional matchmaker. These are three very strong reasons why the board feels it could not issue a sanction. In addition there is the objection that no one connected with your organization is familiar enough with amateur regulations to conduct A. A. U. meets of any sort which is probably the reason for minor violations, too many to mention.

I am accordingly returning your check for ($15.00) fifteen dollars.

Regretting that I am unable to write you a more favorable letter I am,

Very truly yours,
MARK F. DUNN,
Board of Registration,
Conn. Assoc. of A. A. U.

In looking over Mr. Dunn's letter it would seem from the reasons given for refusal that the board of registration did not possess the full facts or had been misinformed.

The first reason given is that he is not aware that there is a Pastime A. C. in existence. The Pastime A. C. was organized 10 or 12 years ago and flourished for a time and then about three years ago was revived in Greeneville. At the present time the club has a membership of about 60 and has a gymnasium in the old Vaughn building on Ferry street.

The second reason for refusal is that Mr. Quinn ran a show without the sanction of the A. A. U., which was contrary to A. A. U. rules. As far as can be learned the A. A. U. does not control amateur boxing in the state although that impression may be gained from the A. A. U. itself. The only thing that the A. A. U. has to say about amateur boxing is that all registered A. A. U. boxers who participate in an unsanctioned show will be suspended. No registered boxers have ever been asked to box for the Pastime A. C., and those who did box did so with the full knowledge that they might be suspended.

The third reason was that the matchmaker also acts as a professional matchmaker. Mr. Quinn who is matchmaker for the Pastime A. C., was never in any way connected with the professional game. As for Mr. Burns, he is a licensed announcer and manager, which is the case with several connected with the amateur game in other parts of the country.

Then Mr. Dunn goes on to say that there is no one connected with the organization who is familiar enough with the A. A. U. rules to conduct an A. A. U. meet of any kind. From Mr. Burns' letter to Mr. Dunn it would seem that the Pastime A. C. was endeavoring to learn as quickly as possible without much co-operation from A. A. U. representatives in this district. It is understood that there is an A. A. U. representative in this section who should be able to assist in the running of A. A. U. shows.

At the last show it was understood that a representative of the A. A. U. would be at the show to register any boxers who were to compete who were not members of the A. A. U. According to information received there was no registration cards to be had from any of the A. A. U. officials who were at the bouts, which if true, does not reflect to the credit of the A. A. U.

However the Pastime A. C. will run an unsanctioned show on Friday evening and some boys just as good if not better than the registered A. A. U. boys will compete.

BASKETBALL BRIEFS

Plainfield has had success in battling New Britain teams this year, taking two clubs in the Hardware City on successive Saturdays. The Tabs fell last week.

The C. F. C. will no doubt experience plenty of trouble in the Hartford Central Baptist Five tonight at Hartford. The Insurance City crew defeated the locals twice last year but the second game was very close, the teams being tied at the end of the first three quarters. Ross is again with the Hartford Baptists and is again going well.

South Manchester high, one of the best in the state last year, nosed out Hartford high in the opener last week as compared to a 50 to 18 drubbing the year before. Manchester has lost Ty Holland and Farr her scoring aces of last season.

The Y Emps should win against the Emps of Willimantic tonight in the Thread City. Coach Conklin appears to have a snappy little junior five under his wing this year although when the Academy starts he will probably lose two of his best men, Tigar and Swatzburg.

Danielson plays the Norton A. C. of Worcester Thursday. The Massachusetts club is bringing down three of the Purple Collegians and that means a busy evening for Billy Schofield and his mates.

It is now fairly certain that any sort of a City league will not get started until after the holidays. Calls for meetings for the formation of an Industrial league brought few team representatives so now it is planned to admit independent clubs. Mr. McKean, physical instructor at the Y plays to have private talks with the managers to get things straightened out. The Corticello Silk seemed to be the only one seriously interested in joining he proposed Dusty loop although it is known that the Thermos and Eastern Connecticut Power Co. are leaning favorably toward the plan. These three with Martatts, Smoke Shop, T. M. C. A., C. F. C. and a few others should comprise a strong loop.

The Y. Dormitory Five with Jim Fenton, Reed McCrum, Leslie Conklin, Connie Jackson and a few others intend to campaign this season.

The Plainfield Buddies-Y Outlaws clash Saturday night at the Y gym now shapes up as a real morsel. Both teams have an abundance of players of ability.

The Boston Whirlwinds continued their victory march by snagging win No. 11 straight Monday night at Provincetown. The Okos were the victims 50 to 18.

Chapman Receives London Offer

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Charlie Cardio, manager of Red Chapman, featherweight boxing championship contender, announced tonight that he had received an offer from a London syndicate for a series of six bouts in England, France, Italy and Germany. The offer carried assurances of a cash guarantee of $25,000 and the stipulation that Chapman should arrive in London in February. Cardio said he was undecided on the offer.

Baltic to Play J. C. Whirlwinds Tonite

At the Baltic Social club gym this evening at 8 o'clock the Baltic Independents will clash with the Jewett City Whirlwinds in what is expected to be a fast basketball encounter. Both clubs have been playing a fast game.

"Y" Juniors Win At Soccer

Tuesday evening a snappy game of indoor soccer was played at the Y gym between the Juniors and the Norwich Newsies, the Juniors winning 13 to 8. The lineup for the winners was: Falcone, MacNeil, Lambert, Wilmot, Bowne, Archibald, Nickwiski, Hastings, Stephano, Peculys and Rszuto.

SYRACUSE TO DROP NUMBER OF INTERCOLLEGIATE SPORTS

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 13.—(AP)—The athletic governing board of Syracuse university tonight voted to drop boxing, golf, hockey, rifle, tennis, wrestling, soccer and fencing as intercollegiate sports. This sweeping change in the conduct of athletics was made in favor of a system of intermural athletics.

Temple Retains Miller

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Renewal of its contract with Henry G. "Heinie" Miller, head coach, and H. L. "Les" Hawes, assistant coach of Temple university football team, was announced today. Hawes was a star quarterback at Dartmouth and Miller starred as an end on the University of Pennsylvania. In the season just closed Temple lost one game, to Dartmouth.

SPORT SLANTS

"Frank Swift" (William M. Bishop) was the first American skating champion.

The London skating club will round out a century of existence three years hence.

The Finns and Norwegians are favorites to win the Olympic ski-jumping competitions.

The Eastern national ski championships are to be held at Greenfield, Mass., in February.

The Stanley cup, emblematic of the world's hockey championship, was first competed for in 1893 and won that year by the Montreal Hockey club.

In Stockholm one may enjoy all the winter sports, with the sole exception of the exciting pastime of racing in the skis, or light Lapp sleigh, drawn by a reindeer, which is confined to the northern resorts of Sweden.

In many parts of Sweden the conditions are incomparable for ski-ing. In the far north the districts are rarely penetrated by visitors in winter, but nothing could excel the vast snow-fields that are, in many cases, untrodden except by the native nomadic Lapps.

PLAINFIELD VS. NEW BRITAIN TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 13.—Plainfield Pros, now playing basketball that can cope with the best in the state, tackles the New Britain Tabs Wednesday at Plainfield Community House.

Plainfield beat this club last Saturday night on the Hardware City floor. The tilt was very close right up to the final few minutes when the Pros tossed in a number of points. The Tabs have a strong club and in this meeting intend to keep at it all the way.

They will bring down all of their regulars including the high scoring Taylor, who last week gave Plainfield all kinds of trouble. He will have to be watched more closely tonight if the locals are to insure themselves of another victory over a New Britain team. The locals have not lost to a team from that city this year, beating both All-New Britain and the Tabs.

Plainfield will lineup with Brusso and Dissinger at the forwards, Stavnitzky at center and Bernot and Madden at guards. This outfit well deserves the respect that teams of New England are now showing them for they are a real powerful club.

New Britain will send Taylor, Lescelli, Sheehan, Reynolds, Page and Berry onto the floor.

In the preliminary game the Plainfield Buddies, who are also traveling at top speed meet the Noank Nuggets, the celebrated quintet from the down state borough. The Buddies are undefeated to date but in this team they will meet a worthy opponent, one that like themselves has been together for many seasons.

Dancing will follow the main game.

WESTERLY

DR. SCANLON WANTED PAY, DR. ANDERSON WAS SLOW

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 13—Judge Charles A. Walsh opened the session of Washington County superior court this morning at 11 o'clock, without a jury, hearing the suit for $3,000 damages brought by Dr. Michael H. Scanlon against Dr. John Gordon Anderson, both Westerly physicians. The trial was begun Monday afternoon.

There was a large attendance of Westerly professional men, including twelve physicians, ten lawyers and two clergymen, besides many friends and patients of the physicians who are parties to the suit. At a time when every seat was taken and the upper halls were filled and the plaintiff Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, on the witness stand all day, was being cross-examined by Attorney Moulton, the doctor testified that "there was some party here when the Westerly hospital was opened," to which the attorney replied, "I should think there must have been." Following heavy raps of the court officers to restore quiet from the laughter of those present, Judge Walsh warned, "This is not a theatre!"

At 4 p. m. with Dr. Scanlon still on the stand under cross-examination, Attorney Moulton sought to find if Dr. Scanlon had made any agreement with other Westerly physicians, besides the one he testified to in making Dr. Anderson personally responsible to him for $50 on each case in which Anderson was associated with himself, whether Dr. Anderson had been paid for the case by the patient or not. Attorney introduced a letter dated April, 1927, written by Dr. Scanlon to Dr. Anderson in which the former had written that he would appreciate the payment to him of a check of his share under the agreement "for those who had paid you in full." At this point, 4.15 p. m., Judge Walsh announced adjournment of court until 11.00 a. m. Wednesday morning.

At the opening of the Tuesday morning court session Attorney John J. Dunn for the plaintiff, Dr. Scanlon, informed the court that both Drs. Scanlon and Anderson were Westerly physicians who had been associated with the Westerly hospital, the former on the governing staff and the latter on the surgical staff. Dr. Anderson in August, 1925, came to Westerly, where he was born, opened an office and subsequently different patients went to both doctors and under their advice operations were performed. At such times Dr. Anderson had requested Dr. Scanlon to assist him in the operations to perform such duties as befell a first assistant. In some of these cases, he said, Dr. Anderson had paid Dr. Scanlon the $50 and in others had but partially paid him and in others not at all; the bill of Dr. Scanlon now amounts to some $2300 or so. Numerous conferences over the accounts were held from time to time when they met, also by telephone and by letter (in which Dr. Scanlon was referred to by Dr. Anderson as "Mike" and Dr. Scanlon referred to Dr. Anderson as "Andy"). At one time at the Industrial Trust bank Dr. Scanlon had demanded payment from Dr. Anderson and harsh terms were used. Dr. Anderson had never denied that he owed Dr. Scanlon.

Judge Walsh excused any jurors who were in the court room to report Thursday at 11 a. m.

Dr. Scanlon testified that he was graduated from the Middletown, Conn., high school attended the physicians' college in Philadelphia and at Baltimore and for a year was interne and house physician at the Backus hospital in Norwich and at the Fall River city hospital, before coming to Westerly, the first of December 27 years ago. He first knew Dr. Anderson when he had been invited by him, then president of both the Washington County Medical society and the Westerly Physicians' association, either at the July or October 1925 meeting, to show motion pictures of an operation before the society at the theatre.

A very large part of the morning and afternoon court sessions was taken up by Dr. Scanlon's testimony as to the operations in which he had assisted Dr. Anderson, names of the patients, time, character of operations and as to the payments on them by Dr. Anderson to him. Dr. Scanlon testified that he had assisted Dr. Anderson in about 95 per cent. of the latter's cases during 1926. He was paid in full for 26 at $50 apiece and six were partly paid.

Saturday, Nov. 26, 718 books were circulated, the largest number for a single day during the month. Employes of the Westerly highway department were successful in releasing the skiff from the caisson of Pawcatuck river bridge, Broad street, on which it has been held since the freshet of several weeks ago. A cross cut saw was under the seats of the boat, where it had remained since it was capsized when workmen went down the river to release tree trunks and branches caught by the high water under the bridge. The three men in the boat at the time escaped with a wetting, also the loss of other tools which they had in the boat when the swift water sent them down stream against the bridge pier.

A block and fall was rigged at the rear of the Barrows block and the end hooked to the stern of the boat and the boat hauled a short distance upstream, bailed and then taken out on the Pawcatuck side of the river and loaded to be returned to Burden's pond.

changes had been made in the school board and that he at once had made known his intention of resigning to members of the board, although his resignation was not tendered at that time, the records show. It was only upon the urgent request of some of the board members and the townspeople, he said, that his resignation was held until this time.

The board of tax appeals at Washington, D. C., has decided that Jacob F. Brown, as trustee under the will of the late Horatio N. Slater of Webster, is not liable to income tax in respect to the amount of income of 1920 distributed but that the beneficiaries receiving such income as liable to income tax on the amounts received by them.

The case was brought by Trustee Brown and Ray Slater Murphy, beneficiary, against the internal revenue commissioner.

The question in issue was whether a trustee holding property in trust under the terms of which the trust property was distributable on or after July 12, 1920, which was distributed to the beneficiaries in 1920, is liable to income tax in respect of income received by him from January 1, 1920, or whether the beneficiaries receiving the income are liable to tax upon such income.

Slater established a trust fund of which Ray Slater Murphy was entitled to a one-half share. The internal revenue commissioner held that the trustee should pay the tax and the appeal was evidently a friendly action in his behalf. The board ruled that the trustee was simply a conduit by which the beneficiaries received their income "and the conduit should not be charged." The other beneficiaries are Esther Slater Kerrigan and Horatio Nelson Slater.

NOANK

The members of the Sardines club held a coon supper on Monday at their rooms on Traven avenue. The animal was shot by a member, Sam Morris, after the dog got it up a tree. Making a pretty shot, down came Mr. Coon. It weighed 17 pounds. Steward Bernard Carson, in his cream of wheat suit, got busy and had the coon ready at 6:30 with dressing and all the trimmings. Some members got their first taste of coon. A speech was made by President Billie Fitzgerald, stating how good it was to see so many members attending and he hoped to have more at the Christmas tree, the night before Christmas. After the tables were put away, Eddie Ellis did some tricks with a pack of cards. Miss Nellie Grant, leader of the Sardines' orchestra, gave the members some snappy numbers. Then Arthur DeBlasi announced that Noank's heavyweight champion wrestler, Big Mike Pasai, would put on a match with Wilfred Lamphere, of Mystic. Referee John Brucci looked both men over and gave out that the head hold was not allowed. Big Mike was working hard to put Lamphere to the mat but he found that the pride of Bank street knew his turnips and had many clever holds. After one and a half hours of wrestling, the match was a draw. Noank's heavyweight baby said his opponent was the hardest man he was ever up against and that it was the first time since taking up the mat game that his man stayed so long, not getting a fall or two. It was some battle and the crwod enjoyed it.

Word came in the village from New York that a former Noank young man, Everett Potter, is seriously ill with double pneumonia. Two doctors and a nurse are attending him.

Boat Betty C. came from Block Island after a two days' trip and had 27 barrels of fish.

Robert Merritt is confined to his home at Fort Hill farm by illness.

Leon Sistare was in Providence recently.

Harold Rathburn has returned from a short visit in East Providence.

Low tides have brought out the clammers in large numbers, with their hoe and pails. At Palmer cove, the clams had no chance for their lives, when the Noank clammers got going. John Connery got a pail of round clams and a half pail of long clams, so he is the king of the clam gangs, beating out his nearest rival, Jake Carey, by a half pail of claims.

There is a broken drain pipe in the schol yard and the men of Contractor George Carpenter are trying to locate it. The pipe drains the water from the cellar. The land is low and the heavy rains have made conditions bad. An electric pump is in use to drain the cellar so the lower furnace that heats the school building can be used.

Harold Butson has been added to the list of assistant scout masters of Troop No. 19. The young village soldiers cheered him for five full minutes and wanted a speech. Taken by surprise with the big hand from his brother scouts, Assistant Scout Master Butson said that he was glad to land his new office with the troop and that he will do everything in his power to help put the scouts of Noank ahead of the outside troops. He said "Let's work together—get out for the drills and be ready to help each other. Some day, after lots of training, if another war should break out, Uncle Sam will call on the Boy Scouts of America to be ready to fight with a gun, each to do his duty for his country! So we want this troop to be ready at any time!" After the meeting, cake and coffee were served.

The New Idea of Cancer

Many Cases Can Be Cured If Reported Promptly

BULLETIN No. 14

THE WARFARE AGAINST CANCER.

Cancer is a disease against which improved sanitation is not capable of producing any effect and personal hygiene has but a limited application. It is, therefore, necessary to tack this scourge in some other way.

The organized warfare against cancer which is being carried on in all civilized countries aims to discover the individual cases of the disease at the earliest possible moment and provide competent medical attention for the patient. There must be hospital and home care of a proper kind.

The public must give full cooperation to the medical profession, for it is obviously impossible for a phylcian to render any help unless the patient applies for it. The first thing then is for the public to learn the danger signals of cancer and report immediately to a medical man upon suspicion being aroused that cancer is present or impending.

Hospital and medical men must be prepared to deal effectively with the patients who come to them. Fortunately, there are excellent hospitals throughout the United States and competent surgeons are to be found nearly everywhere.

A second important line of attack is research. More facts about cancer need to be discovered; how and why it occurs, by what procedure it may be prevented and cured. There is a good deal of information upon these subjects already, but there is need of more.

Cancer researches are being prosecuted in many institutions and hospitals and by not a few physicians and surgeons privately. The records of all this work are printed in medical journals, some of which are devoted exclusively to cancer. There is hardly an association of physicians or surgeons in America which does not assign a considerable part of its program to the discussion of cancer investigations.

A hopeful outlook should exist among those who are engaged in the warfare against cancer. The public is becoming rapidly aroused to the need of cooperating and giving financial support to the forces engaged in this great conflict. Everybody should give it eager assistance.

HEAVY BUYING OF METAL SHARES WAS FEATURE OF RISE IN PRICES OF STOCKS

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—(AP)—Heavy buying of the metal shares, based on reports of improving trade conditions, featured the resumption of the upward movement of prices in today's stock market.

Trading embraced 712 individual stocks, the highest in the history of the exchange. Net gains in most of the active shares ranged from 1 to 4 points although a sprinkling of specialties were bid up 5 to nearly 10 points under the stimulus of pool operations. The average of 20 leading industrials compiled by the Associated Press set a new high record for all time at 182.51.

A further withdrawal of $7,500,000 in gold for shipment to England in the face of a sterling rate which is generally conceded to be below the point at which the metal may be shipped at a profit, also attracted considerable attention. This brought the exports this month to approximately $35,000,000, and revived discussion as to a possible increase in interest rates. Call money ruled unchanged at 4 per cent despite the approach of mid-month settlements, and there was no change in time money and commercial paper rates.

Steel shares responded to reports of increased buying by railroads and equipment manufacturers. U. S. Steel common, which sold last week as low as 138, touched 147 1-2 today, closing at 146 7-8 for a net gain of 2 1-4. American Steel Foundries advanced nearly 5 points to a new peak at 72 3-4, but lost more than half its gain. Midland Steel Products preferred soared nearly 10 points to 234 3-4 and closed within a point of the top.

A sudden spurt of buying in American metals, based on reports of expending earnings, carried that stock up more than 4 points to 45 3-8. This stock, which pays $3 annually, has moved within a range of less than 10 points all year. Calumet & Arizona jumped 7 points to a new top at 106 7-8, but Green Cananea, which has recorded one of the most sensational advances of the year, yielded slightly on profit-taking.

Tobacco shares responded to rumors of special dividend action on the tobacco Products issues, both of which attained record high prices. Porto Rican Tobacco B was run up nearly 5 points to a new peak at 52 7-8, as against the year's low of $15. U. S. Rubber was in brisk demand following a confirmation of reports that members of the Dupont family had acquired a large block of the stock, acting as individuals and not as the E. I. Dupont de Nemours corporation. Sugar shares responded favorably to the announcement of the formation of the sugar institute to stabilize trade conditions.

Brunswick Terminal touched 19, a record high price for all time and more than double the year's low. Other issues to reach new peak prices for the year, or longer, were: Continental Can, Continental Insurance, Curtis Airplane, Wright Airplane, Endicott Johnson, International Nickel, Hupp Motor, Transue & Williams, Montgomery-Ward and about a dozen others.

Rails seem to have recovered from the temporary depressing effects of the St. Louis & O'Fallon decision. Canadian Pacific was bid up more than 3 points to 217 1-2 and Chesapeake & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Wabash, Norfolk & Western and a few others advanced 2 points or more. Atchison preferred and "Katy" preferred reached new high ground.

Foreign exchanges moved within narrow and irregular limits. Sterling Cables ruled slightly lower at $4.88 5-8. Spanish pesetas advanced another 5 points to around 16.80 cents.

Weakness of wheat prices, based on reports of increased offerings from the Argentine, was the outstanding development in the commodity markets. Active wheat futures dropped 2 cents or more a bushel. Trading in wheat futures on the New York produce exchange was discontinued for lack of interest. Cotton sold off 1 to 13 points and a slightly reactionary tone also was apparent in the coffee and sugar markets.

A Song of the Sky

I gazed upon the Summer Rose,
I watched it bud and blow;

Its petals flutter low,
I breathed their dying fragrance,
And whispered with a sigh:
Oh, the sweetness—
But the fleetness!
Must all things die?

ELEANOR KLOPPENBERG DEAD— SCIENCE READER IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Eleanor K. Eager, 52, of Harrison's, Waterford, widow of Fred C. Eager, died this morning at the Christian Science sanitarium, Boston, where she had been a patient for several weeks. She is survived by a brother, Marshall Kloppenberg, of Waterbury. Mrs. Eager's husband, a former locomotive engineer, died about a year ago. Mrs. Eager was first reader of the local Christian Science church, also a member of Fidelity chapter, Order of Eastern Star. She had been a teacher for many years in the schools of Norwich and later in the New London schools.

NOTORIOUS MAHONEY PAIR FINALLY GET YEAR IN JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 13.—Thomas and Mary Davis Mahoney, husband and wife, were in the police court today, charged with conducting a disorderly house at 16 Tenth street and with violation of the liquor law. Each was fined $100 and costs on the former count and sentenced to six months in jail. On the second count, both Mahoney and his wife were fined $100 and costs, which means that the man and woman will be compelled to remain in jail more than a year for they could not pay their fines and will be obliged to work them out. Mahoney and his wife have been arrested before on similar charges, the last time when they conducted a house of ill repute on Main street. Mahoney is an ex-service man.

The arrest of Mahoney and his wife resulted from a raid upon the place at 4:30 o'clock upon complaint of George Olsen, a tugboat employe, who informed the police that he had been robbed of $60 and a gold watch at a resort, he said, was in Groton. Because of Groton being outside the jurisdiction of the local police, Sergeant Henry Albright, of Groton state police barracks, was notified and he came to New London. Accompanied by Olsen, the officer started for Groton, but when on Winthrop street, Olsen pointed out the street where the house is located and where he was robbed. The officer returned to police headquarters and accompanied by Sergeant Samuel Hicks and Patrolman George Labous, a trip was made to the Mahoney house. The officers easily gained admission to the house and there they found evidence of the sale of liquor. A search of the house also resulted in Olsen's watch being found, but no trace of the money was obtained. John Sweezy, who was found in the place was charged with frequenting, but in the police court he was discharged. Salvatore Delaporte, public service operator, was also arrested and charged with frequenting, for Olsen said that he had sought the companionship of women during the early morning hours and had hired Delaporte to take him to the Sixteenth street house, where, Delaporte said Olsen would be accommodated. Delaporte was also discharged when presented in court.

As a result of Olsen's statements to the police the club room conducted by Jack Burns, Railroad avenue, was raided this morning for Olsen said that he obtained liquor there last night. Upon Olsen's statement to Sergeant Hick, Judge Victor Prince issued a search warrant and Sergeant Hick and Patrolmen George Labous and Frank Paliopena went to the club room. Arriving there all of the employes were absent and in order to gain admission to the club, which is on the second floor, the officers had to release the hinges of the doors. The doors removed, the officers entered and conducted a systematic search for liquor, but no evidence of its sale or its being kept there for purposes of sale was obtained. The only "evidence" the officers had on returning to police headquarters was two gallon glass containers.

Mrs. Carl Coan and infant daughter, of 20 Reed street; Irving Larkin, 894 Bank street, and Mrs. William Cole, of Niantic, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary M. Blake, widow of John M. Blake, was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Joseph's church and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. A high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. The bearers were John Blake, Dennis Cavanaugh, Charles C. Canning and Thomas E. Wood. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral services for J. Oscar Smith, of Waterford, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence, Station 6, and were attended by many mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church. The bearers were Christopher Newbury, Erastus Beebe, Burtis Dunbar, Eugene Ryley, David Baum and Alfred Gates. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Private funeral services for Mrs. Julia H. Colby, of 72 Riverview avenue, were held this afternoon at 1 o'clock at 15 Masonic street. Rev. Arthur Ferguson, pastor of Montauk avenue Baptist church officiated. Relatives acted as bearers. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery, Mystic.

Miss Annie A. Weaver, of Franklin street, this city, died this morning at the Davis private hospital, Best View, Waterford, where she had been a patient for several weeks. Miss Weaver leaves no near relatives.

Mrs. Julia B. Smith, of Waterford, reported to the police last night that her automobile had been damaged, being struck at the corner of Bank and Pearl streets by an automobile carrying Connecticut registration, 49500.

Two automobiles were stolen from Centerbrook last night and the New London police have been requested to be on the lookout for them. The cars are carrying Connecticut markers, 1927 and 1928.

The police are still experiencing annoyance because of signal boxes failing to function, for the box corner Washington and Cole streets, is out of order and has been several days.

M'QUEEN WENT TO RIDE— SPENT NIGHT IN THE LOCK-UP

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 13—Daniel McQueen, a mason, was arrested tonight charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He was stopped by Patrolman Edward Riordan when the officer detected the irregular manner and the dangerous course taken by the car. When the officer held up the driver it was evident that McQueen was intoxicated, so the car was taken from his possession and the driver was locked up.

SAMUEL ZIMMERMAN'S CLUB HAD WET STUFF FOR PATRONS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 13—Samuel Zimmerman, one of the proprietors of the club room 8 Pearl street, was arrested tonight by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh charged with violation of the liquor law and conducting a gambling house. Zimmerman was held in bail of $1,000 on the first count and $500 on the second count for appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. A patron of the place was the complainant against Zimmerman, for the former made complaint at police headquarters that he had been robbed of $16 while spending his money there. Detective Sergeant Cavanaugh was sent to the club room and there he found ample evidence of the nature of the business being carried on there. There were numerous sailors in the room, bottles of liquor on the table, while one sailor had a bottle of liquor on his person. Zimmerman was arrested. Louis Eifenbein became surety on the combination bond.

Peter Pijeaux, Portuguese Negro, former United States Coast Guard sailor, was arrested at the request of the New London police at 2 o'clock this morning in New York, charged with larceny. A warrant for his arrest was forwarded to the New York police today. He will be given a hearing in a New York court Friday and at that time he will be delivered into the custody of a New London officer who will leave here Friday night and go to that city for the purpose of bringing Pijeaux back to New London for trial for the theft of clothing from Joseph L. Jackson, 13 Richards street. Some of the stolen goods were found in his possession when he was arrested. Pijeaux has a jail record for theft for he was sentenced to jail while a member of the coast guard and upon the expiration of the sentence he was given a dishonorable discharge from the military service. Jackson and his wife were in New York a week ago and last Friday Jackson returned to this city. When he entered the house there was every evidence that the place had been ransacked, for apparel was strewn about several rooms, especially women's clothing. An investigation by Jackson revealed that clothing belonging to him and of the value of $500 had been taken. Entrance to the house was gained by means of the use of a skeleton key in a rear door. The theft was reported to the police and suspicion pointed to Pijeaux as the thief. It was later ascertained that Pijeaux had taken the loot to the residence of his mother on Hempstead street and that a day or two afterwards he left with the clothing for New York. Jackson was instructed to go to New York with a companion of Pijeaux and there endeavor to learn the Negro's whereabouts. Shortly after last midnight Pijeaux's rooming house was discovered. Then Jackson went to a police precinct and made known his mission to New York. A detective accompanied Jackson to the rooming house and when a search of the room revealed the stolen clothing, or rather a part of it, Pijeaux was arrested and locked up.

Joseph Rich, 16, of 24 Fox street, Palmer, Mass., was arrested this morning by Traffic Officer Thomas Cavanaugh as a suspicious person. He was turned over to the custody of Assistant Probation Officer George MacDougall. Rich was observed loitering on Bank street, near Howard street, yesterday afternoon and when he appeared in that vicinity this morning, aimlessly roaming about, he was questioned by the officer and not giving a satisfactory explanation of his mission here, he was arrested. At police headquarters when Rich was searched he was found to possess numerous articles, including a carpenter's rule and a small quantity of stamped envelopes. The latter, Rich explained, he said he found on a dump while he was seeking employment, but this story is not given credence by the police. Rich said that he came to New London yesterday afternoon to find work.

The residence occupied by Laura Fulford, 10 Hill street, was damaged this morning by fire, which was undoubtedly started by children having access to the house during the absence pouring from the windows and a passerby had an alarm sent in from Box 26, of the occupant. Smoke was noticed corner of Bulkeley place and Huntington street, Chief Thomas Shipman and four pieces of apparatus responded. The fire was burning among furnishings when the firemen entered the house and it required a large tank of chemical to extinguish it. The damage, it is believed, will not exceed $200. It is understood that the children entered the house, amusing themselves by burning matches, some of them dropping on the floor and igniting a carpet.

Announcement has been received in New London of the marriage in Pygros Samos, Greece, recently of John Chio, formerly of New London, brother of Andrew Chio, 9 Truman street, and Miss Thalia Sotiropoulos, a young woman of prominent family on the island of Samos. Mr. Chio, who was formerly in the restaurant business, will shortly return to New London with his bride.

The Wentworth System of Bakeries, 174 Bank street, has closed its doors, and according to the proprietors of the business, the store will not be reopened. The bakery was sponsored by Paul Zepperi and Anthony Frederick. It is understood, that because of the entrance into the city of the several doughnut baking automatic machines the business of the Wentworth bakery was so affected that the proprietors decided to discontinue business.

Mrs. Emma Manice Edwards, 60, wife of Percy L. Edwards, of Waterford, died last night, after a lingering illness. Besides her husband, who is an invalid, Mrs. Edwards is survived by a brother, William Manice, a patrolman of the New London police force.

Michael German, 55, retired Hartford carpenter, died this morning at Lawrence-Memorial hospital from heart disease, Mr. Gorman having been taken suddenly ill shortly after last midnight while visiting at the residence of his sister, Mrs. James Bannon, 35 Namenug avenue. Besides Mrs. Bannon, Mr. Gorman leaves two other sisters, Mrs. Mary Delaney and Mrs. Martin Sculley of New Haven; two sons, John Gorman, Hartford and Joseph Gorman, Belleview, N. J., and three daughters, Mrs. John Farr, Boston; Mrs. Henry Farr, Denver, Col., and Miss Mary Gorman, Waterbury. Mr. Gorman, who had been a sufferer of a weakened condition of the heart for two years recently came to New London to visit Mrs. Bannon. He suffered the attack shortly after 3 o'clock and a physician, who was summoned, ordered Mr. Gorman taken to the hospital. He received treatment there but about three hours later he succumbed.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary McCloud, widow of Matthew McCloud, was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, a mass of requiem being celebrated by Rev. George Clark. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The December meeting of the Foremen's and Executives' club of New London was held Monday evening in the Central Branch New London Y. M. C. A. Twenty-five members and friends were in attendance. Following the supper, two reels of moving pictures, showing the work carried on in different phases of the fish industry were shown, Howard W. Rogers, of the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing Co., operating the machine. The reels depicted the rearing of salmon fingerling in the Canadian northwest and placing them in the lakes of that region, also deep-sea fishing off Long Island coast, and the large nets used. Between the reels and following them Albert Janshon, of the Cortichelli Silk Co., gave piano solos, warmly appreciated by the club. At the business meeting which followed David M. Bennett, of the Mystic plant of the Sea Sled Co. was voted into membership. The speaker was R. A. Ross, manager of the Groton plant of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries Corp., of New York. He told of the work being carried on by his company, a part of the larger organization of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries Co. He told in detail of the methods used at the Groton plant in transferring the fish, most of which is haddock, from their homes in the deeps of the fishing banks to the cartons which are sent from Groton to the west, the filets being kept perfectly in their frozen condition to their destinations, while the parts not used in the filets are transformed to fish meal and find their way to Germany. He had a carton of the product with him, and each man in attendance carried home a sample for the use of his family.

Broadway Madness is a sparkling drama of a Broadway Gold Digger. Marguerite De LaMotte plays the role of a dancer, who goes to a country town to try to win an inheritance in which she has no rightful claim. How she falls in love with a farmer lad, who is the rightful legatee, how he falls in love with her, makes an interesting photoplay. Donald Keith has the leading male role.

How a trio of three men and one beautiful girl extricated themselves from the toils of an unscrupulous underworld character is the theme of Cheaters now showing at the Strand. Helen Ferguson as the girl in love with Pat O'Malley take positions in a hotel. How the leader of the gang discover their efforts to earn an honest living, how the hotel safe is robbed, a murder committed, and many other exciting happenings go to make up the story the plot hinges on. Others in the cast are Lawford Davidson, Heinie Conklin and Claire McDowell.

Breed Theatre.

Monte Blue, hero of so many rousing dramas, will appear here at the Breed theatre today and Thursday in a film that will endear him more than ever to the public. It is "The Bush Leaguer."

Monte stars as a modest young Idaho inventor and gas-station owner, who breaks the monotony of life by pitching for the team that has its diamond on the lot adjoining his property.

Fate enters in the form of a beautiful motorist who, stopping to have the gasoline tank replenished, so interests the bespectacled youth that he accepts a job on a professional team in her home town, Los Angeles. What follows is a riot. Monte makes of Specs White a character uproariously amusing and believably human.

Clyde Cook and Lelia Hyams, who supported him in "The Brute," are featured. Others in the cast are William Demarest, Richard Tucker, Bud Marshall, Tom Dempsey, Wilfred North, William Wilson, Violet Palmer and Rodney Hildebrand.

The other feature on this bill is the William Fox special production, "The Auctioneer."

This is a modern version of the David Belasco's great stage triumph. In the cast which is headed by George Sidney, are Marion Nixon, Gareth Hughes, Doris Lloy and Sammy Cohen, the Hebrew buck private of "What Price Glory" fame.

Palace Theatre.

Reginald Denny in "On Your Toes" is the screen fare selected by the Palace theatre management for the feature screen attraction the last three days of the week. The story concerns the son of a former fight champion who is reared in seclusion on his grandmother's Virginia plantation. As a youngster he is the terror of the neighborhood and there is no one that can beat him. The years pass on and we find him grown to manhood, developing into an effeminate type and of all things, a dancing teacher. Meanwhile the manager of Denny's father seeks out the son in order to see if fighting blood will tell. He is disgusted with what he finds and plans to return to New York. It seems the fight manager has a daughter who does not hesitate to tell Denny how much she despises him, this makes him mad and he goes to New York where he gets a job as a taxi-driver. He is seen in the act of knocking out a rowdy and taken in hand where he is trained to be world's champion.

Among the vaudeville acts booked in conjunction with "On Your Toes," are the Sandel Sisters Revue, a comedy, dancing and singing aggregation, Inglis & Davis, two sure laugh provokers, Rich and Roy, who offer a comedy skit, Myers and Noble in songs and jests and the Great Johnson who calls himself "The Silent Entertainer."

NORWICH FIRE UNDERWRITERS' BOARD RE-ELECTS OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Norwich Board of Fire Underwriters was held in the office of Charles D. Foster Tuesday afternoon with a large proportion of the members present. After the customary business and the reading of the minutes of their last meeting the members re-elected Frank I. Royce as president, Ebenezer Learned as secretary and Charles D. Foster as treasurer. The vacancy caused by the death of one of their oldest members, Isaac Jones, was filled by the election of Edmund A. Prentice, as vice-president.

Committee reports took up considerable time and the balance of the meeting was taken up by informal discussion of insurance affairs. Those members who attended the recent Insurance day at Hartford had much to remark upon. Many of the local agents are affiliated with the state association which carries with it membership in the National Association of Insurance Agents.

The idea of having a local insurance day among all the local agents was discussed but nothing definite was done.

Much general discussion of the affairs and interests of the National Association of Insurance Agents ensued after which the meeting was adjourned.

SUPREME COURT DECISION IS FOR MRS. JENNES

Attorneys in this city were considerably puzzled Tuesday when they learned that the supreme court had given a "no error" finding in the suit of Mrs. Elizabeth Jennes against the city of Norwich in consideration of the fact that the case had been re-argued before the supreme court in its session here last October after the court had already once given a decision that upset the $4,000 verdict which a jury had given for Mrs. Jennes and which had been upheld by Judge Newell Jennings.

The matter was finally definitely cleared up by communicating with the supreme court reporter, John Comley at Hartford, who gave the information that "No error" was found in the verdict of the trial court which Judge Jennings sustained. The supreme court thus reverses itself on its first opinion in the case, and Mrs. Jennes wins on the verdict of $4,000 and costs against the city, which with interest will amount to about $5,000.

Corporation counsel William H. Shields, Jr., conducted the case for the city and had associated with him Attorney C. V. James. Attorneys Edwin W. Higgins and John H. Barnes were counsel for Mrs. Jennes.

According to word received by Attorney Higgins, counsel for Mrs. Jennes, from supreme court reporter, John Comley at Hartford, the supreme court stood 4 to 1 on the reversal. Justice Maltbie was the only one registering a dissenting vote. Out of the five justices of the supreme court a majority is necessary for a decision.

Justice John W. Banks who wrote the first opinion, also wrote the second opinion of the court.

ONE TEACHER APPOINTMENT BY TOWN SCHOOL BOARD

One teacher, Miss Edna V. Day, was appointed and there was a discussion of some slight changes in the new Samuel Huntington school building at the December meeting of the town school board Tuesday evening in the superintendent's room at the court house. Brophy, Edward G. McKay and Superintendent E. J. Graham.

"PUPPET REVUE" DELIGHTS SLATER HALL AUDIENCE

An audience of 400 was entertained Tuesday evening by the "Puppet Revue" at Slater Memorial hall. The entertainment which was of an unique nature was given under the auspices of the dramatics department of the Woman's City club. It was a remarkable production and certainly worthy of the bursts of hearty applause at the conclusion of each number. The puppets are the handiwork of the Yale Puppeteers, three graduates of the department of drama at Yale. A half hundred puppets, averaging 20 inches in height were used in the programme, all of the puppets having been made and costumed in the Puppeteers' studio at New Haven.

The programme started at 8 o'clock with an explanation, by Harry Burnett, of the difference between puppets and the ordinary marionette show. Then with Mr. Burnett and Forman Brown operating the puppets the evening's entertainment started with an overture, played by the puppet orchestra of some 15 or 20 members. The next number was a playlet, On the Road to Bombay, and this was followed by a dance number, the Pyramis and Thisbe, from the last act of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream followed. The "Opera Singer" was the next number and the concluding feature was a play, Gooseberry Mandarin.

The puppets were most lifelike and to one in the audience it seemed as though they were actually acting and speaking their parts without the aid of human ingenuity. At the conclusion of the programme Mr. Brown explained the construction of the puppets and illustrated the back stage work in manipulating them.

The ushers were Misses Janice Richards, Ruth Cruickshank, Bessie Lapierre, Dorothy Harris, Marion Agnew and Eleanor Smith.

An afternoon performance at 4 o'clock was also given.

Those who attended were reluctant to talk about what had taken place. The discussion was described as having been in a serious vein and there were intimations that some definite action by the group could be expected soon.

Mr. Wadsworth declared the conference purpose as follows:

MEXICANS DELIRIOUS WITH JOY AS LINDBERGH LANDED NEAR MEXICO CITY

Made Flight From Capital to Capital in About 27 Hours—Demonstration Came When the Spirit of St. Louis at 3.39 P. M. Settled on the Valbuena Military Field, Two and a Half Miles From Mexico City—Lindbergh Missed His Route From Tampico Because of Heavy Fog Off the Coast and in the Mountains—Was Not Worried; Just Flew Around Until He Found a Landmark.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14.—(AP)—"Lindy" has done it again—he and the other half of the famous "We."

Without stop Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, piloting the "Spirit of St. Louis," which earlier in the year had carried him to Paris, flew from Washington to Mexico City. For more than 27 hours he was at the controls.

Perhaps there has never been witnessed such a delirious demonstration of joy by a Mexican multitude as that at 3:39 o'clock this afternoon, when after some three hours of apprehension that misfortune had befallen the flier, the Spirit of St. Louis settled on the Valbuena Military aviation field, two and a half miles from Mexico City. "Lindy" and his plane were safe and sound; nothing was wrong except that a miscalculation of direction carried the plane in a great circle from Tampico into the interior, instead of flying in a direct line to Mexico City.

The lone eagle not only flew over Mexico's mountains and deserts in the first non-stop flight between the two capitals, but he flew straight into the hearts of the Mexican people—hearts already long attuned in devotion to him by exploits of which they had read, hearts torn with fears for hours for his safety.

And then—against the purple mountain ranges in the distance appeared a little white speck. At least, fifty, some say one hundred, thousand people at Valbuena field, and as many more lining the city streets awaiting the coming of the airman, began to whisper: "Can it be Lindy? Can it be?"

They were afraid to cheer; they were almost afraid to hope. Their nerves had been on edge as time and again false reports were spread that the plane had been sighted near at hand. At last gloom had conquered the crowd; silently and somberly the great masses stood dejectedly, trying to hope and finding it hard.

Then that white blot against the purple ranges that Cortez and his Spanish adventurers mastered four centuries ago, to conquer an empire and open a new world!

A new conqueror was crossing those formidable purple ranges, where the great snow tipped volcano of Popocatepetl towered against the azure sky—a new kind of adventurer, a messenger of good will, cavalier of the air doing deeds beyond the wildest dreams of those ancient knights whom Cortez led.

"Can it be Lindy?" the multitude murmured. Then while the escort of Mexican Army planes performed circus stunts overhead, there began to circle the field a graceful creature of the air, coming closer and closer.

A roar that might have rocked those mighty distant mountains swept the throng—"Thank God—it's Lindy! Viva Lindy! Viva Lindy!" they cried.

No person in all that vast assemblage had been more disturbed over Colonel Lindbergh's delay, more apprehensive or more excitedly overjoyed at his safe arrival than President Calles himself. The president, with American ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow beside him, had been sitting since early morning awaiting Lindy. As noon passed, and one report after another had proved false, the president plainly showed perturbation. He asked the Associated Press to assist him in getting information as to Colonel Lindbergh's authentic location, and ordered the government telegraph service throughout the nation to make every effort to ascertain what had happened.

Refreshments were brought into the presidential stand—Calles refused. He smoked cigarettes incessantly, lighting one after another, a certain manifestation that the president of Mexico was worried. His usually stern face became more set, more careworn; it seemed to be more deeply lined.

He tapped nervously upon the floor with his walking stick. And then, as the people strained themselves tense on tip toes and craning their necks, an aide whispered to the president: "It is Lindbergh—it is positively Lindbergh this time."

Calles leaped to his feet as though convulsed by an electric shock. He gave one searched, piercing glance into that aide's face. Calles' face became transformed instantly from somberness to positive radiance. He paused; he laughed aloud. For hours he had been declining food.

"Bring me a sandwich," he ordered. "Give me a drink."

He munched and gulped, and then stopped to cheer. Rarely if ever has Calles been known so to betray his feelings publicly.

A few minutes later, after the airplane had landed and reached the presidential box, Senor Calles did not content himself merely with shaking hands. The president gave the lone eagle a full "embrazo"—that is, a real hug, throwing both arms around Lindy's shoulders and patting him affectionately.

Colonel Lindbergh looked a little flustered. The crowd by this time was surging by the thousands in front of the presidential stand. They cheered and yelled louder than before. They demanded "Lindy"; nothing would do them but Lindy. So the youthful birdman upon the arm of the president ventured to the edge of the platform and waved and smiled. And the crowd seemed quite as happy as the president and the ambassador.

When Lindbergh's plane struck the dry sun-baked field, thousands of persons dashed through the lines of soldiers and police, swarmed over the field and darted in pursuit, and then both crowds and plane were hidden in the dust clouds, which prevented the scattered military guardians from seeing those who were closing the Spirit of St. Louis and its pilot. Thus they became powerless to accomplish what they had promised to do at all cost—keep the crowds from Lindbergh when he landed.

When President Calles embraced Lindbergh at the presidential stand not after a long, he welcomed the flier as the guest of the nation, saying: "We are proud indeed to have you as such."

Colonel Lindbergh replied: "I am equally proud. I thank you very much."

The president told Lindbergh that he was a very brave man to continue flying in such an indomitable way when he had lost his direction. The airman merely smiled, and waved aside the achievement as nothing.

Ambassador Morrow's automobile, with the ambassador, had been driven across the field so that the official representative of the United States would be the first to meet the unofficial ambassador of good will. The crowds hidden from the police in dust clouds, lifted Lindy from his machine, hoisted him on their shoulders, and carried him to the embassy car. The ambassador grasped the youth with both hands, saying: "God bless you; you are very tired."

"Oh, not very," replied Lindbergh, although his rather haggard face betokened more weariness than words would admit.

FLIGHTS MADE BY COL. LINDBERGH SINCE MAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, in completing his 2,000 mile flight to Mexico City today, has flown approximately 35,000 miles since he left San Diego, Calif., last May, to start his flight from New York to Paris.

His total flying mileage to date would almost take him one and one half times around the world, if he followed the equatorial circumference of the earth, which is 24,896 miles.

The lone eagle's flights since last May were:

San Diego to St. Louis, 1,550 miles.
St. Louis to New York, 950 miles.
New York to Paris, 3,625 miles.
Short hops in Europe, 430 miles.
Flights between New York, Washington, St. Louis, Ottawa, and other cities upon his return to the United States estimated 4,000 miles.
Three months' tour of the country in the interests of aviation, 22,350 miles.
Washington to Mexico City, 2,000 miles.
Total 34,905 miles.

LINDBERGH'S MOTHER SAYS "THAT'S ALL THAT MATTERS"

DETROIT, Dec. 14.—(AP)—"That's all that matters," Mrs. Evangeline L. L. Lindbergh, mother of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh said today when informed by the Associated Press that her son had completed his 2,000 mile flight to Mexico City.

In saying this, Mrs. Lindbergh repeated the exact words she used when her son landed safely at Le Bourget field after his Atlantic flight.

DELAYED BY FOG ON COAST AND IN THE MOUNTAINS

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14.—(AP)—At the American embassy tonight, under the watchful eye of the ambassador, Colonel Lindbergh laughed as he told of his adventures nearing Mexico City. The delay in his arrival had worried everybody but Lindbergh.

"I wasn't worried at all about being lost," he said. "I knew it was merely a question of floating around until I found some landmark or other.

"I missed my route from Tampico because of the heavy fog off the coast and in the mountains," Lindbergh chuckled—"These railroad stations haven't any name, at least I couldn't see any. I flew around and finally saw the name 'Toluca' on a railroad station, then I knew I was close to Mexico City."

Lindbergh received a tremendous ovation from the huge crowd surrounding the embassy. One of the first things he did was to talk by long distance telephone with his mother in Detroit. But he had trouble in hearing, as his ears were in bad condition because of his flight and the altitude.

Continuing his talk with the newspaper correspondents, Lindbergh said: "I did not realize I had been in the state of Michoacan until after I landed. I had expected the trip to last twenty-six hours; I figured I had lost two hours but thought that previous to that I had been running ahead of my schedule, and so was still on time. But developments proved that I was mistaken."

When asked as to the principal object of his coming to Mexico, Colonel Lindbergh replied: "President Calles' much appreciated invitation brought me."

He had always been interested in Mexico, he said, and had always wanted to come here, since he spent a year at San Antonio, Texas. He expressed the hope that his trip would stimulate aviation in Mexico and Central America, because he had always been interested in the development of aviation, though this was not the primary purpose of his trip.

His immediate plans depended upon Ambassador Morrow. "But," he added, "at any event I am not going to sleep until tomorrow."

But the ambassador's advice did prevail, and Lindbergh went to bed about 6 o'clock, still insisting that he was not very tired. Undoubtedly he will sleep until late tomorrow morning, and will then be taken by the ambassador to the palace to present his compliments to the president.

Lindbergh appeared at the interview with the correspondents in the embassy looking fresh, fit and fine, after a bath and a shave. He wore a gray suit with small white stripes. He laughed without replying when asked how he managed such an appearance without carrying a wardrobe trunk. In his plane, however, reposed a hand bag with various articles for quick changes to suit the social occasions.

Ambassador Morrow looked upon him with pride. "Isn't he a wonderful boy," exclaimed the ambassador enthusiastically to the correspondents.

"He is perfect physically, mentally and spiritually," the ambassador added.

Soon after reaching the embassy from the airdrome, Lindbergh had his picture taken with Ambassador Morrow and General Alvarez, presidential chief of staff; then shook hands with each member of the guard which had escorted him through the streets and had protected him from the enthusiastic and frantic people. He came on the balcony and bowed and waved in response to the "vivas" of the immense throng.

35 TO 50 CHILDREN LOST THEIR LIVES IN FIRE IN QUEBEC ORPHANAGE

QUEBEC, Dec. 14—(AP)—Between 35 and 50 children, ranging from five to 16 years of age, are believed to have lost their lives when fire swept the Hospice St. Charles, an orphanage tonight.

The Hospice St. Charles is an orphanage in which 500 children were inmates.

Flames which broke out in the basement of the building had reached one of the dormitories before the fire was discovered. Nuns of the Good Shepherd who conduct the institution led most of the inmates to safety.

Although rescue workers had found but 14 bodies it was believed that at least 50 persons perished.

ELECTROCUTED WHILE ERECTING AN AERIAL

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 14—(AP)—Three persons met death by electrocution today when an aerial which they were erecting as a Christmas surprise for a neighbor came in contact with two high power electric lines, each carrying 2,200 volts.

They were: Fred J. Voltz, Jr., 44; his wife, Ella, 40, and their son, Joseph, 17.

Mr. Voltz with the coil of copper wire in his hand, attempted to reach over the two high voltage wires when a loose end struck a portion of the power line. The shock threw him to the ground, dead.

Joseph, the son, who was standing on the ground with one end of the aerial gripped in his hands, also was instantly killed.

Mrs. Voltz, who had been standing on the back veranda of the house, saw her husband and her son fall and rushed to their aid. She seized the aerial, one end of which still was in contact with the high voltage lines, and she too was instantly killed. Carl Voltz, 11, another son, is the only surviving member of the family.

TWO MEN KILLED WHEN AUTO STRUCK DEER

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 14—(AP)—The usual custom of a deer getting the short end of an encounter with an automobile was reversed today and four men, Nathan Lackoski, George Wackovitz, Meyer Weiss and Nathan Kelsman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were the victims.

The Brooklyn quartet, all shirt makers, were on their way to Wilkesbarre. Near Bear Creek, on the Poconos, a big buck deer dashed from the woods and crashed into the front of the car with such force as to jerk the steering wheel from the driver's hands. The car went over a steep bank, overturning three times. The four men were treated at a hospital here for bruises and lacerations.

The buck, bleeding from wounds, disappeared into the forest.

Coolidge Applauds Lindbergh Flight

Regards Achievement as a Harbinger of Good Will Between U. S. and Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—(AP)—Hailed as the harbinger of American good will toward Mexico, Charles A. Lindbergh found on his arrival today in Mexico City that both President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg expected his flight from Washington Mexico City to assist the two countries in cementing friendly relations.

President Coolidge led the way by declaring that Lindbergh's courageous venture would be understood as one of good will, and he added that "the true spirit of your mission will be sympathetically understood in the United States and Mexico. To the president's message of congratulations Secretary Kellogg attached his own, saying Lindbergh not only had advanced the cause of aviation, but would advance the cause of amity between the nations."

The text of the president's message follows:

"The people of the United States are proud of and the successful culmination of another of your courageous exploits. I wish to add my hearty congratulations to you in being the first to fly without a stop between the capitals of the two neighbor republics. I am confident that as the harbinger of good will from the people of the United States to the people of Mexico, you will materially assist the two countries to cement friendly relations, and I feel sure that the true spirit of your mission will be sympathetically understood in the United States and Mexico."

"You have performed a great public service," Mr. Kellogg said in concluding his message.

These messages were only two of scores which went from government officials, army and navy officers and others who had waited anxious hours while it appeared that Lindbergh may have encountered trouble as he neared his goal.

Lindbergh's business was made the nation's business in many government departments, in congress, on the streets and wherever the people congregate to speculate or seek information when the New York-to-Paris flier is in the air.

The house had a particularly trying time of it in attempting to mix Lindbergh with the reading of the complicated tax bill, and three times Representative Tilson, the republican leader, had to arise to explain just where Lindbergh stood.

On one occasion, long before Lindbergh had landed, he announced the flier was safe in Mexico City. Told that this was not true, he started an independent investigation as to the source of his information but got nowhere. Finally Mr. Tilson announced he was wrong and Representative Vestal of Indiana explained that he gave the information to Mr. Tilson because he had received that word from the war department.

Nevertheless, on Mr. Tilson's first announcement the house enthusiastically instructed Speaker Longworth to wire its congratulations to the pilot, who only a few days ago was voted the congressional medal of honor.

Another action which made it a Lindbergh day for Washington was President Coolidge's choice, of a time to sign the bill awarding the medal to Lindbergh.

While the senate was not in session today the business of the house was opened with a prayer of the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, the chaplain that the "chivalry, simplicity and high moral standards" of the flier might be an example and inspiration to American youth.

"God be with America's incomparable hero as he sails on in the open bowl of the skies, passes the shoulders of the mountains and enters the gateway of the republic to the south," said the chaplain.

TOOK OATH AS CHIEF OF THE ARMY AIR CORPS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—(AP)—A military career which began in the ranks of the regular army in 1898 at the outbreak of the Spanish war reached its pinnacle today when Major General James E. Fechet took the oath of office as chief of the army air corps.

Two other officers who also began in the ranks of the army participated in the ceremony, Brigadier General Benjamin Foulois, who was sworn in to succeed Fechet as assistant chief of the corps and Lieutenant Col. Joseph I. McMullen of the judge advocate general's corps who administered the oath in both cases. Fechet and McMullen were both sergeants in the sixth cavalry years ago and have been friends since boyhood.

GEORGE REMUS, ON TRIAL FOR MURDER, FOUND GUILTY OF CONTEMPT OF COURT

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 14—(AP)—George Remus was found guilty of contempt of court late today after he again had interrupted his month-old murder trial with a harsh verbal attack upon his three young prosecutors and precipitated one of the wildest scene of the trial.

Judge Chester R. Shook sharply upbraided Remus for conduct which had produced "almost unparalleled conditions" and announced that sentence would be deferred until after completion of the murder trial.

Remus acting as his own chief of counsel interrupted the testimony of his adopted daughter, Ruth Holmes Remus, born of the first marriage of the wife he slew, and demanded that the jury be sent from the court room so that he might argue a legal point.

He started with an explanation of his plea of transitory maniacal insanity, swept into a legal and medical definition of the terms of his plea and then became embroiled with the prosecutors in heated exchanges over indictment of defense witnesses.

Whirling toward Prosecutor Charles P. Taft and his assistants, Remus sneered "these three novices."

It was an old arraignment and for the first time met opposition.

Walter K. Sibbald, towering a head above any other man in the court room advanced toward Remus and the judicial dais, white-faced and roaring an objection which swelled above Remus' stentorian efforts.

"This has gone far enough" shouted Sibbald. "I refuse to stand there any longer and listen to this defendant's attacks and slurs upon the prosecutor's office.

Bailiffs rushed to surround Remus and Sibbald and spectators stood up. Sibbald continued to bellow his objections until he had silenced Remus. Order quickly was restored and Judge Shook in his accustomed unflurried manner, addressed Remus.

"The court is not going to permit you to continue with attacks upon the prosecutors," the judge said.

"Then I apologize to the court only," replied Remus.

"He owes an apology to the prosecutor's office also," cut in Sibbald.

Remus interrupted with a reference to the grand jury indictment of defense witnesses for perjury.

"Sit down, I won't hear any more," directed the judge.

"An anomalous situation has been brought about," asserted Judge Shook. "The defendant from the start has attacked the prosecutor's office.

"The court feels the prosecutors are within their rights in protesting against the unjustifiable attack of Mr. Remus who was being respectfully heard by the court."

Once previously Judge Shook threatened to cite Remus for contempt for disobeying rulings of the court.

Hearst Subpoenaed To Appear Today

Before Special Senate Committee Inquiry of Alleged Mexican Fund.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—(AP)—William Randolph Hearst, publisher of newspapers printing allegations that a fund of $1,216,000 was created by Mexico to influence four United States senators, will be asked at the start of the inquiry into the charges by a special senate committee tomorrow to produce the documents carrying the names of the senators.

In publishing facsimiles of the documents, the Hearst papers deleted the names of the senators. Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, chairman of the investigating committee, said today he had no definite knowledge as to the identity of the four senators but that he was prepared to give each an immediate opportunity to speak before the committee if he desires.

Furthermore, Senator Reed said he would endeavor to establish at once whether there was any evidence that any of the four senators received any money from the Calles government. The documents have been described by the Mexican embassy here as forgeries.

Arturo M. Elias, Mexican consul general at New York, is one of four besides Mr. Hearst who have been subpoenaed by the committee to appear at the beginning of open hearings tomorrow. Confidence was expressed tonight by Senator Reed that Mexico would not oppose his appearance although it holds that an officer of its government is not bound to answer senate subpoenas. Elias will appear, it is understood here, in response to a request of the state department which is cooperating with the senate committee.

Others who have been subpoenaed are Dudley Field Malone, New York lawyer; Victor Watson, managing editor of the New York Mirror, a Hearst publication; George Hinman who until recently was correspondent in Mexico City for a Hearst press service, and John Page, under whose by-line the articles on Mexican affairs are appearing in Hearst papers.

Pending a determination of the extent to which the special committee will go in its inquiry, the senate foreign relations committee delayed action today on the resolution of Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, proposing a more comprehensive investigation of the authenticity of all the documents reproduced in the Hearst newspapers. It was the feeling of the foreign relations committee that the special committee has power to make this investigation without additional authority from the senate.

D. C. STEPHENSON'S THIRD APPEARANCE BEFORE JURY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 14—(AP)—D. C. Stephenson, former Klan chieftain and now a life convict, made his third appearance today before the Marion county grand jury which for more than a year has been delving into charges of political corruption in Indiana.

The former "dragon" was bought here by automobile from the Michigan City state prison without preliminary announcement of his coming.

Stephenson spent several hours in the grand jury room. No intimation of what occurred, however, was made public. After he had been before the jurors more than three hours, Lloyd O. Hill, one of his attorneys, was called into the room.

It was believed the grand jury sought evidence from Stephenson to substantiate recent statements that he had not told all he knew regarding alleged political corruption. In a recent court action he asserted he was being improperly treated in prison in an effort to prevent his telling more of what he knew.

Within recent months Gov. Ed. Jackson, John L. Duvall, former mayor of Indianapolis, six Indianapolis councilmen, George V. Coffin, Marion county republican chairman and several others have been indicted by the grand jury.

AT LEAST 5,000 DEATHS IN LATEST REVOLT IN CANTON

SHANGHAI, Dec. 14—(AP)—Due to the interruption of communications from Canton as result of disorders attendant on its seizure by radicals and recapture by nationalists, details of the engagement were meager today.

However, dispatches from Canton to various sources indicate that the death toll in last night's nationalist coup, which were at first stated as probably not exceeding 4,000, will reach 5,000 at least.

Although nationalist authority has been reestablished police headquarters had not yet been taken at last reports. Chinese reds with a few Russians were maintaining a determined stand there.

Disorders continued but were considerably lessened. Numerous incendiary fires were burning. An unknown number of reds have been executed.

Japanese dispatches today state that dawn revealed countless dead bodies littering the streets. They also state that labor union headquarters were razed and innumerable shops looted. Those few that remained untouched were heavily barricaded. A thousand houses were burned, according to the Japanese dispatches.

NO ACTION TAKEN BY AMOSKEAG WORKERS

MANCHESTER, N. H., Dec. 14—(AP)—The Amoskeag workers' congress failed to take any action on the company's announcement of a ten per cent wage reduction today because of Agent W. HOUSE VOTES TO REPEAL THE SALES TAX ON AUTOMOBILES

Complete Elimination of the Measure From the Revenue Bill Was Voted 166 to 142—A Roll Call Vote on Elimination of the Tax Can Be Demanded Just Before the Bill Comes Up For Passage—Repeal Would Result in a Loss of $33,000,000 Revenue—House Voted to Retain the Federal Inheritance Levy—Tilson Warned Members to Be Careful in the Adoption of Amendments Lest the "Entire Program of Tax Reduction" Be Defeated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Two major voting engagements in the house today resulted in the retention of the federal inheritance levy in the revenue bill and the complete elimination from the measure of the sales tax on automobiles.

The vote to repeal the automobile tax was 166 to 142. It was taken by members passing down the aisle between tellers. On a previous standing vote the chair had counted an even 120 on each side of the question.

The motion of eliminate the automobile sales tax over protest of a majority of the ways and means committee, which in drafting the bill provided for a reduction in the levy from 3 to 1 1-2 per cent., was made by Representative McLaughlin of Michigan, a republican on the committee. It was supported by a number of republicans and practically the solid democratic membership.

It is estimated complete repeal of the tax would result in a loss of $33,000,000 in revenue. Under house rules a roll call vote on elimination of the tax can be demanded just before the bill comes up for passage.

The house in voting, 191 to 55, to retain the inheritance tax sustained its action of two years ago. The motion to repeal the levy was made by Representative Merritt, republican, Connecticut, and the proposal drew support from both democratic and republican ranks.

It was argued that Secretary Mellon had recommended repeal of the tax and that a number of state legislatures had petitioned congress to abandon the field of inheritance taxes in favor of the states. Members from Florida, which has no estate tax, were particularly active in seeking repeal of the federal levy which was defended by Chairman Green, of the ways and means committee. Green charged that a concerted effort had been made by a number of persons, prompted by selfish motives, to eliminate the levy and that $500 bills had been "floated" around in the cause of its repeal.

The chairman declared that he wishes he had time to tell the house the "whole story" of the widespread propaganda that had been employed against the tax and how the expenses of a number of witnesses appearing before the committee to urge its abolition had been paid.

After the house had voted repeal of the automobile tax, representative Tilson, the republican leader, warned members to be careful in the adoption of amendments lest the "entire program of tax reduction" be defeated. He said that too many amendments would threaten the financial condition of the treasury.

Representative Garner, of Texas, democratic leader on the ways and means committee replied that the house only yesterday had adopted an amendment that would add about $24,000,000 in revenue. He chided republicans about the presence of Under-Secretary Ogden Mills of the treasury in the chamber, declaring that the "teacher had been in school only this one time today."

Approval was given by the house to the provisions exempting admissions of one dollar or less from the ten per cent federal tax, reducing from 10 to 5 per cent the tax on club dues and increasing from 10 to 25 per cent the tax on prize fight admission tickets of $5 or more.

A proposal by Representative Rainey, of Illinois, a democrat on the ways and means committee, to repeal all admission taxes except those on prize fights was cast into the discard. Another Rainey motion to remove the admission tax on tickets to the "legitimate drama" was rejected by a vote of 124 to 81.

The house also turned down an amendment by Representative Bloom, democrat, New York, to reduce all admission taxes fifty per cent. under present law admissions of 75 cents or less are exempt from the federal law.

The vote on the inheritance tax was the first action of the day. It came after two hours of debate during which Green called attention of the house to a statement in President Coolidge's message regarding the activities of special interests.

The ways and mean committee chairman declared that in his opinion the propaganda in favor of repeal of the estate levy was widespread and that many state legislators in voting to ask congress to repeal the tax failed to understand fully the situation.

Merritt asked him if the propaganda he spoke of had influenced President Coolige in advocating repeal of the levy, and Green replied that the president's position on the tax had been misrepresented.

OKLA. SENATE MEETS AS AN IMPEACHMENT COURT

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 14—(AP)—Proceeding rapidly as a court of impeachment, the state senate late today voted to receive charges made by the house of representatives against Gov. Henry S. Johnston and two other state officials, without immediately suspending them from office.

Decision not to suspend the accused officials was made in an effort to avoid the possibility of a dual government, if Gov. Johnston ignored the suspension and the senate recognized the automatic succession of Lieut. Gov. W. J. Holloway to the executive chair.

Under the rule adopted, the governor and those accuse with him, Chief Justice Fred P. Branson of the state supreme court, and Harry E. Cordell, president of the state board of agriculture, will be suspended automatically when their trials begin.

Disregarding the warning of the governor that it had permission to meet only as a group of citizens, and not as an impeachment body, the senate met in its chamber at the capitol in a peaceful atmosphere. National guardsmen who last Monday prevented the house from meeting in the capitol had been withdrawn, and no effort was made to disperse the senate meeting.

Upon convening this afternoon, the senate by a vote of 23 to 12 reaffirmed its power to meet as an impeachment court and charges were presented by the house board of managers.

WEST POINT PROFESSOR SHOT AND KILLED HIMSELF

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Major Charles L. Byrne, professor at the United States Military academy shot and killed himself some time during last night. According to police, his body was discovered today in a stone quarry near the academy.

GOV'T. REGULATION OF SOFT COAL INDUSTRY DISCUSSED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Government regulations of the bituminous coal industry was under discussion today at the conference of operators and labor leaders called here by Secretary Davis of the labor department.

With the permission of the labor men and of the operators, who are not completely represented because of the refusal of several companies to participate in the conference, Secretary Davis issued a statement saying that after reviewing the conditions of overproduction and wage rate controversies and conferences had considered methods of bettering conditions for both workers and employers.

The conference was called to consider means of settling labor troubles in the bituminous fields of Pennsylvania, Ohio and northern West Virginia.

"It is tentatively suggested," Mr. Davis' statement said, "that if the coal industry is to take its place as a going concern among other great industries, there is choice of but two ways in that direction.

"Either the industry may be left to sink of its own weight in the morass in which it now it." The stronger elements may be left to absorb the insolvents, on the principle of the survival of the fittest. The desired stabilization of the industry would thus be attained, but at fearful costs to those too weak to survive and with further hardship to labor during the process.

"Or congress, which alone has power to act, may heed the suggestion which President Coolidge has twice offered in his messages. The president suggested a special arbitration commission to act in emergency when the nation's supply of coal is threatened."

Mr. Davis estimated that more than 100,000 miners were now on strike, and that "many coal companies are insolvent or going into the hands of a receiver.

NO INCREASES IN TUITION FOR W. H. S. NON-RESIDENT PUPILS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 14—Tuition of out of town pupils at Windham High school will not be increased for the school year 1928 and 29 it was voted at the meeting of the town school committee at its December meeting held tonight. The tuition fee will remain at $110 a year despite the increase in educational costs. The vote not to increase was based on the supposition that the establishment of a trade school here would prevent an overflow in registrations in the high school. About half of the high school registration is represented by pupils from surrounding towns.

Secretary Elbert A. Case presented final enumeration figures for te year, the total being 3,507. While it was said in some accounts that the enumeration had dropped from that of the past two years, Secretary Case explained that in 1926 and '26 the enumerators had taken the names of children leaving the city and entering the city during the period of removal and changes following the Thread company strike here. This made a double registration. The increase in the enumeration this year is compared with the enumeration in 1925 which was 3460.

Announcement was made that the board of selectmen were to issue a call for a special town meeting to be held next Wednesday night when the voters will be asked to take action on an appropriation of approximately $53,000 for the establishment of a trade school here and the purchase of a building suitable for the work and meeting the requirements of the state board. In this connection Frederick C. Trinder, of Hartford, state director of vocational training and a state architect will be here next Monday to give a price on the proposed building.

Two tuition matters were taken up, one was the petition of a resident whose child boards and is being educated out of town, who requested that tuition be paid for the child. To avoid establishing a precedent, the board voted to take no action. The second petition was from the parents of a pupil attending school here and earning board here who requested to be free from paying the tuition fee. The aprents reside in Columbia. The board voted to take the matter up with the state board of education and abide by the decision of that body.

The resignation of Miss Day, of Norwich, as member of the Natchaug grammar school faculty was accepted and the appointment of Mrs. Olive Caswell Robinson to fill the vacancy for the remainder of the year was confirmed. The Liberty Hill men's club donated $15 to the church fund for repairs on buildings.

The mercury stood at 55 degrees on Monday with bright sun most of the day. It is very muddy traveling. Wells are full and water is in the cellars. The cellars here have good drainage, but where there is not, a siphon or pump will go the work.

A garden or lawn hose of sufficient length to reach from a cellar to lower ground first should be filled with water and then plug tight each end and after placing the hose, one end in the water and the other end on lower ground, by removing the plugs will draw the water no matter how high the center of hose is. This may be a benefit to some who who don't know how to use a siphon.

DANIELSON

OFFICER WEEPS AS HE PLEADS GUILTY TO LARCENY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 14.—The spectacle of a police officer of the borough of Danielson, in uniform, weeping and pleading guilty to larceny in the town court this morning, left those who witnessed the scene more or less sympathetic and wholly puzzled as to how such strange things happen in life.

Officer Arthur DeForest, on regular night duty for more than a year, stripped of his badge and after hours in a cell, stood before Judge W. Fenner Woodward and pleaded guilty, on four counts, to taking money from a small change box that is kept in the cigar case on the desk in the office of the Attawaugan hotel.

Officer DeForest was arrested at 2:30 this morning by State Officers Irving H. Nelson and Emil Castagne, of the Danielson barracks, after a weary vigil that had lasted since just before the previous midnight.

On a number of occasions of late change has been missed from the little cash box. So regular and persistent were the losses, always small, that Landlord William S. Brown decided to set a watch over the office, which is darkened after midnight, there being no night clerk.

Last night, just prior to the closing of the hotel, the state officers mentioned, secretly made their way into the hotel by a rear entrance and made ready to take up their vigil. Officer Nelson and Mr. Brown secreted themselves in a closet through the door of which was a little hole giving them a view of the cigar case. Officer Castagne took up his position in an alleyway between the hotel and the Shumway block in a place where he could look through a window to where the cigar case was located.

Officer Nelson and Mr. Brown almost stifled in their close quarters, while Officer Castagne stood out in the pouring rain in a lonely wait for developments. At about 1:30, Officer DeForest, having covered regular beats, let himself into the office of the hotel with a pass key, that he regularly carries that he may assign transients who happen along in the early hours of the morning to the rooms if they desire accommodations. Officer DeForest was not under suspicion of the watchers and his entrance was not taken as unusual. However, the state officers and Mr. Brown kept up their silent vigil. After a time Officer DeForest made a tour out through a hall and into the kitchen of the hotel, thence into the dining room and restaurant and finally back into the office. Nearly an hour elapsed after his entrance to the hotel before his watchers saw him go to the cigar case, open it and take out change which he placed in his pocket. Both state officers witnessed the taking of the money.

At once Officer Castagne came in from beneath the deluge to rap at the office door and Officer Nelson and Mr. Brown emerged from their dark closet. Lieut. Ross Urquhart, of the Danielson barracks, Chief John McFarland, of the borough police, were summoned. Money previously marked and placed in the cigar case was delivered up by Officer DeForest, who offered no defense other than "I do not know why I did it." He was taken to the police station, relieved of his badge by Chief McFarland and locked in a cell for the remainder of the night.

In court this morning, DeForest pleaded guilty to taking money from the cigar case on four different occasions. On the first count he was fined $25 and costs, and on each of the other three counts, given a jail sentence of 30 days, a total of 90, the execution of the jail sentence being suspended. DeForest wept bitterly over the situation in which he found himself. Chief McFarland said after the hearing that Officer DeForest had been summarily discharged from the department. Special Officer Hosea Greene went on duty tonight at 6 o'clock.

Unfortunate as the entire situation is, there is ample sympathy for Officer DeForest in the deplorable situation that has caused his downfall. He has been an able and efficient officer. He has a splendid World war record as a volunteer. His arrest gave Danielson the biggest surprise in months. There is deep and widespread sympathy for him—wonder and surprise that he should have been so weak. His haul last night amounted to only $5.80. In all it can hardly amount to $20. All and all, as really sad a happening as recent local events record.

BURGLARS ATTEMPT BREAK IN FURNACE ST. STORE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 14.—A break and an attempt at a break were reported to state police officers here this morning. Forcing an entrance into the offices of the General Supply and General Eclipse companies, on Furnace street, a dark and isolated and deserted section in the early morning hours, burglars opened the safe, ransacked desks and record cases, but, insofar as a check-up indicates, took nothing of value.

Papers were strewn about and the office generally mussed up. The safe, it is understood, was not what might be described as fully locked, though the combination was partly turned. This may account for the intruders getting the safe door open so easily.

At the office of Young Bros., on Mechanic street, an attempt at a break was made, but whether the burglars were frightened away or gave up their attempt at entrance for some other reason is not known.

State officers were engaged during today in an effort to obtain clues that might be of value in establishing the responsibility for the untoward affairs of the night.

Incident to the sale of Christmas seals now underway in Danielson, attention is called to the fact that 85 per cent. of all the revenue obtained here will remain here. This revenue is spent for the rehabilitation of sufferers from tuberculosis and in other similarly good causes. It may be mentioned that out of the money obtained from the sale of th seals in Danielson last Christmas time, 1291 quarts of milk were purchased for patients, the cost of two operations—$55.60—was paid and two months' salary of the visiting nurse—$200—paid. These are some of the worthy things done with seal money here, but numerous others might be set down.

Deputy Game Warden Gordon E. Withey is staying right up front among those who are in line for fox hunting honors this season. This morning he, knocked off the fourth "red one" that he has brought in since early fall. Asking Warden Withey how many foxes he has shot in the many, many years that he has enjoyed going after them, brings no boastful reply. "I don't know," says te warden—"haven't kept track of them." It's a great many, however, about as many as anybody in Windham county who has hunted an equal length of time can claim.

There is the possibility, it was indicated today, that there will be advocacy soon after the first of the year for restoration of the plan of having two patrolmen on duty in Danielson at night. It is held by numbers of business men that one officer, no matter how vigilant or brave, cannot watch the business section at late periods of the night as closely as they would like to see it watched. The advent of the motor age, the development of so many desperate characters, the trend of the times, are all considerations back of the suggestion that Danielson have two night officers on duty regularly. It is a matter that will rest for the present, but among the things that will be talked about after the coming of the new year.

December continued to make unusual weather records today, the maximum temperature this afternoon being 65 degrees.

Manager William Sangster, of the Danielson division of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, said this morning that in changing the traffic light over the intersection of Broad and Reynolds streets—a danger point—from red to amber, that an effort was being made to determine whether the new light will be more satisfactory than the old, and he desires expressions of opinion on the change. At the time the red light has been taken for a stop signal, and has held up cars and trucks for as much as half an hour.

Of interest to many is the announcement that The Norwich Evening Record, now published each afternoon by The Bulletin Co., will be available on Danielson newsstands within a few days.

An additional first class barber now on duty at Moses Bassett's Attawaugan hotel barber shop.—adv.

Sidney W. Bard, Attorney E. L. Darbie and A. W. Williams were at New Haven for the dedication of the new Masonic temple to be occupied by eleven lodges of the order in that city. Grand masters of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island were in attendance, and, in all, a total of 44 grand officers.

Officers-elect of Killingly grange gathered at the home of Walter G. Bruce and took part in a thorough discussion on the general subject of Grange Welfare. Mr. Bruce, who heads the grange this year, outlined a progressive plan of activity for 1928, and enlisted the support of his associate officers to put his ideas in practice. The third and fourth degrees are to be conferred at a meeting next Monday evening. The Home Economics committee, headed by Mrs. Ella Spaulding, is to have charge of serving the refreshments. Music by an orchestra will feature the evening.

Past Master Harriet L. Wood, who is to be lecturer the coming year, has outlined the literary program and will have it in the hands of the printer by the first of the year.

Humanity surges forward over the fallen. Today Chief John McFarland received an untold number of applications for appointment as night officer, and has all of the applications under consideration—and there are many of them.

At the Goodyear church last Sunday Rev. Charles A. Downs preached from the text Psalm 98:12—"So teach us to number our days that we may get an heart of Wisdom." In the course of the sermon the thought was expressed that religion is somewhat like a bank, in that we draw out of it in accordance with what we put in. At the service William Norton sang an offertory solo.

Of interest to all prospective builders and employers of these particular classifications of highly skilled labor, was the formal announcement in this morning's Bulletin that the wage of the members of the bricklayers', masons' and plasterers' crafts in Danielson and the union jurisdiction under the Danielson charters is to be advanced to $1.25 per hour. This is on the basis of $10 per eight-hour day

PUPILS PRESENT PLAY FOR PARENT-TEACHERS

PUTNAM, Dec. 14—The regular meeting of the Parents-Teacher association was held Tuesday evening at the auditorium of the Putnam high school. After the business meeting, a program was presented by the pupils of the school and consisted of music, readings, a French play, a scene from The Merchant of Venice and a gymnastic drill by the girls of the school.

At St. Mary's church on Monday morning, Miss Marion Bateman, stepdaughter of Franklin P. Christman of Center street was married to Paul Aubin of Providence street. The nuptial high mass was said by Rev. U. O. Bellerose, the pastor. The attendants were Mr. Christman and Peter Martin of Meadow street. Mr. and Mrs. Aubin leave Thursday for New Jersey where Mr. Aubin is employed. The mother of the bride died about two years ago and she made her home with her stepfather.

The local American Legion post has issued the following notice: To the soldiers and sailors of the World war, those who are entitled to receive adjusted compensation of "bonus" should make application at once, as the government will consider no applications after this month. Acting with the Anselym Mayotte post of the American Legion, the Cargill Trust company offers its services to all who are entitled to this compensation, in filling out the necessary papers.

The following officers and committees elected at the annual meeting on Monday evening by the Putnam chapter, American Red Cross for the coming year: Chairman, George W. Baker; vice chairman, Charles A. Richard; secretary, Miss Edith C. Bowen; treasurer, Miss Emma M. Roberts; executive committee, Miss Katherine Byrne, Mrs. E. C. Morse, Miss Ellen M. Wheelock, J. J. Dupre, Mrs. Statt McDonald, Mrs. C. E. Richardson, Miss Jennie Willis, Martin Robertson, Clarence E. Pierce, Miss Harriet Lewis of Thompson, Mrs. Dyer S. Elliott of North Grosvenordale, Miss Minnie F. Keyes of Pomfret, Mrs. George M. Sampson of Woodstock, Mrs. William Reddy of Dayville. Production committee, Miss Ellen M. Wheelock, Mrs. A. V. Frost, Mrs. George M. Sampson, Miss Jennie Willis, Miss Charlotte Manning; nursing committee, Mrs. E. C. Morse, Miss Ellen Wheelock, Mrs. A. E. Parent, Mrs. Marion Robillard, Miss Jennie Willis, Miss Elizabeth Child, Mrs. C. E. Richardson, Mrs. George A. Rawley, Mrs. Statt Macdonald, Mrs. Arthur cushaw, Miss Viola Snyder; publicity agent, Arthur S. Macdonald.

The reports show that during the past year there has been a steady increase in the Red Cross service in this community, the nursing service has reached more homes than ever before. Storms and floods have created needs outside of Putnam which the chapter have gladly met. During the year, a school nurse has been hired for the rural districts of Woodstock and the chapter gladly voted to refund to Woodstock the money collected there from the roll call to be used for this nursing service.

Miss Katherine Byrne was made chairman of the flood relief committee and will gladly receive any contributions of clothing, money, toys, etc.

The board of selectmen of the town of Thompson with the two newly elected members of that board have organized with George E. Whitney as chairman, Joseph A. Fontaine as second selectman and George Eles as the third member of the board.

Immediately upon organization the board started the work of paying bills which have been held up for the last six weeks while the town was without the necessary three members of the board of selectmen. It is thought that the work will take the greater part of a week because of the fact that the payments have been held up and many bills have accumulated during that time.

Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R., at its monthly meeting Monday afternoon was honored by the presence of four state officers, State Regent Miss Katherine A. Nettleton of Derby, State Vice Regent Miss Emeline A Street of New Haven, State Historian Mrs. Lawrence Mouat of New Britain and Mrs. Mary B. Bishop, a member of the local chapter. Miss Nettleton gave a report of the national and state organizations, emphasizing particularly the plans for the coming year. Miss Street spoke on Americanization work as being conducted by the daughters of this state, and Mrs. Mouat had for her subject, "Out Where the West Begins," giving an account of California and its early history. The program was intermpered by a musical program. Miss Alice Stevens and Mrs. Mary Medbury sang a duet and Miss Stevens, Mrs. Medbury and Mrs. A. A. Cross sang a trio with Miss Gertrude Warner at the piano.

The chapter voted its usual appropriation of a gold medal for the history prize at the Putnam high school, and $10 toward the films for the moving pictures at the Second Congregational church, providing that the organization of the town make a similar appropriation. One half of the proceeds of the recent rummage sale held by the chapter, amounting to $75.30 be given toward the public library fund.

In the tournament of the Elks and Masons, the Elks are now well ahead, the Masons having suffered their worst defeat of the season at the hands of the Elks in the series of Monday night. THE NAVAL PLAN

It was inevitable that talk about a billion dollar plan for naval construction, to be presented to the present congress for action, should occasion much discussion. As a matter of fact such a plan has not as yet been submitted, but one has been sent to congress by the secretary of the navy which would call for the expenditure of $700,000,000 or more over a term of years for the building of cruisers, destroyers, submarines and air craft carriers.

Submitting such a programme and getting it through are different things. Whatever the final disposition of the idea, its presentation furnishes ground for raising the question as to whether this country is going to take the position of engaging in such naval construction as to arouse the suspicion of other countries and cause them to resume the undesirable competition.

It is to be realized that any such programme would extend over a period of years and when completed would not give us any more naval vessels than we would be entitled to and probably not as great a naval strength as Great Britain.

It comes, however, after an effort has been made to bring about disarmament and after it has been announced from London that only one of three authorized cruisers is to be laid down this year. This country refrained from authorizing as large a naval outlay in the last congress in order to see what might be accomplished at Geneva. The tripartite conference got nowhere and now it is a case where our naval requirements must get the necessary attention. This country has no desire to discourage disarmament efforts, but if a better understanding of what can be accomplished through a limitation agreement can be furnished through the presentation of naval plans which we are justified in carrying out, it is possible that it will indicate to other countries the desirability of extending limitation as sought at Geneva. The feature of the plan authorizing the president to suspend construction in his discretion cannot be overlooked.

UNDER LEAGUE INFLUENCE

It is the most natural thing in the work that the friends of the league of nations should be making much of the result of the meeting of the representatives of Poland and Lithuania. It might be stretching it a bit to say that it really prevented a war between the two countries, but there's no getting away from the fact that it temporarily at least disposed of a threatening situation and started the people of those countries to thinking of peace rather than war.

Getting right down to the facts the premiers of the two countries solved the matter themselves, with such encouragement as certain of the other attendants gave at the right time, but might mustn't be lost of the fact that there was an organization before which such difficulties could be placed and to which the countries were ready to send representatives.

For the friends of the league to claim the league did it is only natural. The countries were not ready to clash but they faced conditions which have led to serious trouble in the past. They have now agreed to an adjustment of their troubles by peaceful methods and the influence of the league was certainly thrown in that direction. It may be some time before an agreement is effected, but the departure from the idea that a settlement is possible only through a resort to war has been made and the more often it can be done the quicker will it be thought of and resorted to when similar affairs bob up in the future.

Had the influence of the league failed to bring about an amicable settlement it would have been looked upon as a test of the league that resulted unfavorably. Inasmuch as the outcome was just what it should be and means the best has happened for all concerned there can be no disposition to withhold such credit as the league deserves. It existed as a peacemaker before which just such international problems are expected to be brought and it must be given credit for the outcome even though it is realized that both premiers were desirous of talking peace.

While certain of the southern states where the lynching spirit has prevailed to a greater or lesser extent have shown a disposition to apply restraint, it calls for effective control on the part of the authorities when a crisis develops if lawlessness is to be suppressed.

A case which has received much attention was that at Goldsboro, N. C., where a young Negro was under trial for causing the death of a girl. Unwilling to wait for the completion of the evidence in a case where there seemed to be no doubt of conviction, relatives of the dead girl planned and tried to accomplish the removal of the accused from the court room while the trial was underway. It failed and the schemers were restrained. The trial proceeded with the judge displaying a revolver on his desk and with the state troopers doing duty in the court room.

Within a short time the case was submitted to the jury and in less than a half hour it has brought in a verdict of guilty, followed by the imposition of a sentence of execution early next month.

Through the manner in which the authorities of North Carolina stood by the laws of that commonwealth the mob was prevented from placing a blot on the good name of that state, where it must be said in all fairness lynching has never received the encouragement that has existed in some of the other states. It was an example to other states and their officials who have submitted to mob demands under similar circumstances and witnessed not only the shooting or hanging of accused persons but also the burning of their bodies.

Had the mob at Goldsboro been permitted to have its way the accused, without being convicted, would probably be in his grave. Through the compliance with the legal process it will be only a matter of a few days before he will be put to death in the manner prescribed by the laws of the state, and it is greatly to the credit of the courts and the authorities of North Carolina that they insisted upon such a course.

LINDBERGH'S FLIGHT

On his 2,000 mile flight to Mexico City Charles A. Lindbergh is the first one to go from the capital of the United States to the capital of Mexico through the air without a stop. It was another one of those air trips that held the interest of many millions of people, for while it was different in character, shorter and involving different hazards than his famous non-stop flight from New York to Paris there were nevertheless sufficient dangers to make it more than an ordinary aviation flight. This was clearly indicated by the handicaps which he encountered both as to weather and the mountains and the difficulties which arose in locating the Mexican capital.

Lindbergh went to Mexico in response to the invitation from President Calles. There was the utmost confidence that he would succeed in his flight in view of the previous records but there is equally good reasons for believing that he will also succeed as a messenger of good will, for the reception which he got in Mexico City was in keeping with the great outburst at Paris, and with plenty more to come.

With Lindy expressing the hope that the flight would mean the establishing of better flying conditions between the two countries and the stimulation of interest in aviation, there is no question but what the greatest inspiration to that very thing is furnished by just such a flight as he has accomplished. And the successful flights which he has made demonstrate above all that what he has done is not all luck. There's the skillful, cool, courageous and confident navigator of the air back of it all who can put another feather in his cap.

THE FLOOD'S EFFECT

What the flood did to the state of Vermont is only gradually being understood. It is known that much destruction was caused, that hardships were experienced and great inconvenience resulted, but the effect upon the industry, railroads, city and farm life has never been fully realized. Vermont has suffered in a different way than did the people of the Mississippi valley.

Only a few days ago an appeal was made to the legislature of the state of Vermont for financial assistance for a small railroad in the northern part of the state. It was regarded as an unusual procedure but it was held to be vital to the people of the valley it served that it should be provided with the means of continuing.

At the same time the condition of the Central Vermont was reflected in the declaration that 33 of its bridges had been swept away. That would be bad enough for a railroad with a good sized surplus, but when nothing of the kind prevails the situation is different. The result is the Central Vermont goes into the hands of receivers. The flood created conditions which it was not able to restore and it is now necessary to bow to the inevitable and probably some kind of a reorganization for the railroad is also necessary and means of reestablishing its line must be had.

Such represents only a part of the loss caused by the flood, estimated in Vermont at $30,000,000, but where railroads are involved it concerns a large part of the population of that state and also those in states on all sides of the commonwealth who rely upon transportation facilities through it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

This month's trading means a raft of bills for the mail man the first of the year.

Will the Lindbergh flight be the forerunner of a series of non-stop flights to Mexico City?

The Congressional Record has made its appearance again with its big volume of reading matter.

The man on the corner says: Isn't it a bit late to think of doing your Christmas shopping early?

On that flight to Mexico, Lindbergh piled in a big quantity of good will without the plane becoming overloaded.

No one would ever suspect that there was such a need for filling up the rivers and brooks so that winter could set in.

While deeply interested in preparing to distribute your Christmas cheer you shouldn't forget a supply of the Christmas seals.

It seems to have been a fairly easy matter to establish peace between Poland and Lithuania, but the next thing is to make it stick.

Perhaps you haven't considered the effects of the Vermont flood as serious as constantly developing conditions are now disclosing, but it isn't too late to help.

THE RITUAL OF NUMBER 23.

It's between Randolph and Washington on the west sidewalk of Michigan avenue, near the curb—a dull, dirty affair about two feet square, and its numerical message is 53.

To motor coach passengers, any one of several numbers painted at various places along the block are important as points of "embarkation." But to two particular folk number 53 was the one number in the block.

Every evening, precisely at 5:15, rain or shine, a boy and a girl turned north at the corner of Washington and Michigan and strode buoyantly to the middle of the block where number 53 was marked on the sidewalk. And every evening without fail the girl would plant her "number fours" on the five, the boy would plant his "number eights" on the threes, and they would both make a quarter-wheel spin toward each other. The result was that her back was turned to the library and his to the streaming home-going traffic. But the importance of that maneuver was that it brought the boy and girl face to face—eyes sparkling, lips smiling, hands clasping.

She was a trim little thing—all golden brown. He was a big fellow, dark and clean cut. And to the two of them standing close together on number 53, jabbering and laughing as only two young things can jabber and laugh, the weary-eyed, grim-faced jostling crowds did not exist. Number 53 was a desert island.

She always looked like a little brown rabbit as she scampered up the precarious stairway to the upper deck of the coach. Then, after disappearing a minute, she would reappear next to the window in the very last seat. And always, before the coach pulled away, one could just make out a shadowy black arm reaching around a brown shoulder.

As the months passed—with days of snow, drenching rain, golden sunshine, the drowsiness of early summer—it became a sort of ritual, this performance on number 53. But with each passing month the laughter grew less bubbly, the eyes less sparkly, the hands more groping. There was a barely perceptible quiver to the lips, a somber look of inquiry in the eyes, a feverish pressure of the hands.

Then came a night when the ritual of number 53 was omitted—when the eyes of the boy flashed angrily into the eyes of the girl—when a sneer instead of a smile curled his lips as she stood, white and grim, facing him—when she stumbled blindly to the upper deck of the coach, and he found a solitary seat downstairs.

And the next evening, when steamy white clouds moved sluggishly beneath a faded blue sky, she turned the corner of Washington and Michigan alone. Her face was drawn and haggard, her eyes stared ahead unseeing, her whole body drooped, as with an invisible burden. Yet, with the perverseness of habit, she walked to number 53, placed her "number fours" on the five and made a quarter-wheel spin toward a grimy coach conductor yelling "All aboard! Ravenswood coach — watch your step." In the frantic pushing and shoving that followed, she disappeared.

Five minutes later he rounded the corner anxiously, nervously scanning the faces of the surging crowd. Glistening beads of perspiration stood out upon his forehead, and he was breathing quickly as though he had been running and his hands twitched convulsively.

At least a half dozen number 53 coaches had passed. The crowds had dwindled and disappeared. The clouds had grown darker and puffier. A few large rain drops splashed on his face—on the sidewalk. Only then did he realize the futility of waiting longer.

A week passed, during which the number 53 on the sidewalk looked oddly wan and dismal. The coach conductor scanned the crowd in vain for the two young things who had always waited for his coach. And even some of the regular passengers sensed an incompleteness—an intangible something missing.

It was one of those cool, sparkling "Lake Michigan" days. A flash of gray and white whisked around the corner of Washington and Michigan at precisely 5:15. The boy and girl, arm in arm, strode buoyantly to the middle of the block where number 53 was marked on the sidewalk. It was all quite as though nothing had happened.

But—something had happened! For, as she stepped daintily on number five and he moved to number three, neither of them seemed to be standing on this shoddy old earth. Number 53 was a fluffy cloud, and all around them was the iridescent sky.

There was a quarter wheel spin—a joyous laugh that thrilled even the weary home-goers, and then—a "star" flashed in the sunlight.—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Remonstrance

Mr. Editor: An article on the first page of today's Bulletin, to my mind, calls for some remonstrance. The New York League for Moderation gives some surprising figures concerning the increase of alcoholic drinking during the past two years.

Certainly there has not been more drinking during the past eight years than before the prohibition law came into effect. In 1924 there were 28,000,000 more savings bank depositors than in 1917. How could that happen without the ceasing of some great waste in many homes?

In the last four wet years in New York city, there were 2061 deaths from alcoholic poison, while in the first four dry years there were 835.

At Bellevue hospital, before prohibition, the number of alcoholic patients treated was in excess of 15,000 a year. Last year they treated about 6000.

But, should it be true that there is an alarming increase in the use of intoxicants, that does not prove the law is not a good one, or that it will not eventually be enforced.

In 1842 a law was passed in Great Britain, forbidding boys of tender years to climb chimneys as sweepers. In the house of common it was declared that British housewives would employ the sweepers regardless of law, and a lively traffic in these boy workers sprang up and was not entirely checked until 32 years later, when a law sufficiently stringent was passed, to end it.

In our own country, a striking example is that of the African slave trade. It became illegal to import them in 1807, but practice continued, and in the 30's 200,000 a year were brought over. In the late 50's, it was voted in a southern conference, to make a move for making the ban against importation, because it was cheaper to import grown men than to raise them.

In 1872 appeared in our Congressional Record, the last act against the slave trade. Because it took 54 years to enforce these laws, and because, sometimes, it made a fearful mess, our people did not quit the fight till victory was won.

These instances are given by Miss Tilton in the November issue of Current History magazine, and seem quite to the point.

Yours truly,
T. T.

Little Talks on Thrift

Some Examples.

We are standing today on the threshold of a new year when, more than at any other period, our thoughts turn to the deeper problems of personal progress. During the year our minds are very largely centered upon the immediate days work. But in these closing hours of 1927 we are looking down the road, as it were.

We do not subscribe to the belief that success in life is to be measured in terms of dollars, power or fame. We believe that any man or any woman who is leading a good life, in keeping with the true meaning of good citizenship, is a success. If this were not so, there could not be the progress that we see all about us.

But, for purposes of example, we can make use of the names of those whose success in life has made them well known. They illustrate the great truth that by adhering to practices of thrift it is possible to rise from the most lowly position to a place among the leaders in thought and action.

Frank W. Woolworth began life as a clerk in a store in Watertown, N. Y.

Cyrus H. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, started his career as a newsboy.

E. H. Harriman earned his first money as a clerk in a broker's office.

Andrew Carnegie began as a bobbin boy in a Pennsylvania cotton mill.

Charles M. Schwab was a clerk in a small store and later became driver for an engineering corps.

John Wanamaker began his career as an errand boy.

James J. Hill clerked in a steamship office.

Henry Ford was originally a Detroit machinist.

Thomas Edison began selling newspapers on trains running out of the same city when 12 years old.

The list might be continued indefinitely.

All success, small or great, must rest primarily on policies of thrift. Without it the start upward is never made.—American Society for Thrift.

Terror is Fooled

When plans of others are detected
We seldom face the unexpected.
—Old Mother Nature.

It is a fact that if we could always know what other people intended to do it would make a great difference. Then we would know exactly what to do ourselves. The most carefully laid plans may be entirely upset by what others may do.

Terror the Goshawk was reasonably sure that he knew just what Mr. and Mrs. Grouse would do if he should come walking in under the bough beneath which they were hiding. He was sure that they would instantly take to their stout wings and whirr away, and this was exactly what he wanted them to do. Then he would take to his swift wings, with a chance that he might overtake and catch one of them. It didn't enter his head that they wouldn't take to their stout wings. No, sir, it didn't enter his head.

"What do you mean by move?" demanded Peter

But Mr. and Mrs. Grouse didn't take to their wings at all. That is where they fooled Terror the Goshawk. Instead of taking to their wings, they took to their legs. You see, they knew that, good as their wings were, the wings of Terror were better. They knew also that their legs were better than the legs of Terror when it came to running. You know, in winter time they have regular snowshoes. They have feet made for the ground, anyway, while feet of the Hawk family are made for clinging to branches of trees or the edges of cliffs. They are not good walking or running feet.

So when they knew that they were discovered they darted out from underneath the bough, Mr. Grouse in the lead. My, how they did run! Of course, Terror tried to run after them, but he was awkward and ungainly. He tried to use his wings to help him along, so that really he was half flying. This would have been all right out on the Green Meadows, where no bushes could interfere. But here in the Green Forest his wings were in his way. You see, Mr. and Mrs. Grouse dodged in and out and around and about and really had no trouble at all in keeping out of his way. Though he did his best, he couldn't get near enough to frighten them into flying. Finally they slipped into a bramble tangle. It was a favorite bramble-tangle of Peter Rabbit's and Peter was in it at the time. Yes sir, Peter was in it at the time.

"Excuse us!" said Mr. Grouse, when he discovered Peter there, "I didn't know anybody was in this bramble-tangle. We wouldn't have come here if we had known you were here. As it is, I think we shall have to stay a while."

Peter looked out and saw Terror the Goshawk. "Stay as long as you want to," said he. "There is plenty of room for all three of us. What is that fellow doing on the ground?"

"Chasing us," replied Mrs. Grouse. "You know, Peter, I think we have got to move."

"What do you mean by move?" demanded Peter.

"I mean," replied Mrs. Grouse, "that if Terror stays here in the Green Forest, or in this part of the Green Forest, Mr. Grouse and I just must go somewhere else. Why, we don't even get enough to eat. I never did have any use for hunters with terrible guns, but I do wish one would come along now with one and shoot that fellow. I do so!"

POETRY

Father's Task

When Father leaves the house for work
each morning,
He meditates upon the bills ahead;
The winter's coal, the interest on the mortgage,
And all the little mouths that must be fed.

His overcoat—it may be of the vintage
Of nineteen-twenty-three or twenty-four
With sleeves a little frayed and collar shabby—
He finds he still must wear it one year more.

At noon hour he may do his window shopping
Select the suit he hopes some day to buy—
A new gold watch, a car of latest model—
The things beyond his means, they catch his eye.

And then with Christmas not far in the distance,
He steels himself to lay some cash
aside,
That he may have for those he loves so dearly
The little gifts that make their Christmas
gladdie.

His budget grows above a shrinking income,
He cannot give his family all they ask
To make ends meet the higher cost of living
Is just a small part of Father's task.

Highland Mary

Ye banks and braes and streams around the Castle o' Montgomery,
Green be your woods and fair your flowers, your waters never drumlie;
There simmer first unfolds her robes, and there the langest tarry,
For there I took the last farewell o' my sweet Highland Mary.

How sweetly bloomed, the gay green birk,
how rich the hawthorn's blossoms
As underneath their fragrant shade, I clasped her to my bosom!
The golden hours, on angel-wings flew o'er me and my dearie,
For dear to me as light and life, was my sweet Highland Mary.

Wi' mony a vow and locked embrace our parting was ful' tender
And pledged aft to meet again, we tore ourselves asunder;
But, O, fell death's untimely frost that nipt my flower sae early!
Now green's the sod and cauld's the clay that wraps my Highland Mary.

O! pale, pale now those rosy lips I aft
ha'e kissed sae fondly!
And closed for aye the sparkling glance that dwelt on me sae kindly!
And mould'ring now in silent dust that heart that lo'ed me dearly,
But still, within my bosom's core, shall live my Highland Mary.

WITHDRAWAL IN DOCTOR'S SUIT FOR $15,000 ON MALPRACTICE CLAIM

The four-year-old $15,000 malpractice suit brought by Dr. Anthony Crocicchia against Dr. E. Oliver Winship, both of New London, was withdrawn from the docket of the superior court here Wednesday morning just before it was to go on trial before Judge John R. Booth and a jury, when, it is understood, Dr. Winship reiterated former declarations that he would make absolutely no settlement, and counsel for Dr. Crocicchia, who, it is claimed, had previously evaded trial in order to effect a settlement, decided that the allegations made in the complaint could not be substantiated by the evidence. The withdrawal of the suit was considered by Dr. Winship and his friends as a complete vindication of the charges made by Dr. Crocicchia, and while Dr. Winship was anxious to have the suit go on trial to unquestionably establish that he was not guilty of the charges made, the present outcome of the case was accepted as complete exoneration.

The suit materialized four years ago after Dr. Winship had treated the right eye of Dr. Crocicchia. In the papers counsel for Dr. Crocicchia alleged that as a result of improper treatment of his eye by Dr. Winship, the sight of the eye was impaired, resulting in Dr. Crocicchia becoming blind in that eye.

Attorney G. Curtis Morgan first represented Dr. Crocicchia and the case was assigned for docket in the superior court. When, it is understood, counsel for the plaintiff was unsuccessful in arranging a settlement out of court, the case was continued on the docket several times, Attorney Morgan later withdrawing from the case.

A court order was finally issued, directing that the case be tried before January, 1928, and the case was assigned on the present docket of the superior court and scheduled to be tried Wednesday. Dr. Winship, it was said, insisted on the trial, and his counsel agreed to withdraw the case only after counsel for Dr. Crocicchia indicated that in view of the lack of evidence the case should be withdrawn.

In the court room Wednesday morning, ready to testify in behalf of Dr. Winship, were Dr. Thomas A. Woodruff, Dr. George P. Cheney, Dr. Hugh F. Lena, all of New London, and Dr. H. Davis, of New York, and Dr. Leon LaPierre, of Norwich. The testimony of these witnesses was planned to establish that the eye of Dr. Crocicchia was affected with an organic disease and that the same treatment given by Dr. Winship was administered at New York, where an operation was performed.

GAVE INTERESTING TALK TO ROTARY GOLFERS

"The Advantage of the Matched Set to the Golfer" was the topic of an interesting talk by Robert W. Adams of Providence at the luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club. Mr. Adams is an ardent student of the royal and ancient game and has devoted a large amount of time to the study of the weight and balance of clubs as suited to the individual natural swing of the player. It was on this point that Mr. Adams based his talk.

Every golf player has an individual swing and snap to the wrists, said Mr. Adams, which varies with his height, weight and flexibility of his muscles. Each one of these players has a favorite club, a mashie, niblick or driver, which he says feels the best to him. Now the chances are that this club is so balanced that it harmonizes with his stroke. That is, every player has a certain period of vibration the same as every club and to get the most out of a club the periods of vibration in body and club should harmonize. The advantage of the matched set is that every club is of the same weight and has the same period of vibration which gives the player the same feel in every club he uses. Mr. Adams illustrated his talk with a mechanical devise graphically illustrating his points. He also showed a set of clubs that he had rebuilt to suit his own style.

At the business session President Clarence A. Spear presided and John J. O'Rourke had a stormy session in attempting to lead the club in the singing.

Edwin A. Harris was the target for much good-natured joshing and many hearty congratulations upon the arrival of another son who made his appearance last Saturday. Mr. Harris said that the youngster had been named Paul Harris in honor of Paul Harris of Chicago, the founder of Rotary. The club presented a small gift to the proud father with instructions to give it to the boy with the warmest regards of the club.

A contribution to the radio fund for the Nurses' home at the Backus hospital was made as was the annual contribution to the Salvation Army.

Secretary Jewett read an entertaining letter from W. Clayton Burgy, former member of the local club and now a resident of St. Louis, containing greetings and a brief recital of happenings since Mr. Burgy's residence in the west.

Charles L. Taylor made a very enthusiastic report of the pet and hobby show given last Saturday under the auspices of the club. He also stated that this feature would become an annual event as the club was much encouraged by the interest shown in the first one.

PAYS $10 FINE FOR FAILING TO GIVE WAY

Pleading guilty to the charge of failing to grant the right of way, Walter Perka, of Taftville, was fined $10 in the city court Wednesday morning when he was presented there on account of a collision which his Ford truck had late Tuesday afternoon with a Packard owned by Mrs. Edwin Hellyar, of Scotland road, and driven by Joseph Duke. The accident happened at a point back of the car barn in Greeneville.

Perka was brought to police headquarters in the patrol wagon and Mr. Hellyar, who accompanied his wife there, made the charge against the man that he was under the influence of liquor. To substantiate the charge, physicians were called to police headquarters to examine Perka at the expense of Mr. Hellyar, according to a statement he made Wednesday night, but when they had completed their examination, they advised him it would be difficult to convict the man of the charge and he dropped it, but Perka was locked up on the charge of failing to grant the right of way.

The accident occurred when the machine operated by Perka which had been following a bus in a northern direction attempted to turn out. The Packard on its way to the city was struck and damage inflicted to its left rear hub cap and rear fender. The Ford also suffered considerable damage.

SUPREME COURT OPINION IN JENNES VS. CITY

The supreme court opinion in which it sustained the verdict of $4000 secured by Mrs. Elizabeth Jennes of Summit street against the city of Norwich has been received by Judge George E. Parsons, clerk of the court here. The opinion was written by Judge John W. Banks and is as follows:

The trial court found that between seven and eight o'clock on the morning of December 24, 1924, the plaintiff slipped and fell upon the sidewalk of Summit street in the city of Norwich, and received the injuries of which she complains; that the sidewalk at the spot where plaintiff fell was not reasonably safe for public travel, and had been in that condition since Dec. 19, 1924, due to structural defects in combinations with snow and ice formed thereon; that defendant had constructive notice of this condition a sufficiently long time prior to the accident to have remedied the defect but had failed to do so, and that plaintiff was in the exercise of due care at the time that she fell. The court further found that on the day on which plaintiff fell it began to rain about six o'clock in the morning, the rain freezing as it fell and covering the streets and sidewalks of the city with a solid sheet of glare ice, making them very slippery.

The appellant filed numerous requests to correct the finding by striking out certain paragraphs thereof and substituting therefor paragraphs of the draft finding. The reasons for the corrections requested are in nearly every case stated to be that the paragraph of the finding sought to be eliminated "were not proved by the evidence on the trial," and that the paragraphs sought to be substituted "were proved by the evidence on the trial." It would seem that it ought not to be necessary to reiterate, what we have said so frequently, that only when a fact is found without evidence will it be stricken from a finding, and only when a fact is undisputed or admitted will it be added to finding. This court will not retry questions of fact which have been decided by the trial court. The material facts which the appelant seeks to have corrected were found upon conflicting evidence and will not be corrected. The finding is corrected by the trial court fairly presents the only question of law upon the record, which is whether the storm of the morning of the accident and its results was the proximate cause of the plaintiff's fall. The slippery and dangerous condition of the streets and sidewalks of Norwich resulting from that storm had not existed for a long enough period prior to plaintiff's fall to give the city notice of the condition and a reasonable opportunity to remedy it. If, therefore, plaintiff's fall was proximately due to the results produced by that storm, the defendant cannot be held liable. The trial court found that the sidewalk at the point where plaintiff fell, was broken, patched, uneven, ridged and of varying grades; that it was in an extremely slippery and dangerous condition and not reasonably safe for public travel from the 19th to the 24th of December, and that this condition, of which the defendant had notice, was due to the structural defects in the walk in combination with the ice and snow formed thereon. Then came the storm of December 24th which covered the streets and sidewalks of the city with a solid sheet of glare ice. The plaintiff slipped upon the newly formed ice which covered the surface of the walk where it was broken and uneven and which had been in an unsafe condition for five days because of the old snow and ice which had accumulated upon it. The finding presents the case of a defect in the highway concurring with a natural cause to produce an injury. For the latter the city is not responsible and can be held liable only if the former was the direct and proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. If an injury results from a defect combined with the culpable negligence of a third party it cannot be said to have been caused by the defect and cannot be made the subject of recovery under the statute. If, however, an accident—in the sense of an occurrence for which no one is responsible—concurs with a defect to produce an injury, the defect may still be the efficient and proximate cause of the injury and the municipality be liable. In the Upton, admr. vs. Windham case, the plaintiff's horse became frightened at a passing automobile and plunged over an unprotected bank which constituted a defect in the highway.

The court pointed out that the precise point decided in Bartram vs. Sharon was that the municipality was not liable when the culpable negligence of a fellow-traveler was a proximate cause of the injury, since the state does not undertake to make the highway safe in view of the culpable negligence of the traveling public whether it be of the person hurt or his fellow-traveler, and stated the rule as to liability under the statute in general terms to be that "the penalty may be incurred when a person properly using a highway suffers a personal hurt, or loss of property not due to his culpable conduct nor to that of a fellow-traveler, but being the direct result of the defective condition of the highway in relation to those events naturally incident to its use and which naturally expose the traveler to danger where the highway is not in a reasonably safe condition." A fall of snow or rain, or as in this case rain freezing as it fell, is an event naturally incident to the use of the highway which exposes the traveler to danger when it falls upon a spot where the highway is not in a reasonably safe condition. It is a natural cause and, like an accident, or occurence for which no one is responsible, and may concur with a defect in the highway to produce an injury without relieving the municipality from liability.

Massachusetts has a statute similar to our own and it has been said that the decisions of its court have established the rule that a person cannot under its statute be said to be injured by reason of a defect in a highway if any other cause contributed to the injury. It has there been held, however, that when there is a defect in the highway to which as a proximate cause an injury is in part attributed there may be a liability notwithstanding the fact that it may also be attributed in part to ice or snow for injuries due to which the municipality is not liable. Supra presented this precise question of the effect of a natural cause concurring with a defect to produce an injury. In that case the plaintiff slipped on ice which had been on the walk more than a week but which, on the day of the accident had been covered by about half an inch of light fluffy snow. We held that the fact that the fall of snow concurred with the pre-existing defect to produce the injury did not prevent the defect from being found to be proximate cause of the injury, and said: "In most instances of defect combined with natural cause to produce an injury, the natural cause cannot be held to be so direct and separate in its operation, that the defect in the highway cannot be said to have been the essential cause of the injury.' But in the exceptional case it may be. If the injury would not have occurred but for the natural cause, the defect cannot be held to have produced the injury, nor can it be held to have the essential cause of the injury. Wherever the defect is the proximate cause of the injury, the natural cause cannot be held to be a concurring cause in any sense other than that it contributed to the injury as an incidental and remove cause." The defendant claims that this is the exceptional case in that the effect of the storm of December 24th was to cover this walk with a smooth sheet of glare ice, and that it was this newly formed ice and not the prior defective conditions of the walk which was the proximate cause of the plaintiff's fall. If the court had found that the ice storm of that morning had leveled the ridges and covered all the irregularities of the walk so that its surface was a smooth sheet of glare ice upon which the plaintiff fell it would necessarily follow, that such condition and not the prior defect was the proximate cause of her fall. But the court did not so find. The finding is that the walk at the spot where plaintiff fell was broken and patched, uneven ridged and of varying grades; that it began to rain on the morning of December 24th about six o'clock or a little after, the rain freezing as it fell and covering all the sidewalks of the city with a solid sheet of glare ice, and that the plaintiff fell on this walk about eight o'clock that morning. While the terms of the finding might have been more precise, the natural and fair interpretation of it would seem to be that this storm covered this walk as well as all other objects with a coating of ice without however changing the outlines of the same. This corresponds with common observation of the effects of such a storm and with the conclusion of the court that the walk where plaintiff fell was "structurally defective and covered with a sheet of ice." The same slippery and dangerous condition of the walk that had existed for five days was present when the plaintiff fell with the added element that the old snow and ice which covered the broken and uneven surface of the walk was itself covered with an additional layer of newly formed ice which may have caused it to become still more slippery and dangerous. Upon this record we cannot say that the effect of this ice storm of such a nature and so direct and separate in its operation that the trial court erred in its conclusion that the defect in the walk was the essential and proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries.

There is no error.

In this opinion the other judges concurred, except Maltbie, J., who dissented.

WHITE LEGHORNS LEAD IN THIRD STORRS WEEK

For the third consecutive week a pen of White Leghorns owned by Broadview farm of Winsted, Conn., headed the honor roll in the Storrs laying contest, this time with a score of 63 eggs. This production brings the score of the Connecticut Leghorns up to 266 eggs for the first six weeks of the contest, or an average of 61 eggs per week for the ten competing pullets. Such a performance has placed the Broadview birds on top of the heap in the scramble for high score to date, a position they have held since the second week of the contest. That these birds have made an exceptionally fine start may be seen through a comparison with last year's winning Hollywood Poultry farm entry for the same period of time. The Hollywood birds that broke all previous records with a 51-week score of 2,669 eggs, had a record of 267 for the first six weeks last year, or 99 eggs less than the present lay of the Broadview entry. This is by no means a prediction that the Connecticut Leghorns are going to better the remarkable record established by the Hollywood entry in the last contest; there remains all of 45 weeks to the present trial, and almost anything can happen in that length of time. Still the record is evidence enough that the Broadview entry has stepped off to a particularly auspicious start, and it is not too much to say that these birds will do well if they can maintain what is a record-breaking pace.

A pen of White Leghorns owned by George Lowry of West Willington, Conn., placed second for the week with a score of 59 eggs. Rhode Island Reds entered by Charlescote farm of Sherborn, Mass., finished third with a count of 57 eggs, and a pen of White Rocks owned by E. A. Tirt of South Weymouth, Mass., laid 55 eggs to take fourth place for the week.

Egg production eased off three points during the sixth week, the contest flock laying 4,035 eggs at a rate of 41.1 per cent. This is 132 eggs less than last week, but 396 eggs more than the score for the corresponding week a year ago. To the end of the sixth week, a grand toal of 25,611 eggs had been produced. This is an average of 18 eggs per bird.

Changes continue to come thick and fast in the White Leghorn division, where competition is especially keen. The Bournedale farm entry from Millerton, N. Y., passed the pen owned by Alfred J. O'Donovan from Katonah, N. Y., to take third place among the Leghorns. The entry of Henry Rapp, r., from Farmingdale, N. J., climbed up to fifth position, passing the entries owned by Tom Batron of Catforth, near Preston, England, and the state college of Washington at Pullman.

GAVE BRILLIANT PROGRAM FOR PIANO RECITAL

A piano programme of surpassing brilliance was given Wednesday evening at Slater hall by Mrs. Edward Thaw of Milton, Mass., who was the artist for a special recital under the auspices of the Norwich Music association. The audience of about 400 who heard her found only superlatives to describe her marvelous playing which held them enthralled throughout the evening and regretful to leave when the final number had been played and Mrs. Thaw had returned repeatedly to bow her acknowledgments to the insistent applause.

She received two large bouquets of pink roses during the evening.

The programme was given as follows:

GEORGE SISLER IS SOLD OUTRIGHT TO WASHINGTON CLUB FOR $25,000

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—Regarded five years ago as one of the greatest all-around players of all time and worth at least $150,000 as baseball values go, George Sisler was sold outright today by the St. Louis Browns to the Washington Senators for a sum understood not to be in excess of $25,000.

Although the famous first baseman was sought by at least three other clubs, reports were current he had brought as low as $15,000 in the open market, a tenth of his value while at the height of his career and before he was attacked by eye trouble. This figure, however, apparently was confused by some observers with the salary called for in his contract, which the Senators will take over.

The sale of Sisler, who has been with the Browns for the past 12 years—three of them as manager—marked another step in the breakup of the St. Louis club, promised recently by Phil Ball, the president, and apparently to be fulfilled with a complete reorganization.

Although he has never regained the heights he attained in 1922, when he led the American league with the brilliant batting mark of .420 Sisler will add considerable strength to the Senators. Since being put out of the game for an entire year, 1923, with the sinus trouble that affected his eyes, Sisler has recovered much of his old prowess. Relieved of managerial duties last season, he batted .327 and led the league in stolen bases.

Sisler's sale, overshadowing another day of frenzied bargain-hunting but little actual dealing in the player market, was completed quickly, breaking up what promised to be a three-cornered transaction also involving the Cleveland Indians.

Cleveland, with its new leaders on the hunt for talent, is angling for Joe Judge, the veteran first sacker whom Sisler will replace at the capital, but the rival managers, Roger Peckinpaugh and Bucky Harris, failed to reach any trading basis today. The Senators turned down a proposal to give Judge for Walter Miller, southpaw pitcher, while the Indians tabled a counter proposal to hand over Joe Shaute, another portsider, for the first baseman.

The Browns, besides disposing of Sisler, moved to complete the deal with Detroit by which they obtained Harry Manush and Lu Blue in exchange for Harry Rice and Earl Van Gilder and a third player. Chick Galloway, former shortstop for the Athletics who finished the 1927 season with Milwaukee, will be sent to Detroit to close this transaction, providing St. Louis can get him.

There were at least a half dozen other deals consummated and as many others "in the air." Principal among them was the release of Emil Yde, southpaw pitcher and National league sensation three years ago, along with catcher Roy Spencer by the Pittsburgh Pirates to Indianapolis with the understanding that the Corsairs will have their pick of the Hoosier roster for 1928.

Both Yde and Spencer have been with the Pirates for four years but they saw little activity last season.

Johnny Bassler, Detroit catcher and rated among the foremost major league backstops a few years ago, was released to Toronto in payment for Red Hargrave, another receiver, but probably will start the 1928 season with the Hollywood, Calif., club of the Pacific Coast league. Negotiations to obtain Bassler as well as Red Wingo, outfielder, from Toronto were opened by Oscar Vitt, Hollywood manager.

Toronto figured in another deal by selling shortstop Bob Lamotte and outfielder High, both former major leaguers, to Baltimore for $6,000.

Unable to obtain Sisler, the Athletics, angling about for a first baseman, were reported ready to complete negotiations for Billy Kelly of Minneapolis. Connie Mack also appeared likely to sign Dutch Ruether, veteran southpaw released unconditionally by the Yankees recently.

Gus Getz, old time third baseman, of the Brooklyn Nationals was reported named manager of the Scranton club, in the New York-Pennsylvania league.

PIRATE FANS MUST NOT THROW RUBBISH ON ICE

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The hockey fan's method of venting his displeasure over a referee's decision by hurling rubbish onto the ice, will be met with summary police action in the future in this city at least, Manager George V. Brown, of the Boston Arena, and President Charles F. Adams, of the Boston National Hockey league club decided today.

The shower of papers, coin, fruit and other rubbish which three times halted last night's Bruins-New York Rangers match when Referee Mickey Ion's decisions aroused the ire of the fans, today drew a joint statement from the hockey moguls announcing "immediate action to stop for all time the throwing of objects on the ice during the progress of hockey games at the Arena."

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 14.—Leading practically all the way, the Norwich Y Emps defeated Willimantic Emps tonight 19 to 15 in a fast game.

Coach Conklin started his regulars because of the closeness of the struggle in Norwich and he needed them for the locals battled hard.

The first quarter was crammed with defensive play, a foul shot by Murphy of Norwich comprising the scoring. The second period produced a bit more scoring but at the half the score read 5 all. The second half was more lively with Norwich slightly outpointing the visitors to clinch the verdict.

Mandell was best for the locers while for the Emps, Economius was top scorer. However, the play of the Rose City crew was not up to scratch.

LARGE "SPORTS" BANQUET AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN JAN. 4

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(AP)—For the purpose of demonstrating a deep interest in sports other than boxing, the Madison Square Garden club, commonly known as the "600 millionaires," announced today that a banquet will be tendered champions in all major sports on Jan. 4. Outstanding representatives of five sports already have informed a committee headed by Charles M. Schwab, steel king, and Walter Chrysler, automobile magnate, that they will attend the banquet.

Acceptances have been received, the announcement said, from "Big Bill" Tilden, outstanding tennis player; Johnny Weismuller, swimming champion; Devereux Milburn, polo star; Gene Tunney, heavyweight boxing champion; and Babe Ruth, home run monarch. No reply has yet been received from Bobby Jones, Atlanta golf king.

Close to 800 sportsmen are expected to attend. The announcement declared that Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house of representatives, would be the principal speaker of the evening along with Mr. Schwab, while James Walker, mayor of New York, and an ardent fight fan, has agreed to act as toastmaster.

SOME FAST BOYS WILL SHOW ON PASTIME CARD

For the amateur show of the Pastime athletic club to be held at Olympic hall on Friday evening, Matchmaker Quinn has an attractive card of boxers lined up to show their wares. Willimantic will send down a team of boxers, the first from the Thread City to box in local shows. These boys are under the care of Artie Kumpf, who will be remembered by local fans as a boxer and wrestler in Norwich 15 to 20 years ago. Another team will come from Lebanon, from the camp of George Schiller, where these boys are working out preparatory to an amateur campaign in New York city later in the winter.

Westerly is also sending up a team of fast boys and New London will also be represented on the card. Norwich, of course, will have a number of boys in the ring. The Norwich boys will be Kid Swift, Young Litso, Young Talbert, Walt Jackson, Al Carpenter, the last named being a heavyweight, and a number of other local favorites. Young Burrows, Young Whitey and Young Ayzen, together with three others, will be the New London representatives.

Action aplenty is in store for the fans who attend the show. Danny Doyle, of New London, will be the referee.

NO CHANGE IN ARMY ELIGIBILITY CODE

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 14—(AP)—Rules governing the eligibility of cadets for membership on athletic teams of the United States Military academy will undergo no further changes, Major-General Edwin B. Winans, superintendent at the academy, announced today in approving recommendations of the West Point advisory council.

In a lengthy statement, accompanying the decision, Major General Winans explained the necessity for all students at the academy competing in athletics on a basis of parity, analyzed the eligibility standard already in effect, and pointed out that while "contests with the naval academy traditionally form the most important incidents in West Point athletic schedules, the main purpose is development of sports throughout the army."

The statement appeared as a possible answer to reports that dissatisfaction had arisen among naval authorities over the army eligibility rules which allow stars of college teams to continue their athletic careers at West Point until graduation after passing the first year as plebes. A four year agreement between the two service schools still has three years to run. The announcement precludes any new agreement to conform with navy standards that allow a total of but three years of varsity competition either in college or at Annapolis.

After pointing out the benefits derived from academy trained officers capable of developing sports throughout the army, General Winans declared that eligibility rules were laid down in colleges primarily "to offset the tendency toward migratory athletes and perennial students. Both the difficulty of securing an appointment and the strenuousness of the West Point curriculum operate to preclude the entrance of any young man whose sole object is athletics," he said.

The question of the army's "obligation" to conform "in the interest of fairness and courtesy to the rules adopted in general by colleges and universities" was dismissed with the statement that West Point has enjoyed most harmonious relations for many years with many colleges which "appreciate the limitations" incident to instruction at the military academy and "realize that eligibility rules are unnecessary for retention of an amateur status" by members of army teams.

WESLEYAN LOSES IN OVERTIME GAME

MIDDLETOWN, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Springfield college won a two overtime period game from Wesleyan university here tonight, 44 to 42. Playing the first game of the season, the home team came from behind and tied the score at 39-all in the closing minutes. Duncan, of Springfield shot the deciding basket late in the last overtime period.

E. E. Manuel, '28, of Keyport, N. J., won the Clark and True basketball trophy between the halves. The trophy is awarded annually to the Wesleyan undergraduate who shows the greatest skill in shooting baskets from the foul line.

Manuel made 39 out of a possible 50 in the finals.

AMERICAN LEAGUE MEETING IS VERY HARMONIOUS

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(AP)—In the shortest and most harmonious annual meeting the American league has staged in years, Frank Navin, of Detroit, today was elected vice president of the circuit and Charles Comiskey, president of the Chicago club, was named to the board of directors.

Comiskey, an arch foe of Ban Johnson, now retired as president of the league, returned to the board after an absence of several years due directly to his quarrel with the former circuit head. Alva Bradley, new president of the Cleveland Indians, was elected a director along with Jacob Ruppert, of New York, and Robert Quinn, of Boston.

MAJOR LEAGUES TO CONSIDER DRAFT PROBLEM AT JOINT MEETING TODAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The much-discussed and much-involved controversy over the major-minor league agreement, especially as it relates to draft system, is expected to come to a showdown tomorrow at the joint annual meeting of the major leagues.

It was a salient topic today not only at the concluding separate sessions of the American and National leagues but also at a conference between Commissioner Landis and minor leagues, a resolution, passed at the recent Dallas meeting, in which they were instructed to confer with the "proper" big league representatives for "the purpose of determining the date of the termination" of the present major-minor league agreement. The committee consisting of John H. Farrell, secretary of the National Association of Professional baseball leagues, H. J. Weisman, president of the Eastern league, and Judge William G. Bramham, president of the South Atlantic association, and the Piedmont and Virginia leagues, was further instructed to submit the question to Commissioner Landis in the event of failure of the major league representatives to agree on a termination date.

At the Dallas meeting, several of the minor league delegates voiced the opinion that the major-minor agreement expired with Commissioner Landis' first term of seven years, although the agreement itself reads that the pact shall be in force "as long as Commissioner Landis holds office."

Indications were strong that the major leagues interpreted the committee's appearance here as an attempt to force the issue. Some officials pointed out that the majors also had objections to the present pact and would see it dissolved without many regrets. One National executive said the majors considered their grievances against the agreement much more serious than those of the minors.

After the committee appeared before the American league that organization announced merely that it had reached a decision on what action it would take at the joint meeting tomorrow. The National league made no reply to the committee except to say that the matter would be taken up "soon."

Commissioner Landis however, called a meeting for tomorrow morning of all minor league owners now in New York, presumably for a further discussion of the controversy.

Under an amendment adopted at the National league sessions today, home clubs, in the future, will have the option of taking their batting practice last. Previously the visiting club had been given this privilege.

Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, presented an argument for a 148-game season, instead of the present 154 games, but this was tabled.

Under an unanimous agreement the league schedule meeting was set for February 3. The schedule will be available for publication following day.

DANIELSON TOWNERS PLAY NORTON A. C. TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, Dec. 14.—The Norton A. C. basketball team is coming to Danielson Thursday evening of this week with an urge to rush the players of the Danielson Town team off the courts, one might say. Possibly it is not as bad as that.

Being entirely conservative, one may set down for the world to read that two mighty good basketball teams are going to have it out in this game. For those who may not recall the fact, it may be mentioned that the Norton A. C. is out of Worcester, represents a big mill corporation that is very proud of what its teams accomplish in all branches of sport, and sees to it that competitors representing it lack little or nothing that can be provided as to insure success.

The Norton A. C. is coming to Danielson with three of the famed Purple Collegians in its lineup. That alone assures a basketball game worthy of any fan's attention. The teams are to play in the town hall in Danielson.

BASKETBALL BRIEFS

The Academy goes back at practice today after 24 hours rest. Tuesday's workout was all fundamentals it being occupied in tossing the ball around and giving each one of the 20 candidates plenty of work on locating the basket. PLAINFIELD PROS BEAT TABS, 43 TO 24

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 14—Plainfield Pros had it easy in defeating the New Britain team for the third time in as Community house by the score of 43 to 24.

Leading the entire way Plainfield tossed in all kinds of shots to decisively gain the verdict over a New Britain team for the third itme in as many starts in this campaign. Although the visitors had several of the best players in Connecticut and central Massachusetts, they could do little with the dazzling performance that the local quintet put on before a large sized crowd on their own stamping grounds. The going was fairly even in the first half but after intermission the home club stepped farther away.

Pros All Score

Plainfield, with her usual steady game never was extended to anything like the utmost. Normandin, flashy right forward was high scorer with 13 points while Dissinger, who was hampered by a sprained wrist, still managed to get in during the second half and he followed Normandin in the matter of scoring with 9 points. Every man on Plainfield scored at least two field baskets while all of them played fine floor games.

Paige and Rescella were tied for scoring leadership for the visitors with eight points. Taylor, high scoring man last week was limited to five points this time by Madden while Bernot held his opponent, Taylor scoreless from all sides.

Next week the Boston Nationals play at Plainfield. This club, composed of some of the fastest players in the Hub are rated on a par with the Whirlwinds and should be capable of giving the locals just as stiff a tussle as the Morley, Kiley, etc., gang could. Plainfield has no game scheduled for Saturday night.

In the preliminary tonight the Plainfield Buddies get themselves tuned up for their meeting with Norwich Y. M. C. A. Saturday night at Norwich by completely overshadowing the Noank Nuggets 30 to 6. The down staters were never in it and by the form shown tonight the Buddies seem well able to hold their own in the game in the Rose City this week end.

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 14—The third day of the trial of the suit to collect nearly $3,000 claimed due on agreement for surgical attendance at major operations, brought by Dr. Michael H. Scanlon against Dr. John Gordon Anderson, began this morning at 11 o'clock before Judge Charles A. Walsh in the Washington county superior court. As on previous days of the trial, every seat in the courtroom was occupied at both morning and afternoon session while many stood in the corridors.

When court adjourned at 4:15 Attorney Dunn had asked for ten minutes more on his cross-examination of defendant, Dr. Anderson, who took the stand about 2:20 and whose cross-examination was begun by Mr. Dunn at 3:30. Judge Walsh said adjournment would be taken until Thursday at 11 a. m. At this time Dr. Anderson will be on the stand for a short time. All petit jurors are summoned to appear at the morning session.

Wednesday morning, Dr. Scanlon continued on the witness stand under cross examination by Mr. Moulton. His testimony dealt with his reported agreement made with Dr. Anderson, whereby the latter was to pay him $50 for each major operation at which he had acted as assistant and for which with a few exceptions, he looked to Dr. Anderson for payment. A separate bill by request was rendered in case of the operation on Arthur Boumenot, that bill being filed with the probate court of Westerly. Dr. Scanlon said his bill of particulars charges against Dr. Anderson had been made up from the Westerly hospital records for purposes of obtaining complete names and addresses. In the total of 52 major operation cases, 34 being cases of Dr. Anderson and 18 of his own and deduction was made by Attorney Moulton, $1700 worth of charges were on Anderson's cases and $900 on his own. Rules of the Westerly hospital, understood but perhaps not in the hospital book of regulations, were to the effect that assistants or doctors present at operations at the hospital should be present at the invitation of the operating surgeon.

Dr. Scanlon completed his testimony at 12:45 and was followed by Dr. John W. Helfrich of the surgeon's staff of Westerly hospital. His testimony was very brief.

Attorney Moulton said that the defendant Dr. Anderson would prove that he had never entered into any agreement with Dr. Scanlon relative to fees or the payment of fixed amounts on cases where he had acted as his assistant.

Dr. Anderson testified that he is 34, a native of Westerly, graduate of Harvard Medical school, with hospital training in New York, Boston and at Mayo's clinic at Rochester, Minn. From his check book Dr. Anderson showed payments to Dr. Scanlon totalling about $1,000.

Noank Checker Champion Alfred Crowell went to Mystic Tuesday evening and arranged a series of five games with the champion of Mystic for two years, Dr. A. Williams. So in a red building on Water street, where many great battles were played Crowell of the village by the sea and his gang of 50 were given a big hand as he picked the left side, Dr. Williams taking his place on the right side of the board. Referee Ted Anderson gave them the word to play. It was Crowell's first move and the pride of Bank street was watching his rival's every step. When it was the doctor's turn he found the man from Noank asleep at the table and put over a four-move jump, the Mystic man winning the first match by a close score. In the second match the fans from the village down by the water told Champion Crowell to give the doctor the heavy oil and show his old form. So when the smoke was cleared arway, Noank's champion left Dr. Williams far in the rear without a man in the king row. The fans of the indoor game cheered Crowell for his good work. But the Mystic cheering section said to Dr. Williams, "Well, what is the matter? Give your rival the fish oil and win!" The man from up the river has followed every crack on the checker-board since the days on a square-rigger ship, for Williams went around the world and all he did was to play checkers. The last match will not be forgotten in the old town for years to come as it was one of the best exhibitions of checker playing possible. It was the last move that put Dr. Williams on the winning end for the first match; but Crowell made him step on the gas to beat him. The contest is for the championship of Mystic and Noank; the next match will be in Noank Saturday night at the club rooms. About 150 saw the match.

Tuesday noon just before the one o'clock whistle blew to call the mill hands to work at Noank mill a surprise was waiting for the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Balestracci on the main floor from their working friends. William Crowell in behalf of the mill employes gave them a large box containing a handsome parlor clock, a card on the box read "From the mill help to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Balestracci. The first 60 years is the hardest but we all hope that we will live to help celebrate your golden wedding." Alfred thanked them all for the gift. He is millwright at the plant while the bride is in the spinning department. The accordian was played by Miss Rose Jackson, "Until We Meet Again." For 30 minutes a social time was spent.

The auxiliary to the Fire company held a meeting recently at the fire rooms with the president, Mrs. Minnie Palmer in the chair. Twenty members attended. It was voted to have a Christmas tree for the smoke-eaters and auxiliary at the end of the month. A committee was named—Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Henry Langworthy and Mrs. B. Strong. After the meeting the auxiliary called down to their brother firemen playing cards downstairs to help them enjoy a social hour where coffee with sandwiches, cookies and marble-cake were served.

A government boat was in the harbor Tuesday looking over the beacon near the shipyard and the light was filled for another 90 days before it will burn out again. The light is lighted day and night since the lighthouse went out of commission a few years ago. The New Idea of Cancer

THE CURABILITY OF CANCER.

Many cases of cancer can be cured and many more prevented if the public will give its full cooperation to the medical profession, which is striving against the cancer scourge. Also a large number of cases which are too far advanced for cure can be relieved and the end postponed by relying upon the advice and care which skilled physicians can render.

Just how many cases of cancer can be prevented or cured depends upon many factors. Reliable statistics upon this subject do not exist. Some established facts and some sound working opinions, however, are warranted with reference to it.

There should be practically no deaths from cancer of the skin.

Cancer of the lip and cancer in the inside of the mouth give warnings which, if heeded in time, make them capable of cure in the large majority of cases. The danger signal of cancer of the skin, mouth or lip is a sore which will not heal, a hard white patch, or sacaly red discoloration.

Cancer of the breast has signals which are not difficult for the person who is attacked to notice. The principal one is a persistent and often very small painless lump. If treated promptly and properly by a competent surgeon, a great many cases of cancer of the breast can be made well.

Cancer of the digestive tract and female genital organs can frequently be detected and cured, providing the danger signals which every one should know are recognized in time and the resources of the medical profession are fully availed of. The danger signals of cancer of the lower end of the digestive tract and of the female genital organs are irregularities in the normal functions of those parts which cannot be satisfactorily explained on any other theory than that of cancer.

Cancer of the stomach is not necessarily fatal, as is popularly supposed. Many instances can be cited of patients who have been made well, providing they did not delay too long before applying for medical aid. The principal danger signal of cancer of the stomach is persistent and unaccountable indigestion.

69th Anniversary of the Starting of The Norwich Bulletin

When, on Dec. 15, 1858, Manning, Perry & Co. brought out their first issue of The Norwich Morning Bulletin they let themselves in for something which Isaac H. Bromley later temperately described as "hard sledding." Indeed they did. Bromley has told about it in reminiscences which The Bulletin printed first in 1896 and again this year. For George B. Smith, owner of the Norwich Daily Courier, was already in the field, and apparently had all the advantages over them.

Smith had backing, and they didn't.

Smith had credit, and they didn't.

Smith had a snappy make-up, and they didn't.

Smith had a good wire service, and they didn't.

Smith had a strong local staff, and they didn't.

But Smith went broke, and they didn't.

The reason why they pulled through, and Smith didn't, was because they had a young genius for partner and editor. Though Bromley later became quite chatty about other phases of the Bulletin's early struggles and deliverance, he had nothing to say about this phase of the matter—for the name of the young genius was Isaac H. Bromley.

Now there is only a trivial effort involved in summoning the vocal apparatus to shape the word "genius" and tack it on to the name of a given subject. However, the effort involved in making the hearer believe in the vocal demonstration is oftentimes far from trivial. Not in this instance, however; for the man is unquestionably a genius who almost single-handedly gathers and writes enough news to fill a whole paper every day, yet who can also find it in him to write such an editorial as the following, which appeared over Bromley's name in the Norwich Bulletin of Feb. 23, 1861:

Norwich, Connecticut, to Montgomery, Alabama

The following letter will sufficiently explain itself. It was written at the request of a friend who placed the relic alluded to at our disposal. At his request we publish the letter as a matter of at least local interest:—

Hon. Jefferson Davis, President of the "Confederate States of America:"

The position in which you have been placed by the action of the representatives of six newly confederated states, and the magnitude of the business in which you and your associates are engaged, have emboldened me, a private citizen of a New England state, to address you a few words in presentation of the enclosed revolutionary relic:

The associations that cluster around the birth of great events are rarely lost to history. There is no inhabited place where you may not find treasured bits of wood and stone, or consecrated soil, in all respects like other wood, and stone, and earth, except that their association with great events has made them sacred relics, or immortalized them in history. The landing of a shipload of refugees from tyranny upon the jutting ledge of a barren coast, made Plymouth Rock immortal. The bell whose tongue proclaimed the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the hall in which that instrument was perfected, and all the inanimate things connected in the minds of men with that great event, could by no formula of consecration be made more sacred than they are. The world abounds too in relics of its great men who have lived for good or evil, left their impress on the ages and become names immortal. We are not content with a mere observance of the birth-days of our heroes, statesmen, philosophers, or any of those whose names we honor, and whose memories we revere. We gather mementoes of their lives, and treasure as relics the most insignificant trifles that have been consecrated by their touch.

Every epoch in the world's history has reached forward its handful of relics to the next incoming era, and every revolution has gathered in this way the tinder in which the fire of the next has been kindled. The power of association links together great events, and it is a single train of thought that takes in Magna Charta, Plymouth Rock, and Independence Hall.

There are events of note in our revolutionary history which will be readily connected in the minds of thinking men with the undertaking in which you are engaged. True, Lexington and Concord may have no significance at Charleston or Pensacola, but I think there are memories of West Point which may not be wholly meaningless at Montgomery.

It is the fortune—good or ill as you may choose to term it—of the town in which I live to be associated with one of the events to which I have alluded; and the little memento thereof which I enclose, has a history which I think will appeal more strongly to your sympathies than could almost any other relic of the revolution.

This pen holder was fashioned from a rafter in the roof under which was born, a man—more than any other of the age in which he lived—your prototype. His name figures largely in all our revolutionary history. He was a soldier, like yourself, and of the same rank in the army. His name like yours, was synonymous with bravery. Like you, he fought well and bravely the battles of his country; never flinching from danger, but always in the thickest of the fight; impetuous and rash at times, but never cowardly, and always daring to lead "where any dared to follow." I mean no detraction from the reputation you have so hardly earned, when I say he was your equal in courage, loyalty, and patriotism. More need not be said. Sixty years have passed since his death, but no monumental marble bears the inscription of his name and virtues. Yet he is not forgotten. For more than half a century past, the house from whence this relic came has been pointed out to the passing stranger as the birth place of Benedict Arnold.

I have taken occasion to present you this pen holder, as a relic whose associations are linked most closely to the movement of which you are the head. Let it lie upon your desk for use in your official duties. In the "eternal fitness of things," let that be its appropriate place. It links 1780 to 1861. Through it, West Point speaks to Montgomery. And if we may believe that spirits do ever return and haunt this mundane sphere we may reckon with what delight Benedict Arnold's immortal part will follow this fragment of his paternal roof tree to the hands in which is being consummated the work which he begun.

Hoping that you will accept this gift in the spirit in which it is tendered, I have the honor to remain

Your obedient servant,

I. H. BROMLEY.

Of course, not all of Bromley's writing was on the plane of this editorial satire; nor was all of it editorial. But all of it was mighty good and mighty readable. With a hundred touches a week Bromley groomed up the news columns of the little paper that his printer-partners were issuing from their job plant. And he was not only grooming those columns; he was filling them, which in itself took a bit of doing.

Little Cash for Reporters

For news facilities were restricted, to say the least. Manning, Perry & Co. had precious little money to spend on telegraph tolls and correspondents. The heft of the news therefore had to be local, and there weren't nearly so many ways of developing local items then as there are now.

A glance at the news sources of 1927, as compared with those of 1858, makes the situation clear enough. There are two kinds of news—"straight," and sensational. "Straight news" is mainly derived from activities that revolve around politics, gainful occupations and social and cultural life. Sensational news is a distillate from the crop of events that grows out of such soil as crime, mystery, women and money. In 1858, when Bromley was looking around for news, nearly all these sources of supply were either non-existent or undeveloped.

Politics, of course, we have with us always, and have had from the beginning—even more articulately then, perhaps, than now. It was a good news source for young Bromley, and as the Bulletin was a strongly partisan sheet he would often take a brisk crack at a democratic skull whenever the paper needed livening up.

However, gainful occupations—the professional, manufacturing and business life of Norwich—offered poor pickings. Mostly such news was regarded as advertising, and the counting-room wanted somebody to pay the rate. Nothing came out of the chamber of commerce, of course, for there was no chamber of commerce, nor anything like it. Likewise, "transportation news"—if such a grouping may be made of the countless items printed today that concern the automobile, the steam and electric railways, good roads, etc.—was almost entirely absent. There were no automobiles, no electric railways, no good roads as we know them.

In the social and cultural aspects of Norwich Bromley found the news field almost as barren as in its business aspect. The church, then as now, produced a good yield of both social and cultural items. But the place of other cultural activities—of art, music, the theatre, and measurably of literature as well—was negligible in the community and therefore negligible in the local press.

Few Social Activities

Social activities were few and far between. There was little holiday-making or observance of special occasions, and even less organized social or community effort of any sort. Today under this community-effort heading we have such prolific sources of news as Labor day, the Boy Scouts, the public playgrounds, the Y. M. C. A., homes for the aged or for children, the United Workers, the Red Cross, the Rotary club, the Lions, the golf club, the Rural association, the park system, the farm bureau, workmen's compensation, the Slater Museum, the historical society, the home-building society. In Bromley's time such co-operation activities were not merely absent as news sources; they were not even present as day-dreams. Bromley did pick up a little news among the fraternal orders, but it didn't amount to five per cent of the present-day grist, for the orders were not so numerous, so large nor so active as they are now.

Items of a personal nature were also rare. The reading appetite which today demands a society column had not then developed, and so the inconsequential but interesting doings and goings-about of people were not regarded as news. For ten years even weddings went unnoted; the first one of which the Bulletin printed an account was that of Timothy B. Blackstone and Isabella F. Norton. This ceremony was reported in the Bulletin of Oct. 22, 1868. And even when the newspaper picked up a bit of personal chit-chat that it thought of printing, as like as not some prominent citizen would drop in to ask that it be kept out.

Sport News Was Sparse

News prospects offered by local sports in Bromley's time were also highly circumscribed. There was a crude form of baseball and football; there were also water sports; but nothing except the Newichewannock Boating club was organized. Not for thirty years did sports develop sufficiently to justify the Bulletin in adding a sports page.

In general, social diversions were frowned upon unless their utilitarian nature was plain, as in the case for example of spelling bees, corn huskings, pound parties or mowing matches. In particular, the recreation of dancing, which with its accompanying activities originates a great columnage of news today, was then specifically disapproved. For instance, on Nov. 5, 1868, the Central Baptist church passed the following preamble and resolutions and in so doing it unquestionably reflected the solid public opinion of Norwich at the time:

Whereas, the practise of promiscuous dancing in public places has come to be countenanced and often participated in by professing Christians to the detriment of their own piety, to the grief of their brethern, and the reproach of religion in the eyes of the world; therefore

Resolved, That we, the Central Baptist church, in accordance with the uniform sentiments of our denomination, and with what we believe to be the obvious teachings of Scripture, do hereby record our disapproval of the practise, and view it as an unchristian and worldly amusement.

Disapprobation which was like in kind, if not in degree, was also the portion meted out to card-players and followers of such time-wasting amusements.

"Sensationalism" Lacking

When it came to events that form the base for sensationalism in the news today, Bromley was again out of luck.

Crime? Except for arson, it was almost absent. Not until 1871, when the Bulletin was in its fourteenth year, was there a murder. Burglaries were trifling. Robbery was unknown.

Mystery? Everybody knew all about everybody else, and that was all there was to it. In 1869 a great to-do was made about some huge, mysterious tracks found leading from nowhere to nowhere and at intermediate points circling about people's houses. This "mystery" was kept alive for several years but died suddenly when it was discovered that the tracks were made by skunks with snow balled up in their paws. No circulation to be made by exploiting mysteries after that.

Women? They were very seldom heard of in the 1850s and 60s. When a divorce came along the Bulletin played it up for all it was worth. It gave the first case which developed in its territory, that of Harris vs. Harris in New London, several columns a day and printed as many as 4,000 extra copies a day.

Evidently woman news "pulled" as well then as now. But the Harris divorce case didn't happen along till October, 1865, when the Bulletin was in its seventh year. No circulation tonic came out of this bottle in time to help Bromley nurse his rickety newspaper infant through its doubtful first twelvemonth.

Nor was there any nourishment to be derived from the fourth great feeder of sensationalism today—from stories about money, about trusts crushing the poor, about swollen fortunes gained without effort or frittered without gain. For in 1858 there were no vast aggregations of capital, and none in prospect. Private fortunes, too, were far from swollen. Even after the Civil War had brought on an inflation that was the subject of bitter complaint, there were but 46 men in Norwich who paid taxes to the federal government on incomes of $5,000 or more. If this was a good money story, the Bulletin made the most of it, for its issue of Jan. 28, 1865 carried every name with the amount of income and tax charged against each. Good or not, however, it was the only money story that turned up in seven years.

"Chronicled the Local Small Beer".

So Bromley had little or no material from which to build a sensational paper—even supposing he wished to build one—and not such a great deal of material for a paper of the straight news type. Yet he had to fill those gaping local columns every day; and he did fill them. News of the churches and of the political situation he found always available, and if carefully handled these items could be written up to fill considerable space without losing readability. He also gladly "chronicled the local small beer"—court proceedings, sessions of the common council, town meetings, annual reports of banks and transportation companies, real estate transfers, building operations. He kept an eye on the weather, the train and boat service, the prices of things, public improvements, the condition of the crops, the world of nature. He reported arrests, deaths, fires, accidents, lectures, firemen's balls, doings in the schools, the movements of shipping.

Always his problem was "how to fill"—precisely the converse problem to that faced by the present-day newspaper man, who is always wondering how he can "get it all in." He combed the exchanges for doings of former Norwich people, public projects that might affect the welfare of Norwich directly or indirectly—for anything that might have a local application, or that would be petted, twisted or tortured into producing the effect of having one.

So far, Bromley walked on the sans side of the street with his competitors on the daily Courier. But at this point their paths parted. When in spite of all efforts the daily Courier crowd ran short of copy, they would seize the shears and baldly clip out enough to fill. Bromley on the other hand didn't clip so freely and frequently. He had two other and better ways of making up the deficiency in his columns.

How He Created News

When things were slack locally he rewrote news, and he created news. He would take a long story from an out-of-town paper and give the gist of it in a terse sentence or two. Fifteen exchanges would supply fifteen paragraphs; and fifteen paragraphs filled another column. It may be more than a coincidence that a similar column of brief, pregnant items, called "Sunbeams," made its appearance daily in Charles A. Dana's New York Sun shortly after Bromley joined the staff of that paper. At any rate, it is a fact that the column which now appears daily in The Bulletin under the heading "Brief Telegrams" had its origin with Isaac H. Bromley. The great difference between the news as it appeared in The Bulletin then and as it appears now, is that today the news is really telegraph news, and then it only seemed so.

The news that Bromley created was inspired by, or wished on to, a group of men that he chummed with or liked. Men he couldn't get on with he never mentioned except strictly in the way of business.

He never lampooned an enemy nor made the subject of his good-humored persiflage feel like a butt for ridicule.

Chief among the figures who peopled this dream world of jest and laughter that Bromley evolved on newsless days was William M. (Bill) Converse, owner of the Norwich & New London Steamboat Co. and a leading democrat. Converse and Bromley were great cronies, even though the young republican editor did lampoon the Jeffersonian wheel horse without stint. Some of these lampoons took the form of verse signed "Shinks" and written in rich Bromley-German-English dialect; some, signed "Felix Grundy," purported to be written by Converse himself about his own political activities. The humor of the Grundy papers lay in the naive admissions which, as those thought who thought they read between the lines, were made by the author, Converse, regarding himself and his party. It was a double-barreled joke, for while the readers believed Converse wrote the articles and thereby gave himself away, the real author was actually Bromley. The whole city was taken in by this complicated deception, to the huge enjoyment of both Bromley and Converse.

Besides giving the two friends a lot of fun, the Grundy papers were useful to the young editor by filling up the paper on dull days with entertaining matter of local application.

Last Laugh Was on Ike

Not until 1873 did Bromley let the public in on this hoax. Then the death of Converse brought forth a letter from Bromley regarding their relationship, of which the following is an extract:

"From the time he entered the employment of Backus & Norton till he took to his bed a month or two ago, he (Converse) was the life of the street, and Water street has, in these thirty years or more, been made very lively by some of the brightest young men the town or state has ever furnished. Of the brilliant crowd of business men who continually enlivened the routine of toil with practical jokes and merrymakings, Converse was always the center and chief.

"It was on the occasion of his going as delegate to the Charleston (democratic national) convention, in 1860, that a burlesque correspondence from the convention, written somewhat in the vein of his conversation, which was somewhat discursive and craggy, but always more or less pointed, appeared in The Bulletin. The merit of the letters, if they had any, was in the closeness of imitation of his style and manner. And there was something so hearty and good-natured in him that whatever reminded his friends of him brought a smile. He took very kindly, too, to that sort of thing, and it may be mentioned among his good qualities that he never took offense at pleasantry of any sort. He never failed to have an answer for all occasions, and so long as there was no malice in the comments upon his political relations he laughed at them and brushed them off.

"I remember how in 1861, when he was running for the senate, and The Bulletin was opposing him, he used to say to my republican friends, when anything unusually severe appeared in the paper, "Oh, that's all right. Ike and I understand it. He will vote for me fast enough, but The Bulletin's a republican paper, and he has to say something, you know." He said this so constantly, and persisted in it, that some of my republican friends came to me, with great solicitude, to inquire about it, and I am not quite sure that he did not more than square the account, on the 'Felix Grundy' score, by the doubts he succeeded in throwing upon my party fealty."

Help from Edwin Fay

Another good fellow whom Bromley turned into copy when there was nothing much else to write about was Edwin Fay, who ran an ice-cream manufactory near by. Fay later—in 1864—went into partnership to make reeds and harness for looms, then opened the Chelsea hotel in 1869, started a 99-cent store in 1873, and closed his career by running a candy and toy store on Franklin square. He died in 1900. His cutting and distribution on Franklin square of a mammouth cheese was remembered for decades afterward.

A third storm center for stories in Bromley's jocular vein was a harmless old sot whom he nicknamed the Quinebaug Bard, attributed a lot of so-called "verse" to, and bought many a drink for. Here is a typical squib, somewhat condensed, on the Quinebaug Bard:

"Isaac Miner, Esq., the well-known poet, was tried in Stonington last week, upon a charge of setting fire to a barn. He was discharged for want of evidence. It was supposed that the fire was caused by his putting his nose in the hay."

When something really did happen to a local character, Bromley worked it for all the news value—and space—that there was in it and then fattened the item with some high-class kidding. Here, for instance, are extracts from one such story, which in its original form rose to the heat part of a column. It appeared on Oct. 7, 1859:

A WINDFALL PERHAPS

T. J. Barney, Esq. Worth $300,000 Perhaps

"The town talk yesterday, was of the current rumor that Thomas Jefferson Barney, Esquire of this city, well known in business circles as a "No. 1 porter" and driver of a nag of distinct outline and slow speed, had by the death of a relative become heir to an immense estate in Alabama.

"The legatee bears himself bravely under the circumstances, and we presume the same is true of his large and interesting family..... His sudden change of fortune has not as yet produced any corresponding change in his appearance or habits of life. His wagon has recently been covered with a cloth top, but we have learned from good authority that the expense of that improvement was incurred before the tidings of his increased worldly prosperity had reached him. There was a perceptible elevation in the head of his spirited animal, but we believe it was induced by taking up the check-rein about three holes..... The report that he has been negotiating for the purchase of the great plain with the intention of building thereon, we have reason to believe is untrue..... Mr. Barney's horse has not yet been offered for sale."

On Oct. 12, 1859, Bromley pricks the bubble as follows:

"Barney's Inheritance—Today T. Jefferson Barney is but a common man—a "No. 1 porter," 'tis true, but beyond and beside his excellence in that peculiar line, an ordinary, everyday, subject-to-manual-labor mortal. Yesterday, T. Jefferson B. was the heir to an Alabama plantation. Yesterday, there was the very yellowness in his apparel that must have rubbed off from the untold wealth in which he rolled. Today, he is but a human porter, a mortal baggage smasher, a mere convenience for the traveling public. His last night's sun set golden, tonight its last beams will be mere ordinary sunshine. But yesterday T. Jefferson B. was the pride of Mount Pleasant, and all Hardscrabble made haste to do him reverence. Today, in the words of D. Webster, Esq., "there she stands, look at him." On that classic ground, there are "none so poor" that they don't think more of themselves than they do of their neighbors and T. J. B. is but an equal. Yesterday in gay and festive mood, to a wooing hack driver he promised a daughter's hand. Today the hackman woos not, and the ungloved hand of the maiden collects chestnuts in the forest primeval. Yesterday, at his command were good goods, and large quantities of building materials awaited but his nod to form themselves into palaces for his residence. Today, the goods are not so numerous, and the building material are "all in his eye." Yesterday, the possessor of a fortune—today, of a mis-fortune.

"A few brief but weighty sentences in a letter received from Providence last night.....have wiped out a delightful prospect for Thomas Jefferson Barney, and left his children widows instead of heiresses. And so it goes. For a few days past it seemed probable that the pathway of T. Jefferson Barney down the thither slope of time, was to be illumined by the sun of affluence. It was a bogus prospect. The legacy is not sufficient to buy a harness, and the sun has gone down, leaving the family and the old mare in straightened circumstances and great vexation of spirit.....

"Though T. J. Barney is not an heir to the real estate, still it is but fair to say that there is an air of real estate about him."

All of the foregoing of course is about ninety-nine per cent persiflage and only about one per cent news. But in the absence of local items Bromley felt that it was better to print local persiflage than to clip a column from somebody, who had probably clipped it from somebody else, on some such subject of remote interest to Norwich as the origin of Etruscan tear jars.

At any rate, the paper went ahead under the drive of Bromley's editorial ideas, and after a while there was money enough to hire him an assistant. The name of the assistant was William P. Fuller. His accession to the one-man "staff" was announced in the issue of April 7, 1859.

Soon afterward Bulletin readers noticed still other indications that their paper had turned the corner. On May 21 and again on June 30 they received a two-page supplement, thrown in with the regular four-page issue; and on July 1 the advertising rate was raised. The rate had been $15 a year for a square of 16 lines. The size of the square was now to be reduced to 12 lines, but the $15 charge remained the same.

Next month the daily Courier suspended publication, and The Bulletin became the only daily newspaper in Norwich. Manning, Platt & Co. took their first full breath.

The way now lay straight and plain ahead of them. If they thought to set their feet at once upon the pathway that "was to be illumined by the sun of affluence," they were to be disappointed with the same disappointment that befel T. Jefferson Barney. But although it is true that the sun did not shine immediately, it is also true that always during the following years their star was in the ascendant.

WILLIAM D. MANNING was born at Norwich Falls on Oct. 19, 1818, was an apprentice in the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Philadelphia, learned the printer's trade in the Courier office and rose to be foreman, a position which he held for 13 years. In 1853 or thereabout he bought a job printing office on Shetucket street from John Dunham, former owner of the Courier, and five years later formed the merger with James N. Perry that was to give the two printers a combined plant capacity equal to getting out a daily paper.

Mr. Manning was the partner who had charge of The Bulletin's job and mechanical department. Though he sold out his interest in the paper in 1863, he was retained as mechanical superintendent and filled that position in all for 33 years.

He died on March 13, 1913.

JOHN HOMER BLISS was born in Hebron, Conn., on Aug. 4, 1832, and learned the printer's trade on the Norwich Courier. In 1852 he went to Waterbury, where he worked on the American for a year and a half.

In 1858, at his suggestion the firm of Manning, Perry & Co. was formed to publish a new paper, the "Co." being Mr. Bliss and Isaac H. Bromley. He soon disposed of his interest in the new venture.

There followed sundry connections with various other newspapers. Mr. Bliss settled in Plainfield in 1837 and spent the last 36 years of his life there. He retained his newspaper connections to the last, being connected with the Plainfield and Moosup Journals and correspondent for The Bulletin. But his life work, as he saw it, was the compilation of the Bliss genealogy, published in 1881.

Mr. Bliss died in Plainfield on Dec. 29, 1922.

JAMES N. PERRY was born in Lebanon on June 27, 1832 and learned the printer's trade on the New London Star. About 1856 he owned a job printing office in the Chapman building on Franklin square—the location of The Bulletin's first office. He was business manager of the paper for a few months, then went into the mechanical department. In 1860 Charles B. Platt bought him out and he went west for his health. Later he owned a file factory, which he moved to West Meriden in 1868. In 1875 he was back again in Norwich, where he started a cotton-hose factory. In course of time he returned to The Bulletin as an office employee. For the last 27 years of his life he was bookkeeper for J. P. Baratow & Co.

He died on Sept. 18, 1910.

NEW LONDON YULETIDE GREENERY MAY PROVE CAUSE OF LEGAL ACTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 14—The Christmas decorations of colored electric lights and festoons of evergreen roping suspended from electric light poles on State, Main and Bank streets, are liable to result in action for damages being brought against the city, or possibly the chamber of commerce. Today the high wind that prevailed caused numerous portions of the roping to fall and damage was occasioned. On Main street a section of the wiring holding the ropings in place was dislodged and the wiring caught on the handle of a door of an automobile owned by Miss Abbie Curley, Ledyard street, ripping the handle from its socket, the handle, fast to the wire, crashing against a plate glass window in the building south of the Savings Bank of New London. The metal hitting the window smashed it. In several other sections of the city, the wiring was broken and the police were besieged with telephone complaints because the fallen roping interfered with the conduct of business by the complainants. The city voted to cause the lights to be suspended from the poles and the chamber of commerce was given permission to cause the suspension of the streamers. This latter work is being paid for by merchants and was performed by a Westerly concern. When one of the complainants visited the office of the chamber of commerce for the purpose of inquiring who would defray the cost of repairs for the damage caused by one of the falling streamers, it was said that the chamber would not bear the expense, since the contract for the suspending of the festoons was given to the Westerly concern, and that firm, if anyone, would have to be held responsible.

The Fournier house, 147 Bank street, owned by Benjamin Kaplan, Bank street merchant, has been closed; the lock in the door has been turned by the owner. The closing of the rooming house was the result of two raids on the place by New London police when the tenants were charged and convicted of selling liquor and conducting a house of ill fame.

POISON BOOZE CREDITED WITH THREE RECENT DEATHS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 14—There is good reason to believe that bootleggers are distributing a very inferior grade of alcohol to dispensers of liquor in New London, and there is still greater reason to believe that there have been three deaths within as many weeks of habitues of places where the liquor is dispensed. The police are making an investigation of the sudden deaths of men who died since Thanksgiving day and in each instance death, either from primary or secondary cause, was the result of liquor drinking. While the police have not obtained any tangible clues that would indicate the stores or houses where the liquor was served, it was made known at police headquarters that an idea had been obtained that the supposed poisoned liquor was purchased in a certain section of the city and a section where all three men who died either resided or frequented. Two of the deaths resulted after an illness of less than two days. It has been known for a long time that an immense quantity of alcohol was being distributed to liquor sellers by bootleggers, but there has not been an arrest for transportation or a raid of places where stills are located in many months. It is also known that there is a group of bootleggers in New London, manufacturing alcohol in the outlying country, but whether this is the alleged alcohol that has been reported as causing the deaths is not known.

Joseph Rich, 16, of 24 Fox street, Palmer, Mass., arrested yesterday by Traffic Officer Thomas Cavanaugh, charged with being a suspicious person, was delivered into the custody of his father this morning, when the latter came to this city for the purpose of escorting the wayward boy back home. The youth came to New London Monday afternoon and was observed loitering on lower Bank street by the officer. When the boy was seen in the same locality yesterday the officer questioned him and it was the result of the interrogatives put to the youth that he was taken into custody.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the driver's license of Sayah Marder, 111 Connecticut avenue. The license was suspended three weeks ago.

Mrs. Fred Hall and infant son, of 715 Ocean avenue; Joseph Shaughnessy, Eastern Point road, Groton; Joseph Turano, Westerly; Mrs. Joseph Lewis, 107 Main street and Miss Marion Simonds, Connecticut College for Women, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

The funeral services for Vincenza LaFemina, 154 Shaw street, was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Joseph's church and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners, including a delegation of members of the Italian society. The mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Michael Meagan. Members of the society acted as bearers. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

John C. Geary, of Waterford, and James R. May, this city, have sold to Norris M. and Vera J. Treadway a building lot on Dell avenue, formerly Schwaner park.

The Masonic Club of New London, Inc., is to change its name; the club decided recently to do so and today Edward L. Streeter, Jr., and Arthur H. White, president and secretary, respectively, petitioned the secretary of state for permission to change the name to Doric Club of New London, Inc. The club is located on Huntington street and its membership is composed entirely of members of Brainard lodge of Masons.

Edwin C. Ford, local manager of the Southern New England Telephone company at a meeting of departmental executives at a luncheon at the Hotel Mohican yesterday, was presented a 45 years' service button.

Patrick Mullins was arrested tonight by Desk Sergeant Frank Howard, when Mullins came to the station house seeking lodging. He acted queerly and because Sergeant Howard considered it unsafe for Mullins to be at large he locked Mullins up. Mullins said that he was a bricklayer and that his father resided at 117 Middletown avenue, Hartford. He also said that he had been a patient in the asylum at Middletown, having been discharged six months ago. When inquiry was made of Mullins as to where he had been residing of late he could not recall whether in New London or Norwich. MUCH OF ZIMMER'S PROFITS GOES FOR COURT FINES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 14—Samuel Zimmer, who with Al Palits, is proprietor of the club room, 6 Pearl street, was in the police court this morning on two charges—conducting a gambling house and keeping liquor with intent to sell. He pleaded guilty, through entering a demurrer on both counts. On the first count he was fined $50 and costs and on the latter $150 and costs. Zimmer was arrested by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh last night when Martin Collier, a submarine base sailor, made complaint that he had been robbed of $15 at the club room. Collier said that he went to the club room about 7 o'clock and engaged in a game of black jack with an habitual of the place known as "Charlie, the Polock." During the progress of the game it is claimed by Collier, Charlie seized him by the throat and stole his money. The employe in charge of the club room was absent and when he returned Collier claims he told the attendant what had occurred. Collier then left the club room, saying he was going to a restaurant and would return, but instead he went to police headquarters and entered his complaint. Sergeant Cavanaugh accompanied Collier to the club room, where Collier gave the signal in order to obtain entrance. When the door was opened, Sergeant Cavanaugh forced his way through. He found several men seated about a table upon which were three pints of whiskey. These Sergeant Cavanaugh seized and when Zimmer put in an appearance he was arrested on the double charge.

Daniel McQueen, 48 Jay street, was presented on a charge of reckless driving, although when arrested he was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He pleaded guilty to the amended complaint and was fined $25 and costs. McQueen was driving on Huntington street last night and when near Church street, the auto collided with the car owned by Annie M. S. Bailey, of Fort Hill, Poquonoc, the latter auto being damaged. Complaint was made to Patrolman Edward Riordan and when he interrogated Mc Queen the officer discovered that the latter was intoxicated and arrested him.

John Irby was fined $5 and costs on a charge of breach of the peace. He was arrested last night by Patrolmen George Cockell and Clarence Wells.

The police late last night discovered practically all the lights in Bulkeley high school illumining the big building. Because of the inability of the police to enter the building the lights were allowed to burn the entire night.

Mr. Howe read the service for the dead and extolled the qualities of heart and mind of Mr. Gorton. The bearers were Fred F. Greene, Charles C. Perkins, Dr. E. P. Fitch and F. L. Newton. Burial was in the family plot in Jordan cemetery.

STOCK MARKET BECAME REACTIONARY AFTER EARLY OUTBURST OF STRENGTH

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—Heavy selling of the airplane stocks, presumably inspired by the widespread circulation of alarming rumors regarding the safety of Colonel Lindbergh on his flight to Mexico, turned the course of stock prices reactionary today after an early outburst of strength. Heavy selling for both accounts took place throughout the list, early gains of 1 to 7 points being substantially reduced or wiped out, and in many cases converted into net declines ssveral of which ran to 4 points or more.

Wright Aeronautical, which has advanced from 24 1-2 to 34 3-4 this year on speculative buying inspired by trans-oceanic and other long distance flights, broke from 91 to 83 and rallied to 84 1-2, off 4 1-2 net. Curtis Aero dropped from a high of 69 3-4 to 60 and moved back to 61 1-4, off 5 1-2 net. Porto Rican Tobacco B broke from 39 7-8 to 37 1-2, closing near the bottom, loss of 14 1-2 points.

Outside of the Lindbergh rumors, there was little in the day's news to cause the selling of stocks. Reports from steel centers indicated a moderate expansion in mill operations and increasing inquiries for material for early 1928 delivery. U. S. Steel common had crossed 148 to the highest point since mid-October in the early afternoon, but later sold down to 145 3-4 and closed at 146 for a net loss of about a point. American Steel Foundry, which has had a remarkable run-up, broke 5 points on realizing and Midland Steel Products preferred, which has advanced from 106 to 338 this year, dropped from 235 to 228 and snapped backio 231, off 3 points net.

Sharp reactions also took place in Abraham & Straus, Air Reduction, American Tobacco B, A. M. Byers, Gold Dust, International Telephone, Mathieson Alkali, National Biscuit, Timken Roller Bearing, Warren Bros. and Woolworth, all off 2 to nearly 5 points.

In the early up-swing, more than a score issues reached new high levels for the year, or longer. The list included American Metals, Burroughs Adding Machine, Calumet & Arizona, Continental Insurance, Davison Chemical, Freeport Texas, National Surety and William Wrigley, some of the gains running as high as 8 points.

Rails yielded with the industrials although the volume of offerings was not large: Chesapeake & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Norfolk & Western showed net losses of 2 points or more. New Haven common was heavily bought in apparent anticipation of dividend resumption next year, touching 59 3-4, the highest price in 11 years, and then yielding a point from that level on realizing.

Call money held steady at 4 per cent all day, despite the heavy mid-month settlements tomorrow. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

A brisk rally of $2.50 a bale in cotton, part of which was later lost, featured the commodity markets. Buying of cotton was influenced by the government consumption report showing conversion by mills in November well above last year. Wheat prices held fairly steady. Coffee and sugar markets were firm.

Except for a jump of about 15 points in Japanese yen to above 14 cents, the principal foreign exchanges wree slightly reactionary. Demand sterling was slightly easier at $4.87 29-32.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—National Tea company, Chicago, plans the sale of an additional issue of $750,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock, the proceeds to be used in the purchase of 156 stores from National Tea Co., of Wisconsin.

Stockholders of General Ice Cream corporation will meet in Schenectady Dec. 27 to vote on an increase in common stock from 260,000 to 450,000 shares and an issue of 50,000 no par shares of $60 cumulative preferred.

International Acceptance bank is shipping $240,000 in gold to the Straits Settlements.

Iron trade review reports increasing confidence in the steel trade. Consumers of heavy finished steel not only have been specifying more freely against low-priced contracts which producers threaten to terminate Dec. 31, but also have been covering liberally for first quarter delivery. With pig iron contracting for first quarter and first half shipment continuing satisfactorily, the trend toward strength in steel prices is more pronounced and production a few points higher in some district. Iron and steel markets are distinctly confident.

One of the largest foreign shipments made in recent years by an American manufacturer of machine tools on a single contract—16 carloads of machine tools and auxiliary equipment worth a quarter of a million dollars—has been sent to Japan, it was announced by Pratt and Whitney.

The rate of industrial activity in the United States in November was 3 per cent higher than in November last year, but showed a seasonal decline of 2.8 per cent compared with October this year, Electrical World reports. The rate of activity is based on the consumption of electrical energy by about 3,000 large manufacturing plants throughout the country.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 14—(AP)—Buying power broadened out to a notable extent in the corn market today, and corn values took a fresh upward swing. One of the most widely known figures in the grain trade came forward strongly in favor of higher prices for corn, and this circumstances together with an advance in corn export bids at the Gulf of Mexico did much to stimulate confidence.

Closing quotations on corn were firm, 1-2c to 1 1-4c net higher. Wheat finished 3-8c off to 1-8c up, oats showing 3-4c to 1c gain, and provisions varying from 15c setback to a rise of 30c.

Argentina's present corn supply is about exhausted, the statement said, and the new Argentine corn crop will not start coming until May or June. It was added that with European root crops small, trans-Atlantic countries will have to turn to corn from the United States, although even now but little corn is to be had in many of the corn belt states, and some of the corn buying in Chicago is coming from corn centers. Emphasizing these statements, country offerings of corn to arrive here were small today, and notices of consignments were also meager. Advances today were also facilitated by the fact that the technical position of the market had been strengthened by yesterday's sharp break which had carried prices down to about 40 from last week's top level.

Returns in corn values met with lively profit-taking sales, but every setback that resulted was transient, and the market closed at almost the day's top figures. Good general commission house demand was in evidence, and unusual interest was taken from a statement from a leading speculator who had espoused the buying side that he based his stand on belief that European demand for corn would make itself felt shortly and that purchases for export would be a significant factor in the not distance future.

Throughout most of the day, wheat values were inclined to sag, pending issuance of the Argentine official crop report due Dec. 18. Recent advices have shown a tendency to increase previous estimates of Argentine production.

Oats today showed independent strength. As with corn, rural offerings to arrive were small.

Eastern buying of lard helped to make provisions average higher.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—Trading continued at a brisk pace in the bond market today with easing tendencies in many sections. Pressure was most noticeable in issues which recently reached new high record prices and in the main was due to the disposition of traders to take their profits. Offerings of some of these liens were somewhat heavier, although there was no indication of any immediate change in the money situation. Considerable discussion of the possibility of stiffening interests rates, however, has followed the shipment of an additional $7,500,000 gold to England.

Buyers in today's market concerned themselves rather actively with some usually inactive issues which have not kept pace with the market. New York Susquehanna & Western 6s jumped more than 4 points and New York Westchester & Boston nearly 1 1-2, both reaching new peaks. A point gain to new maximum ground by Michigan Central 5 1-2s probably was in reflection of the declaration of 60 per cent extra and 20 per cent semi-annual dividends on the capital stock.

Most of the railway liens were fractionally lower, including the recently popular Erie issues, Chicago & Western Indiana 4s and Chicago & Eastern Illinois 4s. "Katy" 5s, on the other hand, reached a new high.

Andes Copper Mining 7s soared 5 points to a new high for the year and firmness was apparent in some other industrials. Porto Rican Tobacco 6s fell back more than a point, probably in sympathy with the weakness of the stock. Public utilities were quiet.

Aside from a point recession to a new low in Polish 7s, the foreign group was featureless, and prices generally fractionally lower.

Heavy transactions in third and fourth liberty 4 1-2s had little effect on the prices. Other federal government securities were relatively inactive.

New England Industries

DENTAL GOODS.

In 1914 Massachusetts made 8 per cent. of the country's output of the dental goods industry; but while the value of Massachusetts products increased 28 per cent. in the nine year period from 1914 to 1923, the output for the entire United States increased 100 per cent. in value during that same period, so that in 1923 New England supplied 2 per cent., or $670,000 worth of the country's output in that industry. This heading, as considered in a survey conducted by the United States department of commerce in co-operation with the New England council, does not include the manufacture of dental instruments.

Thirty per cent. of New England's establishments were in Rhode Island in 1923, but the value of Massachusetts' products was 90 per cent. of this region's total. Reporting plants have been in operation from 11 to 50 years, and nearness to market, labor conditions, accessibility of raw materials and banking facilities have been attractions to this part of the country. No branch plants were reported. The chief raw materials, gold and rubber, are generally purchased in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Only one plant reporting in this survey uses piece work or incentive methods of wage payment, and there is almost no seasonal fluctuation. Improvements have been effected in uniform cost accounting, prevention of accidents, balancing of productive capacity and demand, and continuous maintenance of plant and equipment.

Sales since 1921 have been slightly upward. Reasons reported by manufacturers for this trend have been lower production costs, new sales methods, new products and extended territories; while competition, high labor costs, and change in the nature of demand, have accounted for decreasing sales.

New England takes 39 per cent. of all sales, and the rest are distributed over this country and abroad. Exports in 1923 ranged from 1 per cent. to 25 per cent. of total reported sales. New England sales are reported by 25 per cent. of the companies as increasing and by 50 per cent. as decreasing. Regional increases were laid to publicity, and decreases to competition and use of substitutes.

The channels of distribution reported are various, with the largest number of products sold through wholesalers or jobbers or direct to the retailer. Ninety-five per cent. of the total reported output is branded or trademarked.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broad Theatre

Tom Mix, celebrated western ace, has one of the most thrilling roles of his long screen career in "The Circus Ace," a fast-moving drama of the west, which begins a two day run at the Breed theatre, Friday. Tom and Tony, catapulted into the very heart of circus life, find thrills without number when the star determines to rescue a beautiful performer from the schemes of Big Top workers who seek to dominate her. This is a picture for every member of the family, for Tom not only is perfectly at home in the tent scenes, but puts Tony through some strenuous stunts in a whirlwind campaign against the plotters. Natalie Joyce, a beautiful girl of the old south, plays opposite Tom.

Broadway Theatre

"In the Wrong Bed," Bide Dudley's great comedy, was presented last night at the Broadway by the Myrkle-Harder company which is filling a week's engagement here.

"In the Wrong Bed," is a delightful concoction of humor, funny situations and keen witticisms. Henry Boswell, the butler, impersonated by Wray Meltmar, furnished no end of fun by his clever characterization of that inebriated individual. Ben Ressler appeared as Harley West, a young engineer, who puts over a slick deal on John Carson, played by Paul Parr Smith, father of Jennie Carson, with whom the former is in love, a role assumed by Sara Jane Nichols with her usual vivacity.

Betty Fromen, as Lizzie the maid, gave a most creditable interpretation of this role and the part of Mrs. John Carson was ably taken by Hilda Graham. Richard E. Earle, as Dave Williams, who acquires a big jag on his honeymoon, having married Annabelle Wyngate, a spinster, who is a rank prohibitionist, a role admirably sustained by Dorothy Ives, kept the audience in good humor by his realistic interpretation of that character. Louis Heron had the part of chauffeur and Budford Dickson that of guard from an insane asylum from which the butler escaped.

Tonight the company will be seen in "Rain" and on Friday matinee, by popular request "What Anne Brought Home" will be repeated, so if your friends haven't already told you 'what Anne brought Home' this is your opportunity to find out. Don't miss this matinee. For one performance only, that greatest drama ever written of mother love, "Stella Dallas", the dramatization, of the most widely read novel of a decade.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Norwich was visited by several men of note seventy five years ago and included in the number were Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Ralph Waldo Emerson and ev. John Pierpont who lectured here. The lecturers were entertaining but the attendance was small at each lecture.

Rev. J. A. Goodhue was ordained and installed as pastor of the Central Baptist church during the second week in November and the files of the Courier also noted the death of Henry Strong, a prominent local laywer and at one time a member of the legislature.

Extracts from the files of the Courier of 75 years ago folelw:

Thursday, Nov. 11, 1852—We are pained to state that Thomas Barns, a conductor on the New London, Willimantic and Palmer railroad, met with a fatal accident on Tuesday afternoon. In attempting to step on board the train at one of the stations above Willimantic, just as the cars were starting a stick of wood rolled beneath his feet and threw him upon the track so that the car passed over one of his legs just above the knee. He was taken to New London and the leg was amputated, but the unfortunate man died during the operation.

The New Haven papers contain an advertisement for proposals for the grading and masonry of 71 miles of the Air Line railroad, commencing at New Haven and extending eastery.

The ordination and installation of Rev. J. A. Goodhue as pastor of the Central Baptist church in this city took place on Tuesday evening. The church over which Rev. Mr. Goodhue has thus been installed is one of the most numerous in the city.

Saturday, Nov. 13, 1852—Henry Strong died at his home here at a few minutes past 7 o'clock last evening. He had for many weeks been a sufferer from a paralytic stroke. He, it is true, was little known beyond the limits of his own state, but those who had been acquainted with his history need not be told that this fact is ascribable entirely to his own choice. He was a member of the legislature.

The following board of directors of the N. L. W. & P. R. R. was elected at a meeting of the stockholders: Gordon L. Ford, Andrew M. Frink, Acors Barns, H. P. Haven, Francis Allyn, Lyman Allyn, Thomas Fitch 2nd, N. Shaw Perkins, Loren B. Waldo, Joseph Smith and Calvin Torrey of Mass.

The earnings of the Norwich and Worcester railroad for the month of October were $34,886.60, a gain of $1,331.85 over the same month a year ago.

Tuesday, Nov. 16, 1852—The steamer Illinois arrived at New York from the isthmus on Friday with 308 passengers and $3,000,000 in gold dust. The passengers crossed the isthmus in eight hours and the Illinois made the trip from Aspinwall to New York in 7 day and 18 hours.

Notification of the death of Norman Brown, 53, in New York, on the 31st ult has been received in Norwich. He was a former resident of Jewett City.

Thursday, Nov. 18, 1852—The first of a series of lectures was given last evening by Rev. John Pierpont who introduced "The Up Town Course in a Poem," which we did not hear, but of which we hear from one who did hear, that it was as keen and cutting as a Damascus blade, yet good humored and kindly withal.

The faculty and students of Yale college are making arrangements to have pronounced a eulogy on Mr. Webster. Robert C. Winthrop of Massachusetts has been invited to perform this service.

One curious circumstance connected with the late gale on Lake Erie is the fact that a great number of human bodies have been seen floating near where the steamer Atlantic was sunk some weeks ago.

Saturday, Nov. 20, 1852—We have been shown specimens of silver and lead ore from the Middletown mines. We are informed that one ton of the silver ore produces 20 pounds of the pure metal. The lead is nearly pure as it is taken from the mines, there being only about 10 percent waste. About 15 men are kept at work in getting out the ore. An old and very deep shaft has been discovered—sunk, undoubtedly, more than a century ago.

Ralph Waldo Emerson gave the second in a series of lectures Thursday night, taking for his theme "Property." The attendance was small which was a regrettable fact as Mr. Emerson's talk was well worth hearing.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher of New York spoke last night on the subject Character. Commencing his discourse he drew the distinction between character and reputation and showed how they could exist together or apart.

Tuesday, Nov. 23, 1852—At a meeting of those favorable to improvement in the science of music held at the Congregational church in Central Village on Tuesday evening the following officers were unanimously chosen: President, Jarvis Crandall of Pomfret; vice president, Dr. J. B. Whitcomb of Brooklyn; secretary and treasurer, W. H. Doane; executive committee, Dr. H. J. Fisk, A. A. Olney, C. W. Rouse; committee of arrangements, Arnold Fenner, J. Sheppard, I. K. Cutler, Erastus Lester, Charles Hinckley, Daniel Wheeler, James Rouse.

Augustus Blanchard of Colon, Mich., and Miss Martha Devotion, daughter of the late Jonathan Devotion, Esq., of Windham, were married in St. John's church, Hartford, by Rev. A. Cleveland Coxe.

TERRYVILLE MAN WAS FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO

TERRYVILLE, Conn., Dec. 14—(AP)—Thomas Higgins, 68, of Main street, former postmaster here, was fatally injured when hit by an automobile in front of the town hall at 9.15 o'clock tonight. He died in the Bristol hospital an hour later.

Higgins had left the town hall and was crossing Main street. He is reported to have stepped out from behind a standing trolley and was hit by a car operated by Renny Valey, 17 of 109 Stuart street, Bristol. Higgins was carried 50 feet on the front of the auto.

The injured man was taken into the town hall and then rushed to the Bristol hospital. He was found to have suffered a broken arm and leg and serious internal injuries. Little hope was held by hospital doctors and Mr Higgins died soon after being admitted.

Valey and his companion, Richard Madigan, 19, of North Main street, Bristol were questioned by Chief of Police George F. Buckley, who communicated with Coroner Samuel Herman of Winsted. Valey had no license, police said, but Madigan did have one. The machine is owned by Valey's father. Chief Buckley released the youths on their own recognizance pending a coroner's inquest.

SUSPECTED OF VICTIMIZING JEWELERS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—A woman suspected of having systematically victimized Maiden Lane jewelers, was under arrest tonight with her husband and police were seeking two men who today walked off from a Maiden Lane establishment with $40,000 worth of gems.

Mrs. Martha Wood, 37, of Jersey City, was charged with grand larceny and her husband, Frank, 30, with acting in concert with her. The woman is said by detectives to have confessed to stealing $5,000 worth of jewelry in the past two months. Detectives say they recovered $2,000 worth of the gems. The woman was identified by three jewelers.

Two men asked to inspect the wares of a Maiden Lane establishment, a clerk today told police, and so honest was their appearance that he left them looking over $40,000 worth of diamonds. Upon his return he found men and diamonds missing.

ARKANSAS IS FACING ITS EIGHTH FLOOD THIS YEAR

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 14—(AP)—Arkansas' latest flood, the eighth of a year of disasters which left the state storm riddled and water logged, tonight had reached a stage of uncertainty and dread as more rain threatened the state generally.

South of Russellville, the Arkansas river was rising rapidly and pounding against newly constructed levees, unprotected farm lands between Russellville and Dardanelle were inundated.

Northwest Arkansas was working frantically to restore wire, highway and railroad service. Highways remained blocked tonight, however, with bridges washed out and roads flooded.

The Frisco railroad was not running trains north of Fort Smith. That city was cleaning up after a record rainfall but sections remained flooded and 43 persons were being cared for at the Welfare home.

The Arkansas river at Fort Smith still was rising, with the barometer falling. Weather bureau officials there predicted flood crests of the river.

The rise will force the Arkansas to one foot above flood stage here and at Pine Bluff.

PLAN FOR 71 WAR VESSELS TO COST ABOUT $725,000,000

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—(AP)—Congress was asked by the administration today to authorize the second largest naval building program in the history of the nation.

It proposed the ultimate construction at a cost of approximately $725,000,000 of 71 war vessels which would include 25 additional light cruisers, nine destroyer leaders, which are practically the equivalent of scout cruisers; 32 submarines and five aircraft carriers.

The plan was transmitted to Speaker Longworth by Secretary Wilbur who said that he had been informed by the director of the budget that "the proposed legislation is not in conflict with the financial program" of the president.

Secretary Wilbur said that the average expenditure each year during that time would be about $136,000,000.

The secretary pointed out that construction of the ships asked for would extend over a period of nine years as it would take four years to build the vessels laid down in the fifth year. It takes four years, he explained, to build an aircraft carrier, about four years to complete a cruiser, two years to finish a destroyer and three years for submarines.

In his communication to Speaker Longworth, the naval secretary said that while the estimated cost of the program was "merely speculative" he estimated that a rough appropriation of the cost would be as follows:

Light cruisers $17,000,000 each, total $425,000,000; destroyer leaders, $5,000,000 each, total $45,000,000; submarines, $5,000,000 each, total $160,000,000; aircraft carriers, $18,000,000 each, total $95,000,000,000. Total for program, $725,000,000.

HELD FOR PRACTICING LAW WITHOUT LICENSE

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—Clifford Weinberg, alias Wyman, who has served prison terms for posing as a physician and naval officer today was held for trial on charges of practicing law without a license. The complainant was James A. Brown, a broker, who said Weinberg had worked for his firm as an attorney from March to October, last.

Weinberg occupied the spotlight five years ago when posing as a naval officer, he introduced "Princess Fatima" to President Harding.

MME. LOUISE HOMER HAS RETURNED TO THE STAGE

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(AP)—Mme. Louise Homer, who retired from the Metropolitan Opera company nearly a decade ago, returned to its stage today as Amneris in "Aida". The role, one of her favorites in the heyday of her career, also is considered one of the greatest contralto parts in grand opera. Mme. Homer is scheduled to sing several times at the Metropolitan this season.

TWO TO FIVE YEARS IN STATE PRISON FOR ARSON

MIDDLETOWN, Dec. 14—(AP)—Edward Pisano was sentenced to a two to five year ter min Wethersfield state prison by Judge Alfred C. Baldwin in the criminal term of Middlesex county superior court here today.

Pisano had been bound over from Portland on charges of arson in connection with the firing of a four tenement dwelling there belonging to Anthony Siena on October 20, last.

At the public consistory to be held today in the Royal Hall of the Vatican the new cardinals will receive from the Pope the red hats and the cardinals' rings.

PREST-O-LITE NOW HAS LOCAL DISTRIBUTOR

The owners and operators of motor trucks in this section of the state may consider themselves fortunate in having a progressive, dependable concern such as the Norwich Welding Co., appointed distributors for Prest-O-Lite for Norwich and vincinity, as now they are assured of first class service at all times. They are also distributors for Prest-O-Weld, Oxy-Acetylene welding and cutting equipment, manufactured by Oxweld Acetylene company, also jobbers for Linde Oxygen and Prest-O-Lite acetylene for welding.

According to Mr. Bamber, proprietor of the welding company, Prest-O-Lite is the best light for trucks, and advances the following reasons why they are the best. In the first place Prest-O-Lite is the standard with experienced truck owners and is used by practically every big fleet owner in the country. It gives a steady penetrating light which has never been excelled, yet it does not bind or dazzle. It is always in service and dependable, as the racking vibrations and jolts of hard usage over rough roads do not impair its efficiency. There is no complicated mechanism which makes it easy to install and operate.

With Prest-O-Lite Gas Lighting equipment the driver can operate with greater efficiency, as he is able to see where he is going, which means making better time, and driving with safety. It costs less to operate than any other type, and are a permanent investment. There are no delicate parts which require frequent replacement. When the tank is empty you exchange it for a full one, and pay only for the gas. State officials have fully approved Prest-O-Lite.

It will be to the distinct advantage of owners and operators of trucks in this section to have a talk with Mr. Bamber and those who are not already using Prest-O-Lite he can readily show them where this lighting system will work out to their advantage, both from an efficiency and financial standpoint.

Mr. Bamber also calls attention to the fact that when people are putting their stoves, ranges and heaters into good condition that the Norwich Welding Co. is equipped to give first class welding service to those who find any broken parts, and brings out the point that a part that is welded with the acetylene system is as good and strong as new and usually the cost of welding is far below the cost of a new part.

Among the many things that this company is called upon to weld at this time of year are stove legs, stove doors and lids, gas stove parts, furnace parts, furnace tools, andirons, copper coils, range parts, hot water boilers, pipes for water or steam.

The men employed at the Welding company's plant are experienced workmen and every job is carefully and thoroughly done, with the result that the services of this fast growing concern, located at 95 North Main street, are in great demand.

Will you get service when you need it or will you have to wait until a service man gets the time to remedy your troubles. Radio sets that will meet all your requirements for service, endurance, combined with tonal quality and a guarantee backed by the Stromberg-Carlson company will be found on display at A. J. Fitz-Gerald's 21 Broadway, Norwich, Conn. MODERN RADIOS AND EXCELLENT SERVICE AT W. H. NELSON'S

What gift for Xmas would be more appreciated than a modern radio? It is difficult to think of anything that is within reach of the average person, that would be more pleasing to the individual or whole family than a fine radio.

W. H. Nelson, the well known electrical contractor, located at 252 Franklin street, is the authorized dealer for three nationally known and dependable radios that are guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction in every way. They are the Bosch Radio, manufactured in Springfield, Mass., the Kolster Radio, the well known Crosley, and the Sleeper "Electric Scout" manufactured by Sleeper Radio & Mfg. Corp., of Long Island City, N. Y. The Electric Scout set requires no batteries, operating direct from the lighting current, using standard tubes.

Inexpensive, simple, easy of tuning, glorious in volume and tone to a degree almost undreamed of in battery sets.

Imagine the joy of having no installation or upkeep problems—no cumbersome, confusing batteries to replace or recharge, nor substitute makeshift devices.

Here at last is a true electric set made by a company old in radio whose products have always enjoyed a good name. Here is a fine receiver of long established reputation with now the tremendous added advantages of electric operation.

Mr. Nelson has on hand a large number of these various models which he will be pleased to display upon request.

MODERN SHOE REPAIRING WITH OLD-TIME LEATHER

A re-soling job is only as satisfactory as the leather used, plus the skill in applying it.

Government regulations during the war required civilians to re-sole with 8 to 9 iron leather—the same as used then (and now in most part) in new shoes.

The result under government direction was longer wear and two re-sollings on every man's well-made shoe, instead of one re-soling now, when using hard, flinty leather and heavy weighing soles that pull the uppers out of shape and make your shoes wear out faster.

Shu-Fix Inc., located at 256 Main street, use "K. L." sole leather of the same weight originally built into the shoe. This guarantees you solid, natural, non-acid leather for service, style and comfort. Why use heavy weighing, acid-swelled leather that will not wear and is certain to shorten the life of the upper with a false weight that the shoe was not built to carry?

All work done by Shu-Fix Inc. is guaranteed to be perfect in every way, and all work is done by most modern machinery and all materials used are of the finest to be obtained.

CHOICE OF "A" BATTERY IMPORTANT

"To the new radio listener, the matter of power supply is usually the last thing he thinks of and naturally receives little consideration," says Mr. Morrill at Joe Moore's Garage, local Willard Battery man.

"As a matter of fact, the batteries or the power units on a radio set are very important adjuncts and should be chosen carefully.

"Roughly speaking, all current supply for radio falls into three classes. These are storage batteries, dry batteries and power units. Storage battery when run down, can be charged and placed in service again. Dry batteries, when discharged, are useless and have to be discarded. Power units can only be used where electric current is available.

"The first thing for the newcomer in radio to decide is whether he prefers to pay the higher original cost of storage batteries or power units and have the benefit of a long life power plant at low upkeep replacing dry batteries as fast they wear out. When this choice is made, the next step is to get the correct voltage in batteries.

"Certain radio tubes are rated at lower voltages than others. Storage batteries are not always used with these tubes, but they will work better on storage batteries, providing the correct voltages are employed.

"The filaments in peanut tubes are designed to burn on 3 volts or less. High voltages may burn out the filaments and ruin the tubes. At any rate, higher voltages will shorten the life of the tubes without contributing to their efficiency during life. Special storage batteries are built for the most efficient operation of these low voltage tubes.

"In choosing batteries, be guided by the voltages recommended by the maker or designer of the set and purchase batteries accordingly."

Don't Guess About Your Eyes
Weak, weary eyes cannot help but be dull, tired and strained. How remarkable a difference properly fitted glasses make. A recent testing of the eyes of some fifty thousand college students showed that over a third of them needed glasses, but most of them were not aware of the need. That is why we stress the desirability of an examination.

Russell H. Burdick

Wednesday morning at 8.30 o'clock the funeral of Russell H. Burdick, who died in Brooklyn, N. Y., Sunday was held from the home of his cousin, Mrs. John Enright at 419 North Main street followed by a requiem mass at St. Mary's Memorial church at 9 o'clock with Rev. William A. Keefe, pastor, officiating. The musical program of the mass was under the direction of Mrs. Michael J. Farrell, the organist. At the offertory she sang Pie Jesu and as a waiting hymn she rendered Jesus Lover of My Soul. At the recessional she played Chopin's Funeral March. The bearers were John C. Corcoran, Daniel S. Sullivan, Ralph Patrick, Christopher Barry, Bernard Enright and John Enright. Friends were present from Brooklyn and New London. Burial took place in family plot in Yantic cemetery. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Hourigan Bros.

Timothy Donovan of Hartford is spending a few days at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Donovan of Central avenue.

Some of the village youngsters have been collecting large quantities of evergreen with which to make wreaths and which they hope to sell to make extra money for Christmas. Bayberries are reported to be very plentiful this year and are in big demand for holiday decorations.

John Dunion of Hartford is spending a few days with his relatives in Greeneville.

Wild geese continue to pass over the village in greater numbers than ever before. There have been few flocks fly over which numbered less than 100 birds and Wednesday morning a flock which had nearly 150 members were seen honking their way south.

Mrs Edward McDonough of Mystic is the guest at the home of her son, Edward McDonough of Paige street.

Patrick Connor has returned to his home at 497 North Main street after spending a few days visiting with relatives in Springfield, Mass.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. George Simino, Philip Simino and Henry Simino of Merchants avenue have returned from Northampton, Mass., where they have been attending the funeral of a relative.

Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Prive of South B street have left town to make their home in Danielson.

Miss Emma Poyerd who has been a patient for several weeks at the William W. Backus hospital following an operation for appendicitis, has been discharged and is at the home of Norwich Town friends.

Walter Talcott has resigned his position with the No. 4 weaving department of the local mills.

Postmaster Adams and his assistants have begun to realize that the Christmas mailing season is opening, as about 300 Christmas cards arrived at the local postoffice Wednesday. Outgoing mails also are beginning to be very heavy with packages sent by local people who have learned that the most certain way to have a gift delivered by Christmas is to mail it early.

Miss Mary Ward, the president was the presiding officer at the meeting of the members of the St. Veronica's T. A. and B. society held Wednesday evening in their rooms on Providence street. A Christmas party for the members is being planned, which will include a tree and the distribution of gifts. Miss Ward was named the chairman of the committee which will arrange for the affair.

It has been reported that the sum of five hundred dollars was realized as the proceeds of the annual fair of the Taftville Congregational church held the early part of this month at Ponemah hall.

Rabbit hounds will be tied up this week, as the rabbit hunting season comes to a close Thursday. Hunters report that the season has been a very poor one for the cottontails, as they were not very numerous. Some believe that the wet spring was responsible for keeping down the numbers, as most of the animals bagged appeared to be of the two year old variety. The next event for sportsmen will be the gunning of ducks when they come up the Quinebaug. As yet no birds have arrived owing to the mild weather, but when the ice forms about the coast, the birds will come up the river in large numbers to the delight of the hunters.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix Ares have taken a house on Norwich avenue, Mr. Ares having accepted a position with the weaving department of the Ponemah mills.

Miss Florence Paquette of South A street has returned to her home from the William W. Backus hospital where she was a patient after an appendicitis operation.

Mrs. Christopher Troeger was hostess to the Thimble club Tuesday evening at her home on North A street. During the evening, Mrs. Troeger had the assistance of Mrs. Edward L. Sigrist in serving refreshments.

FIVE DAY JAIL SENTENCE AND FINE OF $300 AGAINST PETER PAPPAS

Four changes of plea by Peter Pappas of this city in the criminal common pleas court at New London Wednesday finally resulted in Pappas pleading guilty to the charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell and he was fined $200 and costs and given a five-day jail sentence by Judge C. B. Waller. Pappas kept a restaurant at 130 West Main street.

Represented by Attorney Thomas M. Shields, Pappas pleaded not guilty last Wednesday. Wednesday he asked to change his plea to guilty, which he did. Attorney Shields then told the court that it was his first offense and that since his appeal from the city court of Norwich, his restaurant "had not been the same place."

Prosecuting Attorney Charles B. Whittlesey told the court of the police finding a stew pan of white liquor in the restaurant and said that he purposely had made no recommendation in the case.

Judge Waller said that he could not see why he should change the judgment of the Norwich city court if the prosecuting attorney of the court of common pleas would not recommend anything.

So Attorney Shields received permission to have his client again change his plea. This time the accused went back to his plea of not guilty and elected to be tried by a jury.

The jury was brought in and the prosecutor addressed the jury as did Mr. Shields. Then a recess was taken. When court again convened the accused received permission to plead again and this time he pleaded guilty. Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey said that he wanted to recognize the man's good behavior since his arrest but could not recommend that all the days of the jail sentence be taken off so he recommended that only five days be given. Prosecuting Attorney Lee Roy Robbins of the Norwich city court explained the situation, upon request of Judge Waller, who then pronounced his judgment.

The following jurors were summoned for duty during this criminal term:

New London—Francis P. D'Avignon, William A. Crocker, Edward J. Murray, Albert C. Boardman, Fred E. Denison and Willam R. Beach.

Groton—Fred I. Rathbun, Louis B. Gardner, Philip O. Carter, George L. Burgess, Benjamin F. Allen, Newton Dickenson.

Stonington—Samuel E. Stewart, Fred J. Moll, Raymond Wheeler, Edward N. Newbury.

Ledyard—James N. Holdridge.

Montville—Raymond Palmer, William Tinker, Edward O'Brien, Milton Mitchell.

Waterford—Reuben Austin, Ernest Barrett, Bertus A. Brooks, Benjamin Humphries.

Lyme—Jared S. Daniels.

East Lyme—Clifford B. Clark.

Old Lyme—Frank J. Howard.

Nolled on $25 Payments

Mike Alkewich of Montville charged with failure to grant right of way, had his case nolled on the payment of $25. Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey said that he believed Alkewich looked towards the headlight of an approaching car and instinctively pulled his machine to the left rather than right.

James A. Spellman of Preston, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, had his case nolled on the payment of $25.

Walter C. Perkins of Waterford charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, had his case nolled on payment of $35.

The case of Edward C. Bergevin of New London charged with violation of the motor vehicle law was continued.

Because of a civil action pending the case of Peter Lappie, of Fitchville, charged with violation of a motor vehicle law which involved a fatality was continued. The coroner found Lappie not criminally responsible.

The case of Malcolm H. Austin of this city, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law was continued, as there is a civil action pending.

An absolute nolle was entered in the case of Leo Bellevance of Lisbon, charged wth violation of the motor vehicle law.

John Kenyon of New London, charged with breach of the peace, following an argument over a couple of dogs, had his case nolled. No blows were struck, Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey said.

Mother of 12 To Get Nolle

The case of Mary Cappoza of Waterford, who last week pleaded not guilty to two counts of violating the liquor law, had her case continued until the next term, and according to Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey it will be nolled on payment of costs then if no more liquor is sold by the defendant in the meantime. The prosecutor said Mrs. Cappoza was the mother of 12 children. She was represented by Attorney Lucio DeBiasi.

George Mattern of Preston, charged with violating the dog law, by having in his possession a dog unlicensed had his case nolled. The prosecutor said the defendant collected stray animals and intended to kill the dog in question and that before he actually did kill it, the officers arrived at his place.

A nolle on the payment of $35.71 in costs was entered in the case of Abbie Clyde of Stonington, charged with a violation of the liquor law.

The case of Henry Cabral of Waterford, charged with breach of the peace, was nolled upon the payment of $50.

Bonds were called in the case of Clark A. Walker, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, who failed to appear in court. Myrtle A. Parmelee was surety.

The case of Manual Victoria of Stonington, charged with violation of the liquor law, was nolled for lack of evidence.

NIGHT COURT SESSION HELD TO FINISH CASE

The $60,000 damage suit brought by the Textile Finishing Machinery Co. against the New London Ship and Engine Co. came to a close, so far as evidence is concerned, Tuesday night at 9:30 in the superior court at New London, before Judge Allyn L. Brown.

The court continued from 9:30 o'clock in the morning until 9:30 Tuesday night with only several brief recesses. The attorneys have nothing left to accomplish except filing their briefs.

The suit arose over the manufacturing of 15 castings by the New London concern for hydraulic presses. The Textile company claimed they were defective and would not withstand the amount of pressure for which they were designated but the local concern claimed that the castings were made in direct accordance with the specifications of the plaintiff. Attorneys Arthur M. Brown, Collins and Tillings, the later two of Providence, appeared for the plaintiff, while Attorneys Arthur B. Calkins, Frank L. McGuire and C. Hadlai Hull appeared for the defendant.

SPEEDING CHARGE NOLLED ON PAYMENT OF $25

Harold W. Mansfield, of Poquetanuck, arrested by the state police Tuesday on a charge of speeding, was presented in the city court Wednesday morning and the charge nolled on payment of $25. Tuesday, near Bushnell place, Thamesville, the Dodge delivery truck, owned by the Porteous & Mitchell Co., and driven by Mr. Mansfield, collided with an Essex machine which turned over three times. The Essex was operated by William Riolin, of Hartford. Both drivers escaped injury although the machines were considerably damaged. It is understood that bad driving conditions were responsible for the accident.

Organization Certificate Filed

A certificate of organization has been filed this week with the secretary of state by the Uncas Finishing corporation of Norwich, with an authorized capital of $50,000; $10,362.20 paid in; property valued at $29,637.80; 500 shares at par value of $100. The subscribers and directors are W. T. Camp, president, 90 shares; vice president, J. C. Worth, 400 shares and E. W. Perkins, 10 shares, all of Norwich.

NEW COLORS AND LARGE SIZE FOR HUNTERS' BADGES

New colors and bigger numbers are what the sportsmen of Connecticut will wear during 1928, according to a pre-season announcement on license buttons for next year by the state fish and game commission. Red, a very popular shade this year, is entirely missing among the 1928 colors, so much out of style that the display of a button of that shade, may cause arrest. Other colors which have had varying degrees of popularity in the past have also been dropped, but an expected increased demand for the decorations is indicated by a total supply of 86,000 buttons, in pink, green, yellow and cafe as against 64,000 in eight different colors ordered for 1927.

The numbers on the buttons have been increased in size until they are about half an inch high, making it possible to read the identification designation of the sportsmen at some distance. Buttons indicating the wearers has a hunting license will be pink; for fishing, yellow; combination hunting and fishing, green; and non-resident fishing, safe. This year's colors included green for hunting, red for a combination license, and pink for fishing, with different colors for non-resident licenses and for duplicates. Red is in disfavor for a license button because of the difficulty of making black printing highly visible against a background of this color.

Town clerks, who issue the licenses, and who fought hard but in vain during the 1927 legislature for an increase in the recording fee of 25 cents which is allowed them, will find their labors, if not more remunerative, at least lightened if the new plan works out as is hoped. License forms next year will be paper instead of cardboard, making possible carbon duplication.

READINGS AND MUSIC AT WOMAN'S GUILD MEETING

The Woman's guild of the United Congregational church had an afternoon of special social and entertainment features when it held its December meeting Wednesday at the Community house.

In the business meeting with the president, Mrs. Walter F. Lester, presiding the report was presented that the proceeds of the recent rainbow bazaar had been $700.

The shades were drawn and the meeting was held in candlelight with the room attractively decorated with red candles and laurel. An especially delightful Christmas programme of readings by Mrs. A. N. Foster with piano accompaniment by Miss Constance Learned was enjoyed. Mrs. Foster's selections were A Christmas Tree for Cats, Sober Cobwebs, Parable of the Christmas Stocking, The Other Wise Man (Van Dyke) and A Christmas Story. Accompanying these, Miss Learned rendered two Beethoven numbers, the first movement from the Moonlight Sonata and Andante from Appassionata Sonata, concluding with several Christmas carols.

Following the programme there was a social hour at which tea was served, Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard and Mrs. William Zumbro pouring. This part of the afternoon was in charge of the social committee of which Mrs. Arthur M. Thompson is chairman.

CONNECTICUT MAYFLOWERS NOW NUMBER 516

The board of assistants of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the state of Connecticut met on Monday at the home of the society's governor, Edwin H. Bingham, in Hartford. AVALANCHE OF DENIALS TO THE HEARST ACCUSATIONS

Publisher Submitted Documents Which He Said He Had Reason to Believe to Be Genuine, But Had No Evidence That Any Money Was Paid—Senator Heflin Admitted Receiving Money From Ministers, Ku Klux Klansmen and Others For Expenses of His Lectures in Mexico—Senators Borah, Norris and Lafollette Made Indignant Denials of Implied Accusations, as Did Also Dudley Field Malone and Arturo M. Elias, Mexican Counsul-General at New York.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—(AP)—Mexican documents of disputed authenticity, saying that $1,215,000 had been set aside by the government of Mexico for payment to Senators Borah, Heflin, Lafollette and Norris, were laid before a senate committee today and were answered immediately with unqualified denials by all of the principals involved.

The documents were submitted by William Randolph Hearst, in whose newspapers they already have been published in part. The publisher told the committee that while he had reason to believe the papers genuine, he had no evidence that any of the money was paid.

Three of the four senators named came before the committee voluntarily, and made their denials under oath. Borah of Idaho, who is chairman of the senate committee which deals with international relations, said he never had been approached "either casually, directly, expressly, or impliedly, in any way, shape or form." Heflin of Alabama declared he had received no money in connection with Mexico except from ministers, Ku Klux Klansmen and others for expenses of his lectures on Mexico, and demanded that the committee "make an example" of those responsible for the charges. Lafollette of Wisconsin described the attempt to link up his name with this matter "an infamous and cowardly fraud."

Norris of Nebraska, confined to his house by illness, rose from his sick bed to prepare a statement saying that he "never had an offer or any intimation that anybody contemplated offering me anything."

During its two sessions today and a third tonight the committee also heard denials from others who were named in the documents. Among the witnesses was Dudley Field Malone, the New York lawyer, named in the Spanish text of the documents as the pay-off man in this country. He said he never had any connection whatever with such a project, and described signatures purporting to be his as forgeries or copies.

Arturo M. Elias, the Mexican consul-general at New York, also took the stand just before the long afternoon session of the committee adjourned, and flatly denied the references made to him in the mysterious documents. He volunteered to be sworn before he told his story, despite the fact that the Mexican embassy has taken the position that he need not appear at all if he preferred to plead diplomatic immunity.

The Mexican government several times has denied the authenticity of the documents, but both Mr. Hearst and several of his employes said on the stand today that they had been assured the papers came from the official files of the Mexican government. Some of them, it was testified, were brought out of Mexico, and some were taken from Mr. Elias' Mexican consulate in New York. Mr. Hearst said they had cost in the neighborhood of $15,000.

The publisher also told the committee that it was his understanding that the collection had been submitted to the American embassy at Mexico City and to officials at the summer white house in the Black Hills some months before publication. He had been told, he said, that President Coolidge was "not willing to become acquainted with the details," but felt there was no proof that any of the senators named had taken money.

The same opinion was expressed freely among committee members during the hearing. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, the chairman, specifically called attention that "no evidence" of payments had been put into the record, and Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic floor leader, declared he was convinced no payments had been made.

Mr. Hearst, at the beginning of his testimony, passed the whole batch of documents gathered by the Hearst organization across the table in a big envelope, and the committee did not make all of them public. It was disclosed, however, that most of the $1,215,000 was covered in an alleged official order by the Mexican controller general, dated July 15, 1926, setting aside the money "to be charged to secret expenditures for pro-Mexican propaganda."

Under this heading Borah was to receive $500,000; Heflin $350,000; and Norris $250,000. Under a separate heading, Lafolette, designated by his initials "R. M. L." was allotted $15,000. The order of the controller general was addressed to the chief clerk of the controller's department, and there the trail ended.

The story of how the papers were obtained was gone into at some length by Mr Hearst and the witnesses who followed him. E. B. Coblentz, editor of the New York American, said he supervised preparation of them for publication, and made inquiries as to their authenticity, until he satisfied himself that they were "absolutely genuine." He added that the collection had been offered to Secretary Kellogg at the state department, but that the department declined to help in the investigation.

Both Mr. Coblentz and Miguel Avila, who followed him on the witness stand, related details of the negotiations by which the papers were procured. It was Avila, a former agent in the American Military Intelligence service during the war, who was credited with having extracted the documents from the Mexican files, working through clerks both in Mexico City and in the case of the consulate in New York. Testifying with a pronounced accent, he told a fascinating story of his experiences in New York, Mexico City and along the border.

Mr. Hearst told the committee that it was through Avila, Edward Clark, the manager of his mother's estate, and a third man whose name he gave to the committee in secret, that he first learned that the documents were procurable. He had expected at first to get only copies of the documents, he said, but when they came they were the originals. The fact that he kept the papers in his possession during the summer, he said, led him to discount the Mexican government's denials of their authenticity, since on one occasion it had been stated in a denial that an offer was made in August to sell the collection back to the Mexican government itself.

Asked directly whether he had any evidence indicating that any senator accepted payment, the published replied:

"No."

"Have you any reason to believe that any senator did accept any such money?" continued Chairman Reed.

"I have no reason to believe it at all," was the reply.

"As a matter of fact I do not believe it."

"Why did you not make an effort to determine whether the payments had been made?" asked Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

"Any such investigation, carried on at any length would have revealed entirely the documents."

"You intend to reveal them finally?"

"I did not intend to publish any names, and I did not."

(As the documents appeared in facsimile recently in the Hearst papers, the names had been marked out.)

"Well, because personally, I agreed with the statement which Mr. Clark said the president made, that in all probability this was merely a blind for the distribution of that money in some other direction."

When the witness said a little later that he had been surprised that no congressional investigation was ordered sooner, Senator Robinson asked if a congressional inquiry was one of his objects.

"That is what I thought it would result in," said Mr. Hearst.

The publisher also was questioned at length by Senator Robinson regarding his own holdings in Mexico, which he said probably would be quite unsafe now that the Hearst newspapers had published its Mexican expose. He declared he could not give details of his properties from memory but supposed they amounted to "three or four millions."

CALL FOR MESSAGES FROM CABLE COMPANIES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Subpoenas were issued tonight for all telegraph and cable companies in New York to furnish their messages relating to Mexican government business to the special senate committee investigating charges in Hearst newspapers of a $1,215,000 fund for four United States senators.

NO DEFINITE OUTCOME AT COAL CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—The coal conferecene called by Secretary Davis, of the labor department, recessed today without a definite outcome.

Officers of the Miners' union and the operators who had been asked to consider ways and means of ending the union mining suspension in the bituminous fields of Ohio, Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia separated after committees representing them had concluded a two day discussion of the situation. Participants agreed to allow Secretary Davis to make the only public statement as to their efforts, and the secretary in doing so indicated it was possible that further attempts might be made to settle the controversy.

In the discussion today, it was suggested the coal industry might set up for itself a "czar" to exercise power over its operations comparable to that exercised by such individual leadership in other industries.

In previous sessions proposals for a government commission to regulate coal mining were brought forward.

Most of the operators of the larger coal mining enterprises in the territory considered declined to invitations to attend and were not represented in the conference.

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF SLAYING DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

BLAKELY, Ga., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Following the acquittal of Harris Hayes, sixty year old farmer today, of a charge of murder in connection with the alleged poisoning of his 17-year-old daughter-in-law, Gladys Gould Hayes, of Detroit, the other indictments against Hayes and his wife were nolle prossed tonight on motion of the state's attorney.

There were two other indictments against Hayes and three indictments against Mrs. Hayes in connection with the deaths of their two sons, James and Amos, and the daughter-in-law.

Orders were given to the sheriff tonight to release the aged couple at once. They had been held without bail for three months.

OKLAHOMA SENATE HAS ADJOURNED TILL DEC. 28

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 15—(AP)—Adjournment until Dec. 28 was taken by the Oklahoma state senate tonight to provide time for summoning of witnesses and other preparations for the impeachment trial of Gov. Henry S. Johnston and two other state officials.

The senate stipulated, however, that it might be called into session at any time in the interim upon the call of Senator Mac Q. Williamson, presiding officer of the court of impeachment.

The adjournment was designed also to give leaders of the house of representatives, who preferred the charges against the officials, an opportunity to prepare their case in procedure.

INJUNCTION AGAINST MAX NOVGROSKI OF STONINGTON

HARTFORD, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Upon the petition of Assistant U. S. District Attorney George H. Cohen today Judge Edwin S. Thomas issued a temporary injunction restraining Max Novgroski, of Stonington, from proceeding with the construction of caissons in the Pawcatuck river.

Novgroski is the owner of a building on the south side of the West Broad street bridge in the village of Pawcatuck, Stonington. The government alleged that on July 20, 1926, the defendant without authority from the war department, proceeded to build caissons in the bed of the Pawcatuck river, which the government claims is a navigable stream. The caissons constitute an obstruction, Assistant District Attorney Cohen alleged, and should be removed.

The restraining order is returnable in New Haven, December 23.

At the time of the commencement of construction work, criminal proceedings were instituted against the owner and the contractor for the work. They were brought before a U. S. commissioner for a hearing which was continued.

During the continuance the contractor ceased operations and brought suit against Novgroski under the terms of his contract and received judgment. The criminal procedure against the contractor was then dropped, but is still pending before the U. S. commissioner against Novgroski.

BITTER ARGUMENT AT OIL CASE CONTEMPT HEARING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Whether Frank J. O'Reilly, a Burns detective, would be permitted to tell of conversations he had with the parents of Edward J. Kidwell, Jr., juror in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case, provided hours of bitter argument today in the criminal contempt proceedings against Harry F. Sinclair, William J. Burns and their associates.

O'Reilly answered four questions in an entire day on the stand and the remainder of the time was taken up with controversy. Government counsel yesterday introduced testimony to show that the detective visited the home and place of business of the jurors parents in shadowing the oil jury on orders from Sinclair. The witness was warned not to tell of the conversations and defense counsel charged that the government was withholding and obscuring the "heart" of the witnesses testimony.

The battle raged anew when on cross examination the government objected to counsel for the defense questioning O'Reilly as to the conversations. The arguments continued from soon after the time court opened until it adjourned for the day. Justice Siddons had not ruled on the objection when he left the bench.

MAGRUDER BEFORE THE HOUSE NAVAL COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—(AP) — A barrage of accusations of inefficiency and waste in naval administration was laid down today around the heads of high naval officers by one of their brothers in command, Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder.

Defending before the house naval committee his recently published articles attacking the navy, Magruder declared that there ware too many high officers, that seven navy yards could be abolished and that the navy should have ships built in private yards rather than attempt the construction itself.

Magruder's testimony was prefaced by a clash between members of the committee over whether he should proceed under oath, it was decided finally, by a vote of 16 to 3, that he would not be sworn in but not before Chairman Butler had announced that he would resign from the committee before he would "anticipate that this witness won't tell the truth."

OPERATING AUTOS WITH DEFECTIVE EQUIPMENT

HARTFORD, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Motorists on Connecticut highways, in a ratio slightly in excess of one in each 100 are operating automobiles with equipment which is defective in some feature, according to statistics made public today by Robert T. Hurley, commissioner of state police. The statistics are the result of an intensive campaign by state police a few weeks ago, when, during seven different periods, 71,844 automobiles were counted by the officers engaged in the survey and 955 arrests were made. Reports received at state police headquarters show 654 convictions have been secured, while some of the cases are still pending.

COMMITTED SUICIDE IN KITCHEN OF HIS HOME

HARTFORD, Dec. 15.—(AP)—While his wife and her sister were sitting in the living room of their home at 14 Jefferson street, tonight, Charles Edward Sylvester, 38, committed suicide in the kitchen, just two rooms away. He was found at 9.30 o'clock on the floor with a gas tubing in his mouth and a cotton pillow case wrapped around his head.

Examiner Henry N. Costello was called and pronounced death due to suicide.

Mrs. Sylvester said her husband had been ill for many months and had been subject to moody spells.

DOZEN PERSONS INJURED WHEN TRAIN HIT ENGINE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 15.—A dozen persons were reported injured when the "Redbird" Chicago and Great Western passenger train collided with a switch engine at South Park, a suburb tonight. The injured were brought to hospitals here. The train was en route from Rochester to the twin cities. It carried about 75 passengers. The engineer was injured.

$400,000,000 Gain By Federal Treasury

During the Last Fiscal Quarter—Eight Foreign Countries Made Payments.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The tills of the treasury gained approximately $400,000,000 in the close today of the regular quarterly fiscal operations.

These operations represented a turnover of approximately $1,250,000 and included operations that made possible approximately a billion dollar reduction in the national debt for the calendar year, leaving it at about $18,000,000,000.

The principal sources of receipts from the quarterly financing came from the last payment of federal taxes for the calendar year, estimated at $430,000,000, subscriptions to the 3 1-4 one year treasury certificates placed at $261,761,000, and semi-annual payments on foreign debts to the amount of $96,544,250.

Expenditures were represented by $315,799,000 for the retirement of maturing treasury notes, $75,000,000 interest payments on the first liberty bond issue, and $10,000,000 for running expenses.

Eight foreign countries came forward with payments on their funded indebtedness. Of the total brought in from this source, Great Britain paid the bulk with $92,575,000. Of this amount only $25,000,000 was applied to the principal of the British debt. The remaining $67,575,000 going to interest. The British payment was made in 4 1-2 per cent treasury notes maturing today, which were accepted at par. It brought Britain's total payments since 1923 up to $903,506,879, leaving a balance due of approximately $4,500,000,000.

The other seven countries paid in cash, Belgium paying $1,246,000; Czecho-slovakia, $1,500,000; Esthonia, $75,000; Finland, $182,210; Hungary, $89,724; Lithuania, $47,896, and Poland $1,000,000.

BANK CASHIER IMPLICATED BY OWN BANK ROBBERS

HARTFORD, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Testimony that the Plantsville bank robbery on June 22, was a fake hold-up carried out in collusion with the bank cashier, Raymond T. Olsen, of Meriden, after it had been planned by Stuart R. Florian, 24, of Southington, was given by two of the bandits Albert W. Meyer and Thomas Di Marco, of Cicero, Ill., who turned state's evidence against Florian in his trial on the robbery charge before Judge Ernest C. Simpson and a jury in the superior court today. The case will go to the jury late tomorrow.

State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn declined to comment on this significant development in the case when interviewed at the close of the trial today. Suspicion that the crime was what is called an "inside job" is said to have been rampant in Southington for several months, but the testimony of the two bandits, based on their information they declared they got from Florian, is the first expression in support of it.

Olsen, a big, bristly-haired youthful man with a military carriage and continual smile, was given an opportunity to answer the suspicion on cross-examination by Florian's counsel, Nobel E. Pierce.

"There is a lot of talk about you and Florian made this up together, isn't there?" asked Mr. Pierce, in his first question of Olsen.

"I have heard that," was the smiling answer.

"You didn't know they were coming to the bank?"

"No, sir."

"You didn't make any plan with Florian?"

"No, sir."

Throughout the trial, when on the witness stand or in the spectators' seats, listening to the testimony of the bandits naming him as a partner in the crime, Olsen maintained the same smile that he is said to have worn when the bandits entered the bank and told him to stick up his hands and pass over the money they were "supposed" to get.

$5,000 CASH ROBBERY BY FIVE BANDITS IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Threatening death to the cashier and 10 women employes, five robbers held up the business office of the University of Chicago late this afternoon and fled with $5,000 in cash of the university's pay-roll.

The robbery took place while university employes were appearing for their pay. The loot consisted entirely of cash and currency scooped from the cashier's cages.

Four of the robbers were masked and armed with pistols. The fifth, apparently the leader, was un-masked and carried a rifle, directing the hold-up.

The cashier, William J. Mather, and the various other employes, were thratened with death if they made an outcry or moved. The robbers fled in an automobile.

AVERTED CHARGES OF ABDUCTION BY MARRIAGE

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Charged with being a fugitive from justice, Arthur Giordano, 22, of Lawrence, Mass., today married Jennie Kip, 18, of Newburyport, Mass., after the girl's father, Henry Kip, relented in his determination to have Giordano returned to Massachusetts for abducting his daughter.

After the wedding, the charges against Giordano were dismissed. He was arrested last night at the telegraphed request of Mr. Kip, who made a hurried trip to New York today to prosecute him. Jennie told her father in court today that the best thing he could do was to consent to the marriage.

$387,770,000 Tax Bill Passed by House

Democratic-Republican Coalition Overrode the Republican Party Leaders.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—With a democratic-republican coalition holding a whip hand, the house tonight passed the tax bill with three major amendments which were vigorously opposed by republican party leaders.

On a final showdown, however, only 21 republicans were willing to go on record against the measure after exhausting every parliamentary means to eliminate the three contested amendments, among them one for repeal of the sales tax on automobiles. The vote on passage was 366 to 24.

Sent to the senate within ten days from the time congress convened, the bill as approved calls for an estimated annual cut of $289,770,000 in treasury revenue compared with $332,739,000 reduction proposed by the ways and means committee which whipped the measure into shape before the start of the session. Its total is $64,770,000 above the $225,000,000 suggested by Secretary Mellon as the safe maximum and many of its provisions differed radically from treasury recommendations.

The three amendments which republican leaders sought to knock out of the bill at the last minute had been adopted earlier in the week under rules which prevented roll call votes. Two, relating to corporations, were sponsored by Representative Garner, of Texas, ranking democrat on the ways and means committee, while that calling for repeal of the automobile sales tax levy was championed by Representative McLaughlin, of Michigan, a republican on the committee.

Just before the bill came up for final passage, however, roll calls were in order, and when the house, by record, votes, refused to reverse itself on the three changes, the republican leaders made a move to send the bill back to the committee. But a majority of the membership wanted it passed, and the motion to recommit, offered by Representative Bacharach, republican, New Jersey, was rejected by a wide margin.

The bill call vote today on the McLaughlin amendment to repeal the sales tax on automobiles, was 245 to 151 with democrats and about a score of republicans supporting the proposal. The bill as it reached the house from the ways and means committee proposed a reduction of the present three per cent rate to 1 1-2 per cent.

The two amendments sponsored by Garner, were supported by a similar coalition although a smaller number of republicans turned a deaf ear to their leaders.

One proposed a bracket of lower tax rates for corporations with net taxable incomes of $15,000 or less instead of the flat rate of 11 1-2 per cent recommended by the committee while the other would require corporations and their subsidiaries to file separate instead of affiliated returns.

The house by a vote of 212 to 181 sustained the lower rate proposal and then adopted 210 to 187 the joint tax return plan.

A last minute move of Bacharach, to send the bill back to the ways and means committee instead of passing it along to the senate would have undone the work the house had accomplished on the bill and the motion was defeated, 301 to 93. Chairman Green was included among those opposing this move.

The final vote on passage found Green, Representative Tilson, the republican floor leader, and practically all other republican leaders in the house except Chairman Madde, of the appropriations committee, supporting the measure. Only one democrat, Huddleston, of Alabama, voted against the bill.

The republicans who voted against the bill were: Aldrich, Rhode Island; Bacharach, and Fort, New Jersey; Bowles, Massachusetts; Christopherson and Williamson, South Dakota; Clarke and LaGuardia, New York; Frear, Peavey, Nelson and Schneider, of Wisconsin; Hale and Wason, New Hampshire; Hersey, Maine; James, Michigan; Madden, Illinois; Merritt, Connecticut; Ramseyeer, Iowa; Simmons, Nebraska, and Sinclair, North Dakota.

In addition to the republicans and Huddleston, Vale, farmer-labor, Minnesota, and Berger, socialist, Wisconsin, voted against the bill.

REPUBLICANS CONTROL SENATE REORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Drawing the support of both the irregulars in their own party and the one farmer-labor member—Shipstead, of Minnesota—the republicans were able today to hold control of the senate organization.

By a margin of a few votes they re-elected Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, president pro tempore; Edwin P. Thayer, of Indiana, secretary, and David S. Barry, of Rhode Island, sergeant at arms.

Senator Moses was elected over Senator Pittman, democrat, Nevada, by a vote of 42 to 39; Thayer was elected over Edwin A. Halsey, of Virginia, 43 to 41, and Barry won over J. S. Dobel, of Montana, 42 to 40.

The republican candidates for president pro tem and secretary were re-elected without discussion, but a fight was made on Barry by both Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, and Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri. Their opposition to Barry was based on his refusal to carry out directions of the special slush fund committee last spring after the resolution affirming its authority to sit during the recess of congress had been lost in the filibuster directed by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania.

Party lines held on the roll call, however, as any doubt as to the re-election of Barry was removed when Senator Shipstead cast his vote with the republicans.

LINDBERGH'S SMILE WINS ADMIRATION OF MEXICANS

Youthful Aviator Declared That the Reception in Mexico City Impressed Him More Than Any Other He Had Received at Home or Abroad—Ambassador Morrow Accompanied Colonel Lindberg on the Official Calls—To the Shouts of "Viva" Lindberg Responded With His Usual Quick Smile and a Wave of His Hand.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 15—(AP)—Mexico coquetted with America's bashful beau today, giving him a reception that impressed him more than any other he had received at home or abroad.

"Vivas," flags and bunting in the capital of the southern republic vied with New York's ticker tape, and the bouquets and medals of Washington, Paris and London, in acclaiming Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh as the darling of the people wherever he goes.

President Calles, who hugged the American flier on his arrival yesterday, put the official seal on the nation's welcome by a half hour conversation with him in his private office. The aviator left Chapultepec Palace for an afternoon of sightseeing and other entertainment, to be followed by a fete in his honor arranged by the foreign office at one of the city's largest theaters.

Lindbergh said at his reception, "I have never been so impressed by any of my receptions anywhere as that in Mexico, and I am very grateful for the warmth and spontaneity of the expressions of good will."

The young flier made a series of official visits in the morning after a 12 hour sleep at the American embassy and then went to Valbuena airfield to see the famous other half of "We" that carried him from New York to Paris, over practically the entire United States on a nationwide tour, and eventually from Washington to Mexico.

Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow accompanied his youthful guest on the official calls. Several hundred persons had gathered at the gates of the American embassy when Colonel Lindbergh and Mr. Morrow left it for the foreign office. The crowd shouted "Viva!" and Lindbergh responded with his usual quick smile and a wave of his hand.

As the ambassadorial party proceeded through the decorated streets to the foreign office crowds recognized and acclaimed him. Within a few minutes after arrival at their destination the corridors of the building were packed with spectators, who overflowed into the street.

A formal reception for the flier was held in the great salon, Acting Foreign Minister Estrada and prominent members of the foreign office greeted him warmly in the name of the nation. They proposed a toast to good relations between the United States and Mexico. Lindbergh courteously touched a glass of champagne to his lips, but did not drink any of the wine.

Senor Estrada then expressed the belief that Lindbergh's latest flight had already strengthened and will continue to strengthen friendly relations between the United States and Mexico. Lindbergh replied that nothing he has ever done could please him more than that.

The flier and his host then went to the presidential palace, stopping on the way at the National Museum for Lindbergh to see the historic Aztec calendar stone by which the ancient natives of Mexico reckoned time.

As the Americans approached the national palace the military guards snapped to attention and Colonel Lindbergh returned their salute. The party, limited to the ambassador, the flier, Senor Estrada, and General Alvarez, then entered the president's private reception room with an interpreter, and remained in conversation with Mexico's chief executive for half an hour.

The unofficial aerial envoy received approximately 200 congratulatory cablegrams during the day from all parts of the world, in addition to scores of messages from officials and individuals throughout the United States.

ATTITUDE DECLARED BY PREMIER MUSSOLINI

ROME, Dec. 15—(AP)—Preliminary work must be done through conversations and diplomatic channels before Premier Mussolini of Italy and M. Briand, French foreign minister, meet for a final exchange so that there may be an understanding between France and Italy.

The premier made this declaration before the council of ministers today, and he was inspired by a desire to reach an understanding over the various pending questions between the two countries. It produced an immediate feeling of relief in the Franco-Italian tension in Rome and an amelioration of the unfriendly attitude displayed in certain Italian quarters during recent weeks.

Italy desires to have the Italian nationality of her colony in Tunis pro-Tangier and acknowledgment of her Tangier and acknowledgement of her rights in the Adriatic and also her preponderant interests in the Balkans.

Furthermore, Italy desires that the anti-fascist propaganda in France be discouraged, as she considers it a violation of her right to conduct her internal affairs in her own way, without foreign interference. France has shown a good disposition in this direction, it is pointed out, by suppressing the anti-fascist organ, Corrier Degli Italiana, published in Paris, which was considered a daily slander on fascism.

Finally Italy wishes France to recognize the necessity of Italy having colonies adapted for the absorption of her surplus population. The paving of the way for an understanding of all these vital questions means long preliminaries before Mussolini and Briand finally meet to sign an accord.

"If you come through the town of Berlin, I wish you would come to my house on Swamp road. Now, if you do come, I want you to bring me a nice American sheik, not an Arabian one. Because the one I had was too bashful. I want one that is not afraid to go out alone in the dark.

"Many loving kisses out of my heart.

"P. S. If you are a single fellow, meet me at my home on Christmas eve. This means the one that reads this note."

The letter was written on a good grade of note paper and the envelope was distinctly feminine in type, the mayor said.

PROSECUTION RESTS IN REMUS MURDER TRIAL

CINCINNATI, Dec. 15—(AP)—Capping its long effort to send George Remus to the electric chair for murder, the prosecution late today presented as a witness the 52-year-old, grey-haired mother of the wife he slew and, with the jury still leaning forward eagerly to catch her low-voiced testimony, suddenly rested its case.

The defense too anticipated to spring a coup. It unexpectedly announced its case was closed.

That left out of the record the final report of the three alienists who today presented their final conclusion:

"That the defendant, George Remus, was sane at the time of the commission of the act of killing, to wit, on Oct. 6, 1927."

Prosecutor Charles P. Taft 2d, asserted he had depended upon Judge Chester R. Shok to call the alienists, but got permission to reopen the case and lay before the jury the finding to which Remus, as his own chief of counsel, had bound himself to adhere.

QUEBEC, Dec. 15—(AP)—The ice-sheated ruins of Hospice St. Charles Orphanage for Girls today had given up the bodies of 33 children who perished when a fire destroyed the structure last night, twenty-one others were still missing.

Only a waste of charred wreckage marked the site of the 85-year-old orphanage. A modern wing, however, was untouched by the flames. Sorrowing crowds which flocked to the blaze last night returned today to aid in the search of the ruins.

Local merchants are guarding against the expected invasion of a pair of clever swindlers who have victimized store-keepers in Putnam and other cities of this section. The "gag" worked by the two men is simple but quite effective. A young man comes into the store and hands the clerk a bona-fide $20 bill for a small purchase. The customer has hardly left the store when an impressive gentleman rushes in and after showing a detective badge proceeds to make a hurried check-up of the young man's visit to the store. This work has already been started and will be completed as soon as possible in all parts of the state.

Another innovation by the telephone company which accords with the commissioner's highway safety program, is the placing of a red reflector on the rear of each of the company's construction trucks. This will be used, in addition, of course, to the proper red tail light required by law. The red reflector will be so placed on telephone trucks that it will pick up the rays from a headlight running in back of it and thus will serve as a warning signal which it will be possible to see for some distance.

While the telephone company's cars and trucks are not on the road much after 5 o'clock and seldom later than that except in emergency work, those in charge of this large fleet desire to co-operate in every way possible to promote safety on the highways of the state and for that reason, the program of inspection of headlights, and the placing of the red reflectors on trucks, has been adopted by the company.

BALTIC

Rev. James Hoey Assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus, held its December business meeting the 14th at the Club hall. The election of officers resulted as follows: president, Mrs. Irene Passmore; vice president, Mrs. Margaret Delaney; treasurer, Miss Eleanor Brennan; financial secretary, Mrs. Fidelis Conway; mistress at arms, Mrs. Madelyn Drescher; sentinel, Miss Stella Conway; trustees, Mrs. Madelyn Drescher, Mrs. Katherine Brennan, Mrs. Eliza Cote; auditors, Mrs. Annie Lemoine, Mrs. Eva Papineau, Miss Gladys Papineau; publicity, Mrs. Blanche Case. These officers will be installed at a later date, by the state president, Mrs. Margaret N. Dutton, of Norwich.

Thursday afternoon the population of the town of Sprague was excited when they heard the sound of a fire truck siren, but later rejoiced because it was Baltic's new Reo fire truck and pumper, which will give added protection to all residents. During the afternoon, Chief McGuire and John Drescher, who will have charge of the motor truck, went out with the instructor for their first lesson in operation of the new apparatus.

From a local theatre Tuesday night, fourteen people went home very happy as there were fourteen boxes of chocolates given away.

Miss Anna Raine, employed in the speeder room at the Baltic mills, had a fainting spell and while on her way for a drink of water, fell and cut her head.

The firemen's room, located in the town hall, is being remodeled and painted.

Baltic merchants are all showing seasonable spirit in their window displays.

New French Formula Quickly Relieves Rheumatic Agony

A marvelous French prescription evolved by the noted Dr. Beaupre in treating crippled soldiers at Aix-les Bains during the war, banishes the pain of rheumatism by ending the cause.

Dr. Beaupre found in handling thousands of cases of rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, etc., that such ailments were due to internal infection, such as blind pus pockets in the teeth. Poisons carried by the blood to the muscles, joints and nerves set up inflammation and cause pain. Dr. Beaupre's prescription neutralizes these poisons as bicarbonate of soda neutralizes acids, bringing prompt relief—that tends to become permanent. Usually a ten-day treatment clears up even an obstinate case.

Any one can now get this marvelous prescription from any druggist.

RADIOS FOR THE BLIND

What cannot fail to be regarded as a very fine thing is the presentation of radio sets to the blind people of the state. Special efforts have been made to encourage such people in making the best possible use of their time, but it is to be realized that they have many hours when they are not employed, when conversation isn't always possible and when they are not able to entertain themselves by looking out the window.

When it is stated that through the efforts of the American Foundation for the Blind 200 sets have been given to blind people in the state in the last 18 months it cannot fail to be recognized as an act that deserves the utmost praise. That more are to get them soon is all the more pleasing. By all means let the good work go on and it is not improbable that a knowledge of such action will serve as an inspiration to many individuals who simply desire to know of such laudable work to give it their support.

There are in fact many radio sets which have been put aside for something better, although far from being worn out, which could be put to excellent use in this very direction.

To those who are suffering from handicaps, infirmities and illness, to those who are numbered among the shut-ins, the radio is a source of great pleasure. It can be brought into use, or shut off, at will, provided it is on its good behavior, and there is a variety of entertainment to be had which would be available in no other way.

The radio is of great value to institutions where the sick, the feeble, the aged or the young happen to be located for it puts them in touch with something to take up the minds of the inmates and it likewise keeps them closely in touch with all important events in the outside world, the only effort in connection therewith being to listen. The radio furnishes a most pleasing diversion, when all goes well.

NEW ENGLAND AGRICULTURE

We hear much said both of an encouraging and discouraging nature concerning agriculture in this part of the country, and we also hear about and have a chance to see the abandoned farms of New England. President Thatcher of the Massachusetts Agricultural college doesn't undertake to say that a farm problem doesn't exist or that there are any abandoned farms in New England but he is decidedly optimistic about them.

Speaking before the Massachusetts grange at its annual meeting he painted a bright picture for the future when he said, "Altogether it seems to me that the outlook for New England agriculture is really better than it has been for the past 50 years. It no longer has to compete with a constantly new agriculture in the west, on newer fertile lands and with more favorable climatic conditions for crop production, as it has to do since the post-Civil war developments in the west." He also made reference to the fact that Massachusetts, like Connecticut, was one of the states where farm population has not experienced a decline since 1920, as it has done in so many states and, he added, "I even expect to see some of our 'abandoned farms' brought back into production again."

Such a statement from an expert indicates that New England has been giving heed to some of the advice that has been so freely distributed for its benefit concerning the various branches of agriculture. When farm population has not followed the trend in other states it indicates an appreciation of the opportunities that are afforded by New England farms to meet the demands of the people and the advantage of the position which they hold to the markets. With thought rightly centered upon such matters there seems to be ground for believing that certain of the unused farms will yet be redeemed and a greater interest developed in agriculture. If it can be brought to a better business basis like other industries the real benefits can be obtained. That the outlook in New England is rosy is all the more gratifying.

SAFEGUARD HUMAN LIFE

A bad example, like history, repeats itself. In fact it comes too often, and it is hard to understand why so many repetitions are necessary before real steps are taken to correct what it discloses.

The destruction of the orphanage in Quebec where 871 children, ranging in age from three to 16, were housed is the latest demonstration of the need of fireproof structures for such institutions. Just how many lives have been lost in the Canadian city's fire is uncertain at this time, but the number was too many however small it may prove to be.

With such a large number of children to be cared for under all conditions there was need of much better facilities than those which prevailed for dealing with fire at night. Under such emergencies small children, or aged and infirm persons, are not able to look out for themselves and they deserve the best possible protection for their safety.

Because an institution hasn't had a fire doesn't mean that it never will. Just what was the cause of the fire in the orphanage will probably be determined in time, but it seems possible that it was occasioned by the heating apparatus. That cause is frequently encountered. There are defective flues and overheated stoves but it is to be realized that there could have been no such fire if the building had not been of inflammable construction inside. It furnished food for the flames once they got started.

There's many a building which may be considered of too much value to abandon just because it isn't fire proof but in such instances there should be the utmost care taken to see that all possible causes for fires are eliminated. The real danger from fire needs to be anticipated. When it comes to the reconstruction of that orphanage, or the building of a new structure for any such purpose, the added cost for fireproof construction should get secondary consideration to the protection of the lives of those to be housed. The glaring examples of such a need are altogether too numerous.

LOWDEN'S WILLINGNESS

It is many moons since the name of ex-Governor Lowden was connected with the possibility of a presidential nomination at the hands of the republicans. He has been prominently mentioned. His name has been kept before the country. He has said that no man would refuse such a nomination, or words to that effect and a campaign of more or less activity has been waged in his behalf.

Mr. Lowden hasn't come out and announced his candidacy. He has admitted, however, that he is willing to accept it if it comes his way. This is next thing to saying that he is a candidate although he appears to place himself in the hands of his friends and expects them to make the most of the situation in his behalf. Though he is older than Charles E. Hughes he does not consider that any bar to the possibility of his getting or accepting it.

He knows that he has the outspoken support of Vice President Dawes and that he stands as the champion of certain farmer organizations which are striving for agricultural relief, but it is chiefly upon the farm question that an appeal is being made in his behalf thus far.

Having made known his attitude, having declared that he would not throw the nomination over his shoulder if offered to him, he is giving aid and encouragement to those who are laboring to bring about his nomination. Events thus far have not indicated that he occupies a commanding position. Straw votes and political gossip have put others considerably ahead of him. But the fact that he is willing indicates where he stands and those who are candidates or those who are being mentioned but actually making less efforts than he is can the better understand the situation. He is certainly not occupying the position of a dark horse.

CHINA AWAKES

While soviet Russia has been endeavoring to get recognition from this and other countries it has been under careful scrutiny concerning its operations in China. There is a country where soviet influences have been shed most bountifully, where advantage has been taken of the disorganized state of affairs in that country to direct matters and where after a long and painful experience the Chinese are realizing their mistake in ever inviting or tolerating the continuance of such guidance and aid.

Canton has long been in a state of turmoil because of the red influences. Its latest butchery indicates that different conditions may be expected in the future for with the ousting of the communistic leaders there are signs that a better and more responsible element has obtained control. That means much not only to Canton but to the whole country.

Similar evidences come from Nanking where the government has ordered passports given to the Russian consular general. This following the resumption of control in Canton means a determination to clean house so far as the communists are concerned. It shows, as the result of repeated tests it has now been recognized that communist influence has been highly detrimental to China and that the country would be much better without it.

China thus gives evidence that it is profiting from its experiences. It now fears that fire which it was once disposed to play with. The awakening has taken some time but it is apparently sincere. Its latest action offers more hope for improved conditions in China if adhered to, while other countries are not unmindful of the entire lesson.

AN INEVITABLE WOOING

"Oh! so it is you, is it?" began the Hero disappointedly. The Heroine was quick to catch the tone of his voice.

"Yes," she returned with a touch of spirit. "But I am here through no inclination of my own, I assure you!"

"That's just it," the other rejoined with a frown. "These writers take the most unwarrantable liberties. They fail to see that we characters have any rights of our own. Without consulting our preferences in the least, they pick out two of us, bring us together under the most inconceivable circumstances, and then expect, indeed compel, us to fall in love with each other whether we want to or not. For my part, I think something ought to be done about it."

"I quite agree with you," nodded the Heroine.

"They might at least make a few concessions," the young man went on. "Now—in our case—and I don't mind telling you that I am prepared to resist the influence of the writer to the utmost, though," with an air of dejection, "I suppose it's hopeless. I shall have to make love to you sooner or later, for I understand that we have to get it all over within a certain number of words in spite of the fact that neither you nor I want it to happen at all."

"If it will do any good to rebel, I will gladly assist you," remarked the Heroine coolly.

"But that's the maddening part of it all—it won't." Then after a moment's silence, the Hero went on. "It is entirely uncalled for that you should be two years older than I am.

"I never intended to fall for a girl of your type anyway, one with dark eyes and hair. You are too tall, too, and—well, my ideal is a plump little creature with melting blue eyes, and hair of the fluffy kind, bobbed, not long, yours. You are graceful enough, but you have no impulse, no appeal."

"Thank you," returned the Heroine with heightened color, and a sharp glance the other did not see, for his gray eyes were searching the nether side of the horizon.

The girl finally turned with the words:

"Since it seems a time for frankness, I may, perhaps, be permitted to say that you are not in the least like the man I should have chosen had I been consulted in the matter, and you cannot regret the two years' difference in our ages more keenly than I do. I have always held that a woman should never be older than the man she marries."

The Hero's fine eyes turned from the horizon to the girl at his side. Then, moving a little uneasily, he observed in a half apologetic manner:

"Our viewpoint seems identical." The Heroine bowed in acquiescence.

"You carry yourself well in face of the odds against us—I'll admit that."

"And I credit you with the virtue of frankness at least," the Heroine smiled, her dark eyes meeting the gray ones.

The Hero met the smile more than halfway.

"Do you know," he began with unconscious earnestness, "I am inclined to think we might be excellent friends under favorable conditions."

"Perhaps—I don't know—but we might."

"Why not take this occasion to become better acquainted?" The Heroine looked at her watch.

"Oh, I forgot," the Hero observed, with a sigh. "We can't do it now—I suppose it's about time for the love-making to come in." The Heroine put out a protesting hand.

"Not yet, please. That need not come till the very last." The Hero gave her a glance not altogether of disapproval, as he replied:

"I have heard something to the effect that unpleasant duties might as well be done first as last. If we were only free to do as we liked——"

"Then each could go the way his heart prompted, which would lead us far apart, unless I should have been 20 with blue eyes and fluffy hair, and——"

"Oh, let's forget that nonsense. I said that only as a safety valve for my indignation." And for the first time the Hero laughed, a performance which did him credit, bringing a new light into the gray eyes, a softening to the firm lips.

"This whole affair looks different to me," th eHero went on. "I—I wonder what time it is now." The Heroine smiled. "There's still plenty of time," she assured him.

"Well, I don't know as I—I want to wait—a great while—longer. If I hadn't made such a consummate donkey of myself, I could almost hope,"—he drew a step nearer—"that you might overlook my many imperfections to the extent—another step nearer—"the extent of—letting me love you. Is it hoping too much?"

The color of the crimson rose flushed the Heroine's face, and her dark eyes sparkled with a new light. She moved a step—he moved a step and then——!

But, really, what else could be expected? The end of the story had been reached!—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Sounding the Tocsin of the Season

By H. H. Hines, M. D., Cincinnati, Ohio
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

There is a popular delusion concerning drafts, which it is difficult to dispel even from the minds of the very intelligent. It is commonly thought that colds following exposure to drafts are due solely to that cause. They are merely the predisposing cause. Colds are bacterial infections of the respiratory tract. A draft is nothing more than air in motion and is beneficial, not harmful, if properly controlled and provided that the exposed are in good physical condition. The physically unfit who so sedulously avoid air currents within doors could safely ignore the draft bogey if their powers of resistance were developed and increased by hygienic living. Overeating, impure air, lack of proper exercise, insufficient sleep, constipation, an untrained skin due to insufficient or improper bathing, and worry are the prime factors which in various combinations of unphysiological habits render people unfit to withstand the teeming germ-life which finds lodgment along the respiratory tract.

The mistake is nearly always made of placing the blame for physical disability on only one factor, the correction of which is deemed sufficient to withstand disease. Some will give up certain kinds of food thought to be deleterious. Some will take up this, that, and the other health cult devoted to a specific physiological purpose. A well-rounded evenly-balanced regime of hygienic living is what is needed to fortify the system against bronchitis, pneumonia, and tuberculosis as well as diseases of the circulatory and digestive tracts. The ordinary man in ordinary good health does not want to live hygienically. He is satisfied to go along blithely and carelessly, indifferent to the menace of disease which may be just around the corner. Then he is tripped up and awakened to the mocking realization that his assumed good health was an illusive dream.

To quote a biblical apothegm, "They that are whole need no physician," but they who would remain whole should obey the laws of health and right living. The cardinal principles of hygiene are simple, sane, and natural. Conscious effort at first is required, but constant observance will soon lead to the automatic performance of good health habits.

This is the season of the year when pneumonia knocks most insistently at the door of the lungs, when tuberculosis seeks to overthrow the unfit and unwary. He who would successfully combat them will take stock of himself, cease his unwholesome habits, and cultivate the forces of resistance by living the simple life.

CHILD TRAINING

TREATING CHILDREN WITH CONSIDERATION.

Helen Gregg Green

Some children love to be the center of attention while to others such a position is an ordeal.

We were calling at Margaret's. Margaret is Billy-Josephine's mother. In many ways she is a splendid mother for Billy-Josephine, who is a nervous, highly-strung child, very bright but very sensitive. But Margaret at that time had the bad habit of continually desiring Billy-Josephine to "show-off."

Billy-Josephine, I know, in her wee heart likes to be "let alone." She doesn't enjoy the "showing off," and had tried to tell Mother-Margaret so.

"Billy-Josephine is such a modest child," Margaret explained. "She really has a lot of talent, but she always protests when I ask her to be in the little plays the school and church give. Why, if I had not insisted, she would not have recited and sung as she did at the three different entertainments last week."

There were five of us sipping tea in Margaret's big living room on this particular day. I had brought with me three of our old school friends whom Billy-Josephine had never seen.

A few minutes later Margaret called to Billy-Josephine, who left her play to be introduced to Mother's friends.

"Dear, make your little curtsy and sing for the guests," Margaret coaxed starting toward the piano.

The child hung her head, blushing, nervously pulling at her dress.

"Billy-Josephine," the mother urged, her tone more persistent, "do as Mother says."

By this time the request had become a command, and a command given before strangers is not conducive to a happy state of mind.

"But, Mums—dear—" the child hesitated, "I—don't want to."

"Billy-Josephine! Mother doesn't want to have to speak again. If she does," she spoke very severely, "she will have to punish."

Still more humiliation.

Finally, Billy-Josephine burst out crying.

Her mother's face reddened as she hurried the unhappy child to bed.

Why can't we ever learn to treat children with the same consideration we have for adults, I thought. We shouldn't much fancy having someone insist upon our performing for strangers. It would make us self-conscious and awkward. Many self-conscious men and women were made so by foolish but well meaning parents. How could I make Margaret see this? Then the father passed through the hall and I could see that he had overheard and been annoyed. I did hope he would take the matter up with Margaret.

He must have done so, for several months later, when we again called at our neighbor's, Billy-Josephine gave us a sweet, spontaneous little greeting and retired to play undisturbed in the corner.

How much happier she was playing there naturally and undisturbed and being treated like one of us!

OBITUARY.

Noyes B. Allyn

Following an illness of several weeks Noyes B. Allyn died Thursday morning at his home in Gales Ferry. Mr. Allyn was born in the house where he died eighty-nine years ago and was the son of Christopher and Maria Allyn. He attended the village school there and later was a student at what was then known as the Providence Conference seminary in East Greenwich, Rhode Island. From there he went to Dr. Fitch's private school in Windham.

Upon leaving school he entered the employ of Peleg Williams, hardware dealer of New London. Later he was in business in New York, Middletown and Hartford. In Hartford he was a member of the firm of Allyn & Blanchard, conducting a large wholesale grocery business. About twenty-five years ago, acting upon his doctors advice that he must live an out of door life, he retired from business and has since lived at the ancestral homestead. During his last illness he said earnestly one evening that he had ever wished for a world peace of righteousness and good will. These words are a fitting text for his life which was spent in striving to help every good cause. He gave the land for the Gales Ferry Country club house, was active in establishing the public library and was especially devoted to the Gales Ferry church, striving successfully for years to collect a permanent fund for the church that the interest might be always available for its support.

He married Mary C. McKinstry of New London in August 1860. Her death occurred in September 1908.

He is survived by three nephews, Harry C. Allyn and John Lyman Allyn of Mystic, Adam Larrabee of Windham and one niece, Mrs. Lucius Brown of Norwich.

Mrs. John Hermanson.

Mrs. Charlotte C. Hermanson, widow of John Hermanson, died Thursday morning at her home, Fitch Hill, Montville. Mrs. Hermanson was born in Sweden 72 years ago. She was married in Boston to John Hermanson, Dec. 25, 1874, his death occurring three years ago.

Mrs. Hermanson leaves five children, Mrs. Berdena Bassett, of South Manchester; Mrs. Edwin Johnson, of this city; Edwin Hermanson, of Waterford; Carl Hermanson, of Hollywood, Calif., and Frederick Hermanson, who resided at home. There are seven grandchildren.

Mrs. James McCracken

The death of Mrs. Bridget Hewitt McCracken of Ledyard occurred Dec. 13 at the Backus hospital, where she has been a patient for the past nine months. Mrs. McCracken was in her 95th year and was born in that part of the town of Groton, which is now Ledyard, June 26, 1833, the daughter of the late Isaac and Caroline Allyn Hewitt. She married James McCracken of Ledyard, who died Feb. 1, 1912. She was a member of the Ledyard Congregational church and a charter member of Harriet Newell Missionary society and took an active part in the work of both organizations as long as she was able. She had a bright and cheerful disposition and took the keenest interest in the affairs of the people of Ledyard to within a few days of her death. Nearly her entire life was spent in Ledyard. In the death of Mrs. McCracken Ledyard loses one of its oldest residents. She is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Joseph P. Holloway of Norwich and Mrs. Edgar Tourjee of Meriden and three nephews, Rowland Hewitt of Stonington, James L. Hewitt and Charles S. Hewitt of Norwich.

PASTER FOUND GUILTY; $200 FINE AND 15 DAYS IN JAIL SENTENCE

Morris Paster of Hallville was found guilty by a jury in the criminal common pleas court at New London Thursday afternoon on the charge of selling spirituous and intoxicating liquors and when Prosecuting Attorney C. B. Whittlesey moved for sentence at once, Judge C. B. Waller imposed a fine of $200 and 15 days in jail after Attorney Thomas M. Shields had made a plea for leniency for Paster. The jury was out about 25 minutes.

Paster was arrested on July 13, 1927, when a raiding party of deputy sheriffs and constables accompanied by Wallace Braman of Lebanon and Ernest Chamberlain of North Franklin, swooped down upon the Paster farm in Hallville in the town of Preston.

According to testimony introduced in court Wednesday afternoon, two attempts were made to purchase liquor, the second, the state claims, being successful. The stage was set with Deputy Sheriff George H. Hoxie, 2nd, of Lebanon, Constables Lucius A. Fenton of Norwich Town, Charles W. Hill of Preston and Spencer, together with Braman and Chamberlain.

Both sides agreed as to the strength of the liquor, Attorney Shields provoking a laugh from the jury and spectators when he informed Judge Waller that he had tasted of it and was sure it was more than one-half of one per cent.

Paster's alibi is that Braman nursed a grudge against him for the outcome of a real-estate deal years previous and that at the time, Braman swore that he would "get him." Paster sets up that no liquor was sold on July 13, as alleged by the state, and that Braman and Chamberlain came to the house, saying they were ill and wanted some cider. Paster testified that he informed them that he had none and they went away.

Attorney Shields sprung a surprise when he asked Braman if he did not at one time since the arrest say to Paster: "You give me enough money and I'll leave the state." Braman admitted that he said this and that he "meant it" because he was "disgusted with court business."

Pinned down by Attorney Shields to a definition of the word "disgusted," Braman could not answer. Then Attorney Shields asked him if, as a matter of fact, he was disgusted only because he (Braman) had visited the Paster farm previous to July 13 and hid the pint of liquor, seizing it after Paster refused to sell liquor the night in question. This Braman denied.

It was brought out that Braman received $25 for every conviction won in Preston and that Justice of the Peace William B. Mitchell of Preston, who sat on Paster's case, paid the money.

Witnesses Wednesday afternoon were Deputy Sheriff Hoxie, Constables Fenton and Hill, Justice of the Peace Mitchell, Chamberlain and Braman for the state and Paster for the defense.

The jury which heard the case comprises the following:

New London—Edward J. Murray, Albert C. Boardman, Fred E. Dennison, William R. Beach.

Groton—Louis B. Gardner, Benjamin F. Allen.

Stonington—Samuel E. Stewart.

Ledyard—James N. Holdredge.

Montville—Raymond Palmer, Edward O'Brien, Milton Mitchell.

Waterford—Reuben Austin.

Paster received a fine of $200 and costs before Justice of the Peace William B. Preston in the town court of Preston, charged with selling a pint of intoxicating liquor for $2. Paster, represented by Attorney Shields, appealed the judgment. He pleaded not guilty last week in the present court and elected to be tried by a jury.

The defence was dealt an unexpected blow Thursday morning when Chauncey E. Williams, of Hallville after testifying on direct examination that Braman and Chamberlain obtained no liquor at Paster's house Sunday night July 10, but brought a bottle with them, admitted under fire by Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey, that Mrs. Paster sold some drinks.

Williams said he kept his "pit birds" on the Paster farm. Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey asked the witness if "pit birds" were birds adapted to fighting. Williams said they were but replied "no" to another question as to whether or not he was a "chicken fighter."

Witnesses Thursday morning called by the defense were: William W. Pendleton of Norwich; Williams, Mrs. Paster, Merton Hill of Preston, Isadore Tureski of Norwich, Esther and Celia Paster, aged 15 and 13 respectively.

Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey called in rebuttal Constables Hill and Fenton and Deputy Sheriff Hoxie.

Attorney Shields called to the stand Mr. and Mrs. Paster.

Arguments were made by Mr. Whittlesey and Attorney Shields, after which Judge Waller delivered his charge to the jury.

THE LATE MISS C. E. HOPKINS WORKED FOR TEACHERS' FUND

Because the late Miss Carrie E. Hopkins of Winchester Place, Norwich was one of the pioneer promoters of the state teachers' retirement fund there is interest in great increase in that fund the past year. Miss Hopkins did not live to benefit by the system which she so ardently and so successfully advocated.

Assets of the state teachers retirement system jumped more than three-quarters of a million dollars in the eleven months of 1927 that have elapsed. The organization that contains a majority of the public school teachers of Connecticut made new history for itself by adding $798,136 from January 1 to November 30. As a result of this gain the total assets of the retirement system are $4,480,428.

Statistics supplied by Miss Dorothy M. Shanley, of Hartford, secretary of the retirement board, show that the gain in assets was acquired thus; prorated part of salary paid by teachers, $527,290; state appropriation $224,320; annuity reserve $22,000; interest $24,526.

Investments during the current year, handled by the state investment board, earned 4 1-2 per cent., a rate that prevailed also in the preceding year. For several years previous to 1926 the interest rate had been not above four per cent.

Changes in the principles of retiring teachers on pensions are to be discussed at Boston next February, according to announcement this week.

BALTIC RECEIVES NEW MOTOR FIRE APPARATUS

A new piece of motor fire apparatus for Baltic which was driven here Wednesday from Providence was quartered over night at the central fire station and taken to Baltic for delivery Thursday morning. With its siren shrieking and hitting a fast pace, it created the impression in the upper part of Greeneville that the Norwich department was responding to a fire call in Taftville.

The Baltic machine is a Reo combination 350 gallon pumper with booster water tank. It has three lengths of suction and selected equipment to make it fully adequate for the service for which it is needed in Baltic. It was built by the Combination Ladder company of Providence.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPT. PLANS FOR 1928 WORK

Fourteen separate contracts for paving 31.1 miles, or 164,075 linear feet of Connecticut highway to be completed next summer were opened for bid at the office of the state highway commissioner at Hartford, according to advertisements published Thursday by Commissioner John A. Macdonald. Bids will close on Dec. 22 at 2 p. m. The greater part of the new pavement is to be of reinforced concrete. About 19 1-2 miles of that material is to be laid, as compared with approximately six miles of bituminous macadam and six miles of waterbound macadam.

In view of the exceptionally mild weather of the present season the state highway department is making arrangements for contracts for next summer's work at an especially early date, so that contractors may be able to complete much of their work for the state by the time the annual summer rush of traffic begins. Such a plan operates to the mutual advantage of the state and automobilists, avoiding the annoyance of detours when traffic reaches its peak, and aids contractors as well, enabling them to finish an important portion of their work before the beginning of their busy season, although contract instructions state that only such work as may be done without hindering traffic may be undertaken this winter.

An important improvement to interstate travel by automobile is included for bid in the 5,258 feet of reinforced concrete along the "Armory Hill" section of the Boston Post road in the city of Norwalk and in the contract for 1,108 feet of concrete on the "Compo Hill" section of the same state highway in the town of Westport. Those additions make another step toward the completion of the contemplated four-lane automobile pike between New Haven and the New York state line. The Boston Post road is one of the most traveled highways in the United States, and changes and improvements along that highway are of widespread influence and importance.

About 8,600 feet of reinforced concrete will be laid on the Waterbury-Milldale highway, over Southington mountain, in the towns of Southington and Wolcott, an improvement to the much-used route between Hartford and Waterbury. The longest single length of pavement will be laid in the town of Brookfield. On route No. 128 through that town on the Danbury-New Milford road, 27,376 linear feet of reinforced concrete pavement will be laid.

In this part of the state the contracts are as follows:

Towns of Norwich and Preston—About 3,766 linear feet of bituminous macadam pavement on the Norwich-Groton road. Note: The state will furnish asphalt and reinforced concrete pipe. Plans and specifications at the office of John Smith, division engineer, Norwich, Conn.

Towns of Brooklyn and Killingly—About 21,460 linear feet of bituminous macadam pavement on the Brooklyn-Danielson road. Note: The state will furnish reinforced concrete pipe and bituminous material. Plans and specifications at the office of John Smith, division engineer, Norwich, Conn.

Towns of East Hampton and Portland—About 21,257 linear feet of reinforced concrete pavement on the Portland-Cobalt road. Note: The state will furnish cement and reinforced concrete pipe. Plans and specifications at the office of D. H. B. Starr, division engineer, Poliner building, Middletown, Conn.

BINGHAM TO PRESENT STATES 1812 WAR CLAIMS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—Preliminary steps are being taken by Senator Bingham to enrich the state treasury of Connecticut by the introduction of a resolution calling on the comptroller of the treasury of the United States to investigate and re-examine the account between the United States and the state of Connecticut, with respect to advances and expenditures made by the state for military purposes during the war of 1812 with Great Britain.

The comptroller is then directed to apply thereto the rules brought into play in the settlement of a similar account between the United States and the state of Maryland under acts passed in 1826 and 1857, and to submit to the senate a report containing a restatement of the Connecticut account, with interest computed according to such rules.

The gist of the claim is that although Connecticut was opposed to the war, the state furnished troops, supplies and money at the request of the federal government, and that the British forces, naval and military ravished the Connecticut shores at New London, Stonington, Norwalk and other river and shore towns. A portion of these claims has been paid, but there is still an amount due Connecticut although Maryland and other states having similar claims have been paid.

Senator Bingham hopes to have the claims honored and his resolution passed by congress.

SIX MONTHS MORE WORK ON POQUETANUCK BRIDGE

With but two more pier foundations to be completed, work on the new Poquetanuck bridge, on the military highway, between Groton and Norwich, is progressing favorably, with expectations that the foundation work will be entirely completed in a few weeks and work started on the upper structure, which is expected to be finished by July.

The two main abutments on either side of the Poquetanuck cove have been completed, and four of the six pier foundations are finished. The piles are now being driven for the other two piers.

The upper structure of the bridge, which is located a few feet north of the present wooden drawbridge, will be of steel, and cased brick. Following hearings in which it was determined that there would be no opposition to building the bridge without a draw, the new bridge will be of solid construction.

The Merritt-Chapman & Scott Corp has the contract for the work, which is being done under the supervision of Engineer Denny.

PASTIME A. C. HAS ATTRACTIVE CARD FOR AMATEURS SHOW THIS EVENING

The Pastime A. C. continue with their semi-monthly amateur boxing carnivals tonight at Olympic hall with what on paper looks like their best effort to date. Seemingly unhampered by the refusal of the A. A. U. to sanction this weeks show the local promotors, after scouring the surrounding country claim to have a majority of the old favorites with two teams of newcomers.

Entirely new territory will send representatives down for this show. Teams of four or five men each are slated to come from Willimantic and Lebanon. Artie Kumpf, local boxer and wrestler of a decade ago, is bringing the Thread City delegation back to the scene of his former triumphs. His boys have been working out for some time with but the one idea in mind—to make good at this show—and opponents will have to extend themselves very, very much if they are to send them back disappointed. For some of this delegation it is their first start but that means little once the urge of battle strikes home. The Lebanon outfit comes from the camp of George Schiller, where they have been put through their paces for quite some time now. Tonight's bouts are sort of a semi-final for these boys for they will appear in New York rings in the immediate future.

Other teams are coming from Westerly and New London while Norwich, the fifth community to be represented, will also have plenty of strong standard bearers.

The New London boys listed are Young Burrows, Young Whitey and Young Ayson, together with three others while among those to appear from this city are Young Talbert, Kid Swift, Young Litro, Walt Jackson and Al Carpenter. Carpenter is a heavyweight and as at least a few moves of the big boys are listed there seems plenty of action in this class, something that has not been the case since these bouts were started here. One heavyweight bout sure to attract attention is that between the fighting motorman from Norwich and another heavy from New London, carrying with it all the old time rivalry between these two cities.

Five clashes will be lined with bouts and if at all possible no two boys from even the same city will be matched.

The show will start at 8:15 and doors will open an hour earlier. The Moose orchestra will furnish music for the intervening hour.

Jack Sweeney and Mike Kelley have been selected as the judges and Jack Carney will be timekeeper. Danny Doyle will referee.

As usual ladies will be admitted free.

Preparations have been made for the banner crowd of the year as everything points that way.

MEHRE TO BE HEAD COACH AT GEORGIA

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Harry Mehre, former Notre Dame football star, today was elected head coach at the University of Georgia to succeed George C. Woodruff, who resigned at the opening of the 1927 gridiron season effective at the end of the campaign.

The election of Mehre came as no surprise to university followers as his work as an assistant to Coach Woodruff for the past four years has been outstanding. At Notre Dame he was a star center and he has been one of the principal factors, along with Crowley, old Rockne star, in introducing the Notre Dame style here.

Coach Woodruff in announcing his resignation early last fall said he was taking that step because of the pressure of business interests at Columbus, Ga., his home.

Mehre was named at an afternoon session of the university athletic board which elected Coach Woodruff alumni manager of athletics.

Jimmy Crowley was reelected assistant football coach and Ivey M. (Chick) Shiver, star end of the 1927 team was named end coach.

Gene Smith, guard of the 1927 squad was elected freshman football coach.

The athletic board also went on record as approving tentative plans for the erection of a new stadium at the University of Georgia, to seat 35,000 persons. Hope was expressed that it would be completed in time for the 1928 gridiron season.

YALE HOCKEY SQUAD IS CUT TO 19 PLAYERS

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Announcement of a game with Boston college at the local arena on December 31 and cutting of the squad to 19 men by Coach Clarence Wanamaker were the last Yale Hockey developments on the eve of the Christmas holidays.

Queens college was originally scheduled for the final December date, but the Canadians abandoned the proposed trip to the states and Boston college, with an open date, was glad to accept the Eli invitation to play. The Yale-Boston college game will prove an even better New Year's eve attraction than Queens, it is thought, as the Hub team is one of the strongest outfits in the east. The Blue sextet is one of the best in recent years and an exceptionally fast game is predicted.

On Tuesday, January 3, the day college re-opens Yale will play Toronto university here.

After today's cut the personnel of the Yale squad was as follows: Captain Vaughan, Bent, Brady, Cady, Chappell, Curtis, Fletcher, Hickok, Hurd, Knight, Moorhead, Palmer, Roley, Ryan, Sizer, Thomas, Walker, West and Wilson.

HAGEN AND GANZEL GIVEN MORE TIME TO RAISE FUNDS

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Walter Hagen, National professional golf champion, and John Ganzel, veteran first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, today were granted an additional week in which to raise enough funds to complete their purchase of the Rochester International league club.

Meeting in special session, the league granted the request of Hagen and Ganzel for more time to raise the $40,000 which remains to be paid for the franchise. Part payment of $10,000 has been made already. The league authorized President John Conway Toole to confer with the two new prospective owners in Rochester a week from today, when final payment on the franchise will be due.

Montreal, which replaces Jersey City, was formally welcomed into the league. President Toole said that a schedule committee would be named next week and would begin its work immediately.

DONOHUE DENIES ISSUING ULTIMATUM TO MANDELL

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 15.—(AP)—A denial of the reports published in metropolitan New York newspapers that he had given Sammy Mandell, the holder of the lightweight crown, 30 days in which to defend his title, was made tonight by Thomas E. Donohue, president of the National Boxing association.

President Donohue declared that although he would be pleased to have Mandell defend his title against some outstanding opponent, Mandell could not be forced to "put up his title until the second week in January."

At present Donohue is devoting his efforts towards closing up the flyweight title mess. With his wife and Marty J. Boyle, an N. B. A. official, President Donohue will attend the Ernie Jarvis and Frankie Belanger flyweight title scrap in Toronto, Monday night as the guest of the Canadian athletic commission.

It is the plan of the N. B. A. president to match the winner of Jarvis-Belanger fight with Pancho Genaro, of New York city, and the winner of that fight with the recognized flyweight champion of the New York athletic commission for the undisputed world's championship.

TWO TITLE BOUTS AT GARDEN THIS EVENING

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—One of Tex Rickard's genuine championship tussles and another granted that status by the New York state athletic commission will combine to set a new record Friday night at Madison Square Garden. The big arena never before has housed two fifteen round title fights on the same night.

Tod Morgan, busy little junior lightweight champion from Seattle, Wash., will defend his crown for the second time against Joe Glick, punch-proof buttonhole maker of Brooklyn, in the main engagement. Morgan battered the local entry into decisive defeat in their first title tray last winter. Glick won the right to another meeting by defeating Jack Bernstein, of Yonkers.

The flyweight title vacated by Fidel Labarba, California youngster, who gave up the ring to attend Leland Stanford university, will rest with the winner of the 15 round semi-final between Corporal Izzy Schwartz, of New York and Newsboy Brown, of Sioux City, Ia., as far as the New York boxing authorities are concerned. Rickard intends to clarify the situation further by matching the New York champion with the winner of the Ernie Jarvis-"French" Belanger fight for National Boxing association recognition as the champion in Toronto next Monday night.

Lawson Resigns at Williams.

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Douglas Lawson, head coach of football at Williams college for the past three years, today withdrew his name from consideration for re-appointment in the best interests of Williams.

"Knowing that a part of the alumni and undergraduate body desired a change in the football regime, I believe that should I have been re-appointed, the decision would not have been a popular one," said Lawson in a statement issued from his Boston business office today. "My withdrawal at this time, I hope, will be helpful to the athletic council."

Murchison Is Better.

DECATUR, Ill., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Loren Murchison, Olympic track star, suffering with an attack of cerebral spinal meningitis, has had his best 48 hours, ending today, since he was rushed to a hospital one week ago Wednesday, according to his physician.

Murchison's temperature and pulse are lower and his general condition improved. Serum is being injected daily and for the first time his physician feels that the track star has an even chance of recovery.

Canadian Amateurs Lose.

HARTFORD, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Connecticut's amateur boxing team defeated a team from Montreal, Canada, tonight at Foot Guard hall. The Yankee mittsters won three of the four international battles. In these Billy Taylor, of Hartford, outpointed Roche Di Stefano; Jack Kelly, of Waterbury, won a slugging match from Rene Ratelle, and Vic Morley outpounded Tommy Sullivan. The only Canadian victory was scored by Stanley Hoslein, who outslugged Harry Bosche, of Hartford.

SEVERAL BIG PLAYER DEALS AT M. L. MEETING

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Player dealing in the baseball market today was featured by the sale of another star of the St. Louis Browns, Outfielder Ken Williams, to the Boston Red Sox. The disposal of the slugging outfielder, for a reported price of $10,000, marked the third deal engineered by the Browns in as many days.

Williams, with the Browns for 11 years and noted as a home run hitter followed the departing footsteps of George Sisler, sold to the Senators the day before; Harry Rice and Elam Van Gilder, traded to the Tigers for Harry Manush and Lu Blue.

The Browns came close to putting through a fourth deal by which Outfielder Bing Miller would have gone to the Athletics. It hung fire, however, when St. Louis declined to accept "Bevo" LeBourveau, another outfielder, in exchange, while the Athletics rejected a counter proposal to give Pitcher Sam Gray for Miller.

Another seasoned campaigner, Hugh McQuillan, a major league twirler for ten years, was released under optional agreement by the Boston Braves to the Newark Internationals. McQuillan brought $140,000 when obtained by the Giants from the Braves in 1922 but he was returned to Boston last year.

The Braves also sold Frank Gibson, catcher, to where Walter Johnson is manager of the club, he joins such other ex-big leaguers as Bill Lamar and Jacques Fournier.

The Braves also sold Frank Gibson, catcher, to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bob Shawkey, former Yankee pitcher, appeared likely to accept an offer to go with the Montreal Internationals. He turned down a proposal from Portland, Ore.

The Red Sox sold Outfielder Cleo Carlyle to the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast league.

ALL-EAST ELEVEN READY FOR TRIP TO COAST

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—(AP)—A squad of 21 eastern and middle western football stars assembled here tonight to take off to the Pacific coast where they meet an All-Western team Christmas day, using the westerners' own strategy.

Andy Kerr, coach of Washington and Jefferson, and Dick Hanley, coach of Northwestern, had blackboards installed in the football special so they could teach the eastern gridiron representatives the fundamentals of the "Pop" Warner system on the way west.

The easterners have one of the greatest collections of ball carriers ever assembled. Myles Lane, of Dartmouth, the eastern's high scorer and Shorty Almquist the big ten high scorer lead the aggregation of backs. Bruce Caldwell who was kept from representing Yale in the Harvard combat through a tough break in eligibility rules Herb Joesting Minnesota's All-American battering ram Glenn Presnell, of Nebraska, the Missouri valley's best halfback, Elmer Wynne, Notre Dame's fullback, George Connors, of New York university, and Bill Amos, of W. and J., complete the double set of backs.

Thirteen linesmen have been picked to play in front of this great array of talent, seven from the east and six from the west. Yale's great pair of ends, Scott and Pishwick, are backed up by "Chili" Walsh, of Notre Dame, on the flanks. Five tackles are in the eastern squad, Adkinson, of Lafayette; Weinstock, of Western Maryland; ouds, of W. and J.; Hanson, of Minnesota, and Ransdell, of Nebraska.

Reitsch, of Illinois, and Hawley, of the Haskell Indians will alternate at center, Pawley, W. and J., and Baer, Michigan, are the guards.

The trainload of eastern athletes is scheduled to arrive in San Francisco Sunday, in time for a full week of practice, under coast weather conditions.

Beavers Beat Indians.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 5.—(AP)—A capacity crowd of 5,744 paid admissions saw the Quebec Beavers whip the Springfield Indians here tonight in a Canadian-American hockey game tonight by a to 0 score.

The lone goal of the contest was registered in the opening minutes of the first period when Speed Sorrell, the Quebec left wing, made good on a 25-foot shot from the left lane. It was the first victory of the season for the Quebecs.

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Arthur Dorfman, of Mattapan, who has played center on the Boston university football team for the past two seasons, today was elected captain of the 1928 eleven.

MAJOR LEAGUES TO STAND PAT ON THE EXISTING DRAFT CODE

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—If the minor leagues of the country desire to cut off relations completely with the majors and indulge in a free-for-all scrap or player scramble, they are perfectly free to do so, the American and National league club owners decided late today in a prolonged joint meeting.

Responding to the initiative taken by the minors, who are dissatisfied with the draft system, the majors announced that the major-minor league agreement may terminate on January 14, 1928, when the seven-year-period of its operation expires if the minors desire its cancellation.

Despite this warlike gesture, it appears likely to be a bloodless affair, for the majors, at the same time agreed to a truce until February 1, when the minors will signify whether or not they desire to break off relations, negotiate a new agreement or continue under the present system. Meanwhile, on a status quo basis, business will be "as usual" and relations between the upper and lower strata of the game conducted under the terms of the existing compact.

The action of the majors was disclosed after a six-hour joint session, presided over by Commissioner Landis and bringing the three-day baseball parley here to an official close. It was the climax of a protracted series of conferences and paves the way for a final show-down before the winter is over in the relations between the two principal baseball groups.

The tex of the major league resolution adopted is as follows:

"Resolved that the major leagues in reply to the inquiry of the National association (of minor leagues) informed the National association that the major leagues are willing to have the major-minor agreement terminate on January 14, 1928 if the National association so desires."

By this piece of strategy, the majors unexpectedly conceded the point over which the minors had anticipated considerable argument—the life of the major-minor league agreement. The minor league committee, composed of John H. Farrell, Herman J. Weisman and William G. Bramham, came to the meeting with conflicting possibilities. One concerned a clause making the agreement effective as long as Commissioner Landis was in office. Another interpretation was that it ended with the conclusion of his first seven-year term.

Waving these technicalities aside the majors in effect put responsibility for a break up to the minors, taking the attitude that if the minors "want a scrap they can have it."

After it was all over, however, neither group displayed any particular desire for an open conflict. The prediction was freely made that the two factions would get together before Feb. 1 and avoid a split.

Although spending most of their session on this issue, the major league club owners found time to adopt 18 amendments of varying importance to their own rules and put into effect regulations designed to stop betting on the games by players and check the offering of gifts to players for putting forth their best efforts against a rival club.

These player rules agreed upon last January at a meeting of magnates in French Lick, Ind., are the upshot of disclosures in the Cobb-Speaker investigation. They provide penalties as follows:

(1)—Ineligibility for three years for accepting or offering any present or reward to the players or the management of another team for services rendered or supposed to be rendered in defeating a competitor.

(2)—Ineligibility for one year for betting on a game in connection with which the bettor has no duty to perform.

(3)—Permanent ineligibility for betting on a game in which the bettor has a duty to perform.

The "cut" of the advisory council, or commissioner's share in the world's series receipts was reduced from 15 to 10 per cent. This will provide a bigger "split" for the players, contending clubs and leagues.

The joint meeting also appropriated $5,000 for the fund administered by the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America for the relief of ill or disabled players or former players. The headquarters of this association are in Los Angeles.

The amendments to the major league rules embraced provisions preventing any player or manager from having an interest in any club other than the one with which he is engaged. This was prompted by the situation that developed last spring when Rogers Hornsby, a big stockholder in the St. Louis club, was traded to the New York Giants.

Another amendment provides that no employe, umpire, president, secretary or treasurer of a major league shall, directly or indirectly, have an interest in any major league club.

DANIELSON TOWNERS LOSE TO NORTON A. C.

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 15.—The Danielson Town team was unable to break its jinx on the local floor tonight and was defeated by the Norton A. C. of Worcester, Mass., composed of three Purple Collegians players, Bernot, Kasper and Brusso, by the score of 31 to 22 in a very well-played and hard fought game. From the very first sound of the whistle the game was full of excitement and it could easily be seen that both teams were out to win. The game was underway only a short time when Danielson scored only to be followed by Worcester making a basket and then the teams played back and forth with the half ending 13 to 11 in Danielson's favor.

Whitey Bernot started the second half in the pivot position and although he contributed to the winning of the game by Worcester he was held scoreless by Armington who played a great scoreless game. Danielson was without the services of Billy Schofield, who was under the weather, but his teammates deserve a great deal of credit for the wonderful exhibition of basketball they gave. Both teams played a great game but individual honors went to Godreau of the local team who scored 10 points while Kasper was high scorer for Worcester with 12 points. This was another of the very fine games of basketball that is being played in the Town hall this year although the local boys have met three defeats they are being considered one of the fastest teams in New England.

The Taftville Crescents play here next Thursday night so the fans know what to expect as Taftville promises to bring a great team to Danielson.

ACADEMY BRIEFS

Basketball workouts are now going along at full speed. Coach Whitney is now beginning to get a line on his material.

The first cut will probably come within the very near future.

The double-manager system is now very much in vogue at the Academy. Mace Goldblatt and Tom McVeigh are handling the basketball team's affairs while Lawrence Gilman and Pete Reilly have been chosen to book the games for the state championship baseball team. Goldblatt and Gilman held these positions last year.

At least, candidates for the Academy basketball teams can play independently until Jan. 7 as no scholastic tilt has been arranged till then. Thus, they will have the holidays to scintillate for their present clubs.

Very few of the basketball candidates are now what might be called in poor "condition." Dave Tigar, Swatsburg, Lynch, Stevens, Hamil and others have been playing with the Emps. Les Pingree and Fagan with the Y while Kelly and LaCroix have just finished football.

It is to be hoped that school spirit will be more in evidence during the coming basketball season than it was in football. The kind of teams that are being turned out at the Academy deserve better support.

The basketball schedule is expected to be released within a day or so.

Court practice is expected to be continued right through the holidays, as was the case last year.

The influx of ex-Academy students to their homes for the vacation can be expected to start within the next few days.

The Red and White, school newspaper, now in its second year, is finding a large circulation among the student body.

The Big Six in football now promises to be limited to only four in basketball as Westerly and Bulkeley do not compete. The present members are Windham, Stonington, Chapman Tech and Academy. Of these the two former have girls' teams.

SPORTING NOTES

The racing posture of all the best speed skaters is practically the same. The back is kept straight and horizontal, the arms folded across the back except when spurting, then they are swung from side to side, keeping time to the stroke.

Changes already announced in major league training camps for next Spring are: Boston Red Sox, from New Orleans to Bradentown, Fla.; St. Louis Browns, from Tarpon Springs, Fla., to West Palm Beach, and New York Giants, from Sarasota, Fla., to Augusta, Ga.

The style in figure skating may be analyzed with four kinds of strokes, all made on the edges of the blade—the inside forward, the outside forward, the inside backward and the outside backward. The variety of evolutions which can be developed from these movements is endless.

Each Norwegian village has a ski club, which encourages the sport in every possible way, holding competitions and giving prizes to the old and young of both sexes, while once a year the best representative of the important clubs is sent to compete in the great national contest.

In America figure skating was an institution in Colonial days.

Colonel Bilgeri, who was for a long time in charge of the ski training of the Austrian army, has devised a training system of his own and has a school at Kitzbuhel, where the pupils are coached along the lines laid down in his manual. Kitzbuhel lies at an altitude of between 2,000 and 3,000 feet in the Austrian Tyrol.

Alma college was one of the few repeaters in football this year. For the second year in succession its team brought home the Michigan intercollegiate A. A. championship.

The last important tennis tournament of 1927 will be the national competitions for the junior and boys' indoor championships, to be held in New York city during Christmas week.

Lightweight champions were not classified in pugilism to any extent until the early '80s, when Jack McAuliffe, Harry Gilmore and others began to figure as 128 to 133 pounders.

International tennis may be said to date from 1896, in which year William A. Larned visited England and made a proposal for a tournament in which the best players of England and America might compete.

In 1896 base ball was far from being the "big business" that it is today. When John T. Rush in that year spent $11,000 in the purchase of new players for the Cincinnati team he was accused of trying to buy the National league championship.

For the Olympic winter games beginning at St. Moritz, Switzerland, the second week of February, a new jump has been built at great expense, and its construction has given occasion for some furious thinking on the part of the ski experts. Several alterations deemed advisable have been made since the jump was tried out last year.

The Sports Train is an institution at the well-equipped winter resorts of Switzerland and serves the purpose of taking ski-runners and tobogan enthusiasts to higher ground from which to make a further ascent or to descend to the starting point, as the wider choice of ground for his exploits.

Many famous horse owners, trainers and jockeys congregate at this time of year at the Swiss resorts which include horse racing in their winter sports program. The horses are brought from many countries and are acclimatized before the meetings in the mountains. Some of the leading French jockeys accept mounts and take as much pleasure in bringing home a winner on the snow and ice tracks as at the meetings at home.

Now is the time to use Texaco Motor Oil, if you never did before. Because now, every time you start your car on a cold day you might almost as well have no oil at all in your engine as to let it start itself metal against metal. Which is just what happens with any oil that is too sluggish to be right there on the job as soon as your foot is on the pedal.

WESTERLY

HAMMER, CHISEL AND SAW MENTIONED IN DOCTORS' SUIT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 15.—At exactly 5 p. m. Thursday the evidence was all in in the suit for nearly $1,000 for alleged services as first assistant in some 5 major operations performed at the Westerly hospital, Dr. Michael H. Scanlon vs. Dr. J. Gordon Anderson. The trial was begun before Judge Charles A. Walsh Monday afternoon in the Washington County superior court. At Thursday morning's session all jurors were excused for this Westerly sitting of the court and were paid off at noon time by Clerk Caswell. Court will come in for the last time Friday at 11 a. m., the last day of the court in the November term.

The last witness, the defendant, Dr. Anderson, denied as testified by Dr. Scanlon that, in an operation performed of Grace Douglas, at which Town Councilman Joseph Fraser and Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church, were present as observers, and who testified earlier in the afternoon that r. Scanlon was present, also, that a hammer and chisel were used in the operation to relieve a stoppage in the flow in the spinal column. Dr. Anderson testified that the hammer, chisel and saw were left for operations on the skull, the operation having been performed on the back.

Attorney Dunn, for the plaintiff, and Moulton, for the defendant, agreed to waive arguments. They agreed to file briefs with the court in two weeks. Judge Walsh said if the briefs were filed with him before Dec. 23rd, he would go over them during the Christmas recess from Dec. 23 to 27th and render an early decision. If briefs were filed later, a decision could not be looked for until the middle of March.

When court was resumed Thursday morning, the defendant, Dr. Anderson, was under cross-examination by Attorney Dunn. Another witness to testify was Miss Ethel M. Doherty, superintendent of the Westery hospital. The morning session closed with Dr. Anderson still on the stand. Giving testimony in the afternoon were Gaetano Nacarratto, father of Rose Nacarratto, of Central Park, a major operation patient; George E. Johnson, 36 Chappell street, New London, operated on for a cancer of the lip; Mrs. Mary Azzinnaro, of Tower street, a patient who testified through an Italian interpreter, Susie Servidio; Joseph Fraser, 45 Summr street, who by invitation observed the operation of Grace Douglas; Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, residing in Mystic, also present at the operation; Pasquale Frank Cofone and his brother, Albert Cafone, aged 8 years, excused; Dr. Anderson, again; Dr. John Edwin Ruisi, Dr. Russell, Richard O'B. Shea, Dr. Harry Franklin Crandall, who testified as members of the Westerly hospital staff that assistants were necessary for surgeons, and r. Michael H. Scanlon, who produced his cancelled checks to show he had paid Dr. Anderson more than the latter had shown.

DANIELSON

BIDS FOR NEW ROAD IN BROOKLYN OPENED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 15.—About the best news that filtered out of the activities and reports in this territory this day was that the state of Connecticut opened bids in Hartford today for the reconstruction of four miles of state highway between Danielson and Brooklyn on the Hartford-Providence trunk line.

The work to be done is wholly within the town of Brooklyn. It is work that needs doing to replace one of the eldest stretches of macadam road in this corner of the state. The old road has stood an enormous amount of wear and tear in the quarter of century or thereabouts since it was first built, and has been repaired time and again. It is rough and ripply now, and little wonder. The new road is to be of bituminous macadam. No information was available here this evening as to who was given the contract today, but there is the possibility, it is said, that some work may be done on the road during the winter. State engineers made surveys of the route last summer, and, it is understood, there will be some changes, if minor ones, from the route as it now is—a very good route most of the distance, with few curves.

H. E. HOPKINS RE-ELCETED AS L'HOMME POST COMMANDER

DANIELSON, Dec. 15.—Last evening members of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, held their annual meeting and elected officers for the ensuing year. Herbert E. Hopkins was re-elected post commander and William Harrington adjutant. The other officers are: first vice commander, Arthur Barnard; second vice commander, Arthur C. Messier, Wauregan; finance officer, Alfred L. Reed; chaplain, Walter H. Evans; members of executive committee, Nathan Blumenthal, Ira A. Warren, Gordon J. Gale; sergeant-at-arms, Niccandro Masparella; post service officers, Joseph Burton.

During the meeting the members considered a proposal presented by De Forest Wells, representing the Sons of Veterans, that members of patriotic societies of Danielson combine to plan for a building which they could jointly occupy. The legion will be represented on a committee to consider the details of the proposal.

An appropriation of $10 for Vermont flood relief was voted by the post.

"Celest Burrell" is the name that appears on a replica of that famous old square-rigger which Henry Tewgood, of the West Side, has fashioned with his own hands as a gift to Alfred L. Reed, and which is now on display in a window of the Church company. The Celest Burrell sailed out of Yarmouth, N. S., when Mr. Tewgood was a sailorman in his youthful days, and it was aboard her that he had some of the most thrilling experiences that came to him in years of roving the seven seas and took him into the ports of many lands.

Correct in every detail of hull, masts, yards and rigging—and in every other way—the replica is as clever bit of work of the kind as one may see. It is a tribute to the skill of Mr. Tewgood, an evidence that he knows the ways of the sea and of ships.

Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill said this evening that there would be more cases for the town court Friday morning—another batch of personal tax cases—so-called, dealing with those who failed to pay such taxes prior to 1927.

Mrs. Lillian M. Michie was elected worthy matron of Danielson chapter, No. 77, Order of the Eastern Star, at the annual meeting of the organization last evening. Other elective officers selected for 1928 ewre: worthy patron, Kenneth C. Michie; associate matron, Mrs. Beatrice B. Beckett; secretary, Sidney W. Bard; treasurer, Miss Miriam A. Boomhower; conductress, Dorothy N. Wild; associate conductress, Winifred Carver.

Reports of the secretary and treasurer showed the chapter to have had a very prosperous year. Mrs. Michie is to name the appointive officers prior to the installation on a date in early January.

The family of Frank Rogers was homeless at Dayville today as the result of a fire that gutted their home yesterday in Dayville, near the old Webster hall building. An overheated stove is believed to have caused the fire. Much of the furnishings of the home were taken out by volunteers. Mr. Rogers, who was at his work in Boston at the time of the fire, returned to Dayville and today was seeking temporary arrangements for boarding his three young children.

This morning at his home in Attawaugan the death of Adelard Brosseau, 41, occurred, after a long liness. Mr. Brosseau was a native of Nashua, N. H. He leaves his wife and seven children.

Friday of this week brings the last "off night" for the store forces of Danielson until after Christmas. Following the long established custom of Christmas week, the stores are to be open every evening, beginning Saturday of this week until the big rush is over on the eve of the holiday.

There are those here who wondered today whether there might be any connection between the supposed attempt to break into a jewelry store at Willimantic about four o'clock Wednesday morning, when a burglar alarm sounded, and the break that was made here and another one attempted the same night. Use of an automobile would permit of burglars easily operating in the two towns within a comparatively brief period.

Rev. Richard Hatch, of Brooklyn, will read the scripture when the annual presentation of the Nativity play is given at Pomfret next Sunday evening. This communial observance has been conducted at Christmas time for years at Pomfret, and has gained nation-wide fame. No admission charges are made, and Pomfret welcomes all who would attend.

Today there came to The Bulletin from William Henry Bishop, of Brooklyn, a generous contribution that is to be used in making Christmas happy in some needy home where there are children. Here is evidnce that the Christmas spirit is unchanging, that it is as joyous an xperience as ever in the past to give that someone may be made happy.

Lieut. Ross Urquhart of the Danielson barracks of the state police said this afternoon that there is no foundation for the story going about to the effect that persons who change from the old style of planetary transmission Ford cars to the new gear type Fords will have to take a reexamination for drivers licenses. Lieut. Urquhart pointed out that in this state an operator's license allows one to drive any type of motor car.

Miss Alice E. Bracken, of Hartford, has been the guest of Miss Mildred Burton for several days.

Mrs. Eugene Vetter and Miss Beatrice Geer, of Norwich, have been visitors with relatives in Danielson, where they formerly lived.

At the first of the year Rev. Richard Hatch of Brooklyn will complete his pastorate at St. Philip's church in Putnam.

Killingly High school's two basketball games with the Putnam High school this season are to be played respectively on January 20 and March 2, the first game to be in Putnam.

Friday of next week brings the end of the fall term in the schools of Killingly, and the Christmas vacation season, which will extend to Tuesday, Jan. 3.

These are days when motorists who have not as yet attended to the matter are arranging for registration for 1928. No operating will be allowed on 1927 plates it is announced, after the end of the year.

More applications for appointments as night patrol officer came to Chief John McFarland and other borough officials today, and all were given consideration at a meeting of borough officials this evening.

Soon after the first of the year the offices of the Windham county Y. M. C. A. now located in Putnam, are to be in the new Dowe building, the removal here to give the organization a more central county location.

Real stress is now being placed on the advise to do your Christmas mailing early. The postal service will be swamped with business during the coming week, and early mailing insures prompt delivery.

A community room, for the use of the public, is intended as a feature of the new Brooklyn Savings bank building, to be constructed during the coming year.

American legion members are calling attention to the fact that claims for adjusted compensation not already filed, must be in by January 1

PUTNAM

THREE FINED FOR OPERATING SUIT CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 15—Edward Herig, Peter Goldsmith and Edward Morin, agents of The Rinelda Tailoring company of Providence were arrested Wednesday afternoon, charged with operating a suit club. They were before the city court this morning, pleaded guilty and were fined $50 each and costs amounting to $11.14.

A suit club is a lottery. Each club member pays a stated amount per week and the holder of the lucky number is to get a suit and is to pay no more. Eventually, if the club is run honestly, each member gets a suit, but those whose names are drawn early in the game pay in but little.

The bruise became infected and it was necessary to have the bone scraped before the wound would heal. He is still carrying his arm in a sling.

A despatch from Springfield is of especial interest in Putnam where the aged Brother Andre is well known and was a recent visitor and was taken back to his home in Montreal by Alexander Gilman about two weeks ago after his periodical visit here:

"Felix I. Morin, of Springfield, real estate man, will return to his office some time this week, practically cured of an illness which caused physicians to despair of his life. He attributes his cure to Brother Andre, Montreal "Miracle Man," who recently visited Springfield. Following an operation last July for tumor on the brain, Mr. Morin found himself unable to walk, talk or read. Then Brother Andre came to Springfield."

JEWETT CITY

STATE OFFICERS VISIT LOCAL CHAPTER OF THE D. A. R.

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Dec. 15.—The meeting Wednesday of Ann Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. R., at the home of Mrs. A. M. Brown, proved the most interesting event of the year for the chapter. It was the visit of the state regent, Miss Katherine A. Nettleton, of Sarah Riggs Humphrey chapter, Derby, and the state vice regent, Miss Emeline A. Street, of Mary Clapp Wooster chapter, New Haven, who is also state chairman of Americanization.

At half past one a delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Brown and her assisting hostess, Mrs. Henry E. Olsen. After the lunch it was voted to adjourn the business meeting and proceed with the program.

Mrs. E. A. Faust, chapter regent, presented Miss Street, who spoke on Americanization as carried on by Connecticut chapters. As 68 per cent of the population of Connecticut is foreign born, this work has been well termed "national life insurance." Thirty different tongues are spoken by the one and one-half quarter million people of the state. In 1920 there were 125,000 who could not read a simple phrase in English. The speaker said: "The foreigner comes to America with the intention of doing what is right, but he is ignorant of our laws and our institutions. He often misunderstands us, but is more often misunderstood.

"To a better understanding of our laws, the National Society publishes a Manual of the United States. Since 1921, 1,900,000 have been published. Connecticut stood third in the number of copies distributed. The manual is printed in English and in fifteen foreign languages, not including Yiddish and Japanese now in process of translation. It would be worthwhile for Americans to study this manual."

Next to the manual in importance is the work with immigrants at Ellis Island. Material to occupy the women detained there is provided, with the full approval of immigration officials. It has been stated that four years of this work have transformed the place. One foreign woman departed for months said: "Without this work I should have gone crazy. When I land in America, I am going to join your society!"

Other work of the chapters consists in distributing flags, helping socially at evening schools, giving instruction to those small groups of women English so that they may feel equal to their husbands and children who learn the language in their business and school life. A number of new citizens were sent to Washington to see at first hand how the government is carried on.

The International college at Springfield, Mass., receives financial aid from the D. A. R. Thirty-eight different nationalities are represented there. Students expect to go back to groups of their own countrymen and give that the benefit of their own instruction.

In closing, Miss Street said that friendly contact is the best way to Americanize, that these new-comers, seeing us, would resolve to be as good Americans as we.

Miss Nettleton was then presented and spoke of Connecticut's excellent standing in the work of the National Society. Connecticut has a tremendous responsibility because of her enviable reputation in D. A. R. work, for being the finest organized state in the Union. She stressed the importance of national defense. The best way to avoid war is to be prepared for war. This does not mean that the D. A. R. is militaristic. The great peril is not from foreign quarters, but within our borders from those who want to overthrow our government. Connecticut daughters, 6,000 strong, imbued with the ideals and principles for which their ancestors founded this nation, have an opportunity second to none, to combat fifty other organizations that are sending out propoganda against the government.

Connecticut went well over the top in selling bonds for Constitution hall. This building will cost more than $1,000,000, will be the meeting place of the annual Continental congress, and will house the rapidly growing library.

By March, 1929, it is expected that a $6,000 endowment for Connecticut college will have been raised.

Connecticut was the first state to guarantee her quota to the Carolina Scott Harrison dormitory. This is a memorial to one who, while mistress of the White house, was also president-general, and built up a strong national organization.

After urging support of the Magazine, Miss Nettleton closed her talk with a quotation from President-General Mrs. Brosseau's address at the thirty-sixth congress:

"Upon us who occupy the vantage point of the hilltop, from which we can view the past and vision the future, devolves the responsibility of guarding our inheritance and passing it with reverent hands, on to those who have already begun the ascent of the hill. And we must see to it that the shoulders upon which it will rest are trained to fit the burden, instead of attempting to alter the load to suit the shoulders."

Mrs. Burleson announced the musical program. This was by Mrs. F. S. Leonard, who sang in finished manner, "For All Eternity," by Angelo Mascheroni. Her encore was "Here's My Heart," by Densmore.

Santa Claus, very cleverly impersonated by Mrs. Irene Ford, then appeared and distributed gifts for each member from a beautifully decorated and illuminated Christmas tree. This feature was generously provided by Mrs. J. H. Tracy. Gifts from the members of cloth, yarn and materials for embroidering were donated, to be sent to Ellis Island.

EASTERN VOLUNTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barber and granddaughter, Ruth Richmond, of Jewett City, were callers with Mrs Barber's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood, Sunday in Eastern Voluntown.

Mrs. William Bitgood is on the gain but very slowly. She can step three or four steps without touching anything but it makes her hip ache quite bad. She has been hurt 10 weeks the past Sunday.

Lee Remington of Oneco killed William Bitgood's pig for him Friday. It weighed 309 pounds. How is that for a spring pig!

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Remington and two children, Milton and Edith, of Oneco were to Mr. and Mrs. Bitgood's Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Bitgood are Mrs. Remington's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Devolve were in Oneco Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Gray's family have bad colds.

Earl Davis of Danielson called on William Bitgood Monday morning. He is nearly through sawing on the lot near Mr. Bitgood's.

Thomas Lewis and Clarence Cate have gone to work for Lloyd Congdon on Stone hill. They are cutting logs.

William Bitgood and Mrs. Bitgood made sausage Monday. Mrs. Bitgood could sit and cut the meat for Mr. Bitgood to grind; then she mixed the meat. She can sit and do a little but can't stand on her foot but a little while at a time but she is pleased to do a little. She has a very nice lady working for her. Mrs. Bitgood likes her very much. She is nice and good to every one.

Charles Douglass has returned home from Plainfield for a while. Charlie is like the old woman's soap, comes and goes.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leonard and Jr. Oney of Centerdale called on Mr. and Mrs. Lee Remington of Oneco on Sunday.

The roads in Eastern Voluntown are in a bad condition. They grow worse instead of better. It is hard work for foot passengers to get over them.

Walter Lewis killed his pig the past week. It weighed 300 pounds, a spring pig, too.

Moses has been in with his mistress. He has not forgotten how to eat with her. She says to him, "You are feeding mice, don't you think so?" He talked his way of talking. He walked in and went to the pantry for his lunch. The lady that works for Mrs. Bitgood gave her some bread and she laid a paper on the floor and she put the bread on it. He ate, then went out talking his way. How is that for Moses?

Lee Remington of Oneco and Bobbie Dixon had pigs that came from the same place that William Bitgood's did and the same age. Bobbie Dixon's weighed 320 and 225 pounds. Mr. Remington's weighed 340, 235 and 222 pounds. The six pigs weighed 1521 pounds.

Henry D. Johnson was a business caller at the Lewis Bros.' at Beach pond Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wilyer and Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Kolstmen were in Westerly Friday. Mr. Wilyer was on his way to New York, where he will visit friends.

OPTIMISTS AND PESSIMISTS.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

"Prosperity," says Mr. Coolidge waving hands of benediction over the land.

"Prosperity," echoes Mr. Hoover pointing to the gains of commerce and the teetering "balance of trade."

"Prosperity," chorus Mr. Ford and Mr. Schwab and Mr. Rockefeller and the political contractors and the bootlegger princes, as they prepare and lay plans to rake in a few more millions from a populace which is fairly tumbling over its own nose in its eager hurry to pay them tribute.

What, if you please, is "prosperity?"

There are some who gravely question whether the hectic flush of fever is a mark of real beauty.

They doubt if a blister-to-the-touch is a pure sign of physical strength and well-being.

They even have the audacity to insinuate that a wind-blown bladder is less solid than a ball of cast iron.

Worse still, they dare to wonder whether an artificial and one-sided inflation, self-evidently temporary in its character, is exactly the same thing as "prosperity."

Of course, it is the popular thing to sneer at these doubters, to call them "pessimists" or "birds of ill-omen," to eject them from the assembly of the faithful, and to laugh at them as they stumble forth into outer darkness.

W-e-l-l, it has always been the custom of donkeys to do more "Hee-haw-ing" than philosophic thinking.

Bray first and bray loud enough and bray long enough and the noise will drown out all protests; that seems to be the underlying idea. If, indeed, such a thing as an idea may be postulated of the asinine genera.

Bray first,—and be brayed afterwards, (Prov. 27, 22);—that is the practical meaning.

We have more gold in our vaults and safes than was ever held before by any nation in history, says one. That ends it for him. He never stops to answer or even consider the searching question once asked by one who knew—none better,—the real value of gold: "What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Business is booming, sales are easy, and payments comparatively sure, says another, as he prepares to make a fresh bank deposit. Again, that ends it for him. It rarely occurs to him that the only deposits he can ever lay up which are of real value are in a currency which can neither rust nor corrupt nor thieves break through and steal.

Wages are high and growing higher, says still another, and employment is general. Admitting that the boosting of prices by profiteers and grafters has, incidentally, carried wages up with it, this latter Worldly Wiseman doesn't stop to ask how $10 a day in wages when it costs $9 a day to live as he wants to, is better than $3 a day wages when he can live just as well on $2.50.

He handles more money, it is true. But just handling money is no more truly satisfying than handling a raw turkey Thanksgiving morning. Handling it by the hour, or even by the dozen, doesn't make much progress towards filling out the waist-band. The proof of the turkey is in the eating.

It is a well-known and perfectly understandable fact that, the nearer a down-stream oarsman gets to the brink of Niagara, the easier becomes the rowing and the faster his movement. Under those circumstances, the optimist puffs in his oars, mops his brow, loafs over to the stern-sheets, and shouts happily to the watchers, "This is the life; this is the way to get there."

To get where?

That is a question which he omits to ask.

Another man, feeling the increasing pull of the current and hearing the deafening roar of the cataract ahead, turns his bow towards the shore and rows frantically across or against the rush.

He is therefore, in popular parlance, a pessimist. And the on-lookers will hee-haw at his evident panic where one will stand by to throw him a rope, if he ever gets within casting distance.

"Nobody loves a fat man," is an old phrase in Cupid's court. Nobody loves a pessimist, either. He is popularly regarded as either a spoil-sport, or a fouler of his own nest, or, at best, a burn bore and nuisance.

The song of the veery thrush is admittedly vastly more pleasant than that of the carrion crow. It is much more comfortable to snooze on a breezy afternoon in a nook of the deep woods and listen to the veery's inimitable fluting than it is to lie out in the cold, damp dawn with a shot-gun waiting for the cawing crows who are gathering to pull up your freshly planted corn.

But,

You'll get more corn by fighting crows than you will by loafing in the grove, listening to the thrush.

The comfortable burghers of strong old Troy town, according to Homer, considered Cassandra crazy because she predicted its fall if they didn't change their ways. The Jews of a likewise distant age stoned the prophets who foretold the razing of the Temple walls. The business men of thriving Nineveh undoubtedly considered Jonah "off his nut," when he wandered up and down their thoroughfares proclaiming "Woe!" Belshazzar of Babylon and feasting nobles didn't love Daniel any better because he openly told them they were rats in a trap and doomed to extinction. Yet Troy town fell, and Assyrian conquerors drove a plow where the Temple walls had stood; and Ninevah crashed in flame upon its last beleaguered defenders; and Babylon is today but a dust-heap in the desert. Nero, according to the historian, fiddled while Rome burned. You see, Nero was an optimist.

Yet I think we of even this modern age regard the pessimistic Cassandra and Jeremiah and Jonah and Daniel with a trifle more respect than we feel for his Fiddling Majesty, the Emperor Nero.

They told unpleasant truths, perhaps in unpleasant ways. Doing that thing makes your thorough-going optimist mad all the way through. He simply won't stand for it. If he can't shut off your noise any other way, he'll bring out his fiddle and drown your discordant warnings unders its harmonious strains.

I frankly confess that I enjoy optimistic talk better than pessimistic. I rather like to hear how big and strong and rich we are. I like to read about millions and billions. Big figures are something to revel in, as one does, on occasion, in a fresh box of Christmas confections. Even then, one doesn't like to bite on a pebble in his chocolate cream, or find a dead fly embalmed in his fudge.

But I come from a line of rather shrewd Yanks, descended, according to our family genealogy, from "canny" Yorkshire. And the working formula of that breed is, in brief, "Always hope for the best and prepare for the worst."

Why, all we old farmers know that, when a day is peculiarly bright, when the air is so pellucid that distant mountains seem but a step away, when the clear blue of the sky is so deep that we fancy we are looking into infinity when we turn our eyes upward,—we all know that the probabilities are for foul weather, next day. We call such days "weather-breeders."

There's another old saying, doubtless come down from Yorkshire philosophers: "He who feels surest of his step is most apt to stumble."

I read the remark, recently, of a thoughtful and would-be friendly critic of America that, as he watched her "marching optimistically to inevitable destruction," he felt that he "was witnessing the greatest tragedy of history."

Now, I don't like that sort of talk I don't believe,—I won't believe that it is prophetically and textually true.

But, way down in the bottom of my heart, I can't help seeing that there is some basis for it. Perhaps it is overstated. Perhaps destruction isn't "inevitable." Perhaps the "tragedy" may turn out to be only a melodrama with more tears shed than blood spilt.

But there are certain "dangerous tendencies" apparent in American life Goldwin Smith pointed out a few of them, 50 years ago. There are a score of new ones, since developed, for every one he depicted.

We deplore what we call "the crime-wave." Yet the "crime-wave" is not a disease; it is just one symptom of a disease which is spreading too rapidly.

We deplore popular disregard for law. Yet such popular disregard is only a symptom of a deeper seated disease.

We deplore the increase in divorce; we deplore the laxity of youthful morals; we deplore corruption in society and graft in politics and eleventy-eleven other phases of modern life. All merely symptoms.

Symptoms of what?

Just a superficial skin disease that will cure itself in time? Or of an internal and deep-seated cancer which will lead to death?

I don't know; you don't know; nobody seems to know. But our ignorance is no excuse for our refusal to admit the symptoms which are staringly and glaringly manifest.

Not even an ostrich can avoid a bullet through its body by hidding his head in the sand.

And sometimes the neighbor who tells you an unpleasant truth is really a kinder friend than the one who plasters you over with soft-soap.

AFTER CHRISTMAS GREENS FOUR PALS LOST IN WOODS

Four local young men, Dexton Holliday, William Holliday, Clifford Phelps and Eugene Butson, went in their automobile to Center Groton woods after Christmas greens, Wednesday noon. After an hour's search they found some and then started back to the road bound for home, but got lost in the woods. They finally began calling for help to see if their voices could be heard, but in vain. Going up hill over stone walls, coming back to the same spot three times, they were lost for four hours, until Eugene Butson found a path that took them out to safety. William Holliday said he has been all over the country as a hiker and this was the first time in his life he ever got lost in the woods. "But there is always a first time," the rest of the gang said and gave him the laugh, taking it all as a joke. The evergreen was saved and getting back to the village at 6:30 o'clock, "Never again!" the four young men sang, "in the woods of Center Groton."

Edgar Schoolmaker spent a day in Plainfield this week.

The X-ray failed to find a splinter of steel in Maxson Langworth's face, which entered it recently at the local shipyard. The doctor was trying to draw out the steel, but it was not coming along well, so young Langworthy wanted an X-ray taken. The doctor says it is still there. The face is swollen and painful.

William Franklin was a caller in Plainfield Wednesday.

About twenty-five local basketball fans went to Plainfield to attend a basketball game between the Noank Fire Co. five and the Plainfield Buddies. The Smoke-eaters were off in shooting baskets, while the Buddies kept the ball on the move and put it in at will. The Noank Nuggets have been taken over by the fire company and they made only two field goals and two fouls during the evening. The passwork of Plainfield's mill boys was the best seen on the floor this season. The fire fighters did not seem to get going, their aim on the basket fell short and they came home with the little end of the score, 30 to 6.

Third Mate Linton Wilcox of U. S. S. Mexico has arrived in the village after a three months' trip to the west coast, stopping at California. He says in that state it is now like Indian summer, the orange trees in bloom and the weather just right without a top-coat. The trip on the water was good, with only a day of rough weather. Mate Wilcox will be around the town for ten days, then will go to New York where his ship is and make another voyage to the coast. It is his first time home in a year.

A grass fire, probably from a cigar butt, over on the lot on Spicer avenue around 6:30 p. m. Thursday brought out a large crowd and the boys with brooms and shovels were there to help put the blaze out. The wind was not blowing and only a few houses were in danger and the fire was checked far from them. The fire engine was not needed.

The Tavern which was the leading hotel in the village during the war and had 300 guests, the greatest number since it was opened on Fourth of July in 1918, was under the management of E. Cushman for a year. Then the country called for young men to fight for Uncle Sam. He was among the first to go, so his place was taken by Mrs. J. Larkin, of New York, until 1919, when the business went on the rocks. Later the windows were broken, the doors taken away by a gang from out of town while the village slept. Now the owner from New London came over this week and with a force of men is tearing the hotel down, taking the lumber and what is left of the doors and the like back to New London by truck.

Capt. George Adams of the boat Grace with his mate, George Main, Jr., was out to the fishing ground recently after flatfish. In the second drag the net held a large sturgeon that weighed 32 pounds. This is a southern fish not seen in these waters so late in the season. Capt. Adams put it on exhibition for a few hours and then Mate Main shipped it to Fulton Market, New York, to see how much it was worth.

Mrs. Charles Rogers has gone to New York for a few days' visit.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tourjee are in Brooklyn, N. Y., for a short time.

Miss Mildred Oles is confined to her home by illness.

Miss Laura Ecclestone is spending a few days in Ashwillet.

The D. of A. play, "The Show Actress" was well attended this week. It was presented by a cast from Stonington before a big house. Refreshments were served and later in the evening Barber's orchestra of Westerly played for dancing. The proceeds will go toward a new heater being put in.

BOZRAH

The Fitchville and Bozrah Center C. E. societies held a union meeting at the Center church Sunday evening. Rev. George H. Strouse, pastor of the Congregational church, assisted by Charles Brush, gave a series of slides for the song service.

Rev. Jacob F. Speerli, pastor of Fitchville church, conducted the meeting. In spite of the storm over forty were present.

The woman's missionary society is to meet at the home of Mrs. William Hough, of Norwich Town, Saturday at 2 p. m.

Schools in town held one session Tuesday so that the teachers might attend the teachers' meeting held at Fitchville school. This meeting included the teachers of Franklin and Bozrah. It was conducted by Miss Maud Shapleigh, primary supervisor.

The Bible study class met at the parsonage Tuesday evening.

IN DESPAIR OVER PIMPLY, RED SKIN

ITCHED AND BURNED— UGLY TO LOOK AT

Healed at last, quickly and easily

Charlotte, Mich., Oct. 21:—"I have been a sufferer from a most unsightly skin disorder, my face being full of pimples and blackheads and my complexion was very muddy. It was very ugly to look at as it was red and firey and it annoyed me by itching and burning. I tried many treatments, but got no relief. When I was a small baby I had eczema on my body and my mother used Resinol Ointment on it and she recommended it to me at this time. In desperation I decided to send for a sample of Resinol. After using the sample I bought more Resinol as I was convinced it was a splendid remedy. After I had applied it four times, the pimples began to heal and at the end of two weeks they had entirely disappeared. Now, I have such confidence in Resinol Ointment I would not be without it." (Signed) Mrs. Alice D. White, R. F. D. 11.

The Man Who Cannot Quit

He's seen it all, as the years went by,
He's mastered the strife and won his way;
He's comfortable in worldly affairs,
And his hair is turning a little gray.
His business prospered, and he's content
With the long results as fortune came;
He might retire, and take a rest—
But he finds that he cannot quit the game.

He goes to the office the same as he did
Years ago when the strife was strong;
He takes his part in the daily fray
Just as he has done all along.
He feels himself in the iron grip
Of habits formed in the fire and flame;
And he says as long as he has his health
He feels that he cannot quit the game.

He is bent a little, and getting old,
Has seen men come and seen them go;
But he's just as good as he ever was,
Though sometimes, maybe, a little slow.
A thought at times comes over his soul
That he ought to rest, that it is a shame;
But things like this are beyond control,
And he's sure that he cannot quit the game.

We pity the man who has tried and failed,
We sorrow with those who are down and out;
But the man who cannot quit the game
When the dreams of the years are all about—
How shall we pity enough his part,
Whom none can censure and none can blame,
Who knows down deep in his own true heart
That he should, but he cannot quit the game.
— Folger McKinsey, in Baltimore Sun.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Customer—Is this a safety match?
Dealer—Yes, it always goes out before three cigarets can be lighted from it.—Boston Post.

She—But I can't believe you. I expect you deceive all the girls.
He—Oh, I say, that's an awful libel. You're the first, really.—Tit-Bits.

Guest—There's a fly in my ice cream.
Waiter—Let him freeze and teach him a lesson. The lil' rascal was in the soup last night.—Pathfinder.

Briggs—Do you and your wife ever have any family jars.
Griggs—They are not unknown in our menage. Margaret and I find them good things to preserve our temper in.—Boston Transcript.

She (coyly)—Have you forgotten you asked me to marry you last night?
He (thinking fast)—No, indeed—but you haven't forgotten you said you wouldn't, have you?—Detroit News.

Caveman Husband (sternly to his wife, who has been shopping)—What do you want with a new frock?
His wife (happily)—How thoughtful of you, darling! Of course I'd like a new hat to go with it.—Answer's, London.

Prisoner—I admit, your honor, that I was exceeding the speed limit, but I was afraid of being late at court.
Judge—And what was your business in court?
Prisoner—I had to answer the charge of exceeding the speed limit.—Vancouver Province.

Two women in a railway compartment were quarreling about the window and insisted on calling the guard.
"If it's opened I shall catch cold and die," said the one.
"If it's closed I shall suffocate," retorted the other.
A long-suffering man here intervened. "First open the window," he told the guard, "that will kill one. Then shut it. That will get rid of the other. Then the rest of us can all go to sleep."—Weekly Scotsman.

Mrs. H. P. Coupe, of Los Angeles, Cal., tracing the report that her nine-year-old daughter, Betty Lou, had been playing truant from school, discovered that Betty had become a stunt flyer's mascot. Betty played "hookey" in order to loop the loop with Ray Solomon at Callies field there. In the course of a little questioning Mrs. Coupe found that the episode in question was one of several times that Betty had "taken the air."

When Joe Clukey, a Rockland (Me.) sailor, pulled a sculpin out of Rockland harbor, he found he had caught a fish with a history. Firmly embedded in the fish's tail was a piece of rusty wire and attached to the wire was a small water-soaked piece of wood on which was carved: "A. K., June 19, 1919, Northeast harbor, Me." If the specimen in question followed the short line from Northeast harbor to Rockland, it swam about 100 miles.

Gambusia, the little fish that befriends man by devouring mosquito "wigglers," is finding things even more to his liking in the ponds and ditches of Italy than in his native American home, according to reports received from Rome. Carried first to Spain and thence to Italy to combat the malarial mosquitoes, this hungry little minnow has multiplied enormously throughout the region around the mouth of the Tiber, where it was first introduced, and has also been transplanted into shallow waters throughout the peninsula and along the Dalmatian coast. More favorable food and other environmental conditions and probably the absence of natural enemies that take toll of its numbers in America, are credited with the gratifying abnormal rate of increase.

DIVERSIFIED SPECULATION CAUSED FLUCTUATION IN PRICES OF STOCKS

NEW YORK, Dec. 15—(AP)—Frequent shifts of speculative interest from one group of stocks to another characterized the irregularly higher movement of prices in today's market. A further slight recession in sterling exchange, making immediate shipments of gold to England improbable, and the steadiness of call money at 4 per cent in the face of an unusually heavy mid-month turnover of funds diverted interest, at least temporarily, from the money market.

The New York Federal Reserve bank rate was unchanged at 3 1-2 per cent. The weekly report of brokers' loans showed a decrease of $4,500,000.

There was little in the day's news to influence the price movement. Steel centers continued to report increasing inquiries, including an order for 32,000 tons of sheets by the Ford Motor Co. which was placed with the American Rolling Mill Co. Another series of "Christmas dividends" was announced during the day, including an extra of $2 on Firestone common.

Pools bid up a wide assortment of specialties to new high records for the year, or longer. The sensational character of some of the gains led to extensive profit-taking in other quarters by conservative traders and investors, but offerings were fairly well absorbed. The usual merger and dividend rumors accompanied the advance in many issues.

Coppers gave one of the best demonstrations of group strength under the leadership of Anaconda, which advanced more than 3 points to 55 1-2, the highest price in more than five years. Nevada,Ennecott, Calumet & Hecla and Dome Mines also reached new high levels, while Homestake Mines advanced 4 1-2 points, American Smelting 2 1-2 and a number of others a point or more.

Continental Insurance (old stock) was the sensational individual feature, rallying from 275 to 302 and then falling back to 290, where it was up 16 points on the day. The new stock, which was admitted to trading for the first time, opened at 74 1-4, rallied to 88 1-2 and fell back to 78 1-2.

Radio corporation was heavily bought in the final hour, soaring 6 points to 22 5-8 and closing within a fraction of the top. Timken Roller Bearing also ran up more than 5 points. Strength and activity of the American Brown Boveri issues was attributed to a variety of factors including the recommendation of Secretary Wilbur for five additional airplane carriers and the announcement of some new railroad electrification project, including one of $20,000,000 by the Reading railroad.

The day's list of new high records included such widely diversified issues as Vanadium Steel, Electric Power & Light, Gotham Silk Hosiery, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, International Business Machines, Freeport-Texas, National Surety, Universal Leaf and General Cable.

In the rail group, New Haven crossed 60 for the first time in 11 years and New York Central, Western Pacific and Gulf, Mobile & Northern advanced a point or so, Pittsburgh & West Virginia broke 7 points on a few sales and Chesapeake & Ohio dropped 2 1-2.

Demand sterling ruled slightly lower around $4.87 7-8, and most of the other European rates held steady. Money rates were unchanged.

The New Idea of Cancer

Many Cases Can Be Cured If Reported Promptly

BULLETIN No. 16
CANCER QUACKS.

Cancer quackery is one of the worst forms of human cruelty. The patient is led to suppose that a cure is possible and kept expecting improvement until all possibility of recovery by skillful, conscientious effort has passed.

The methods employed by cancer quacks are various. Sometimes a medicine is given by the mouth. Sometimes an application is made externally. Not infrequently a condition which was not cancer at all is declared to be cancer, and when the patient gets well, credit is given to the quack for accomplishing a great cure.

Many years ago cancer quacks were to be found in the village squares on a Saturday night, extolling their wares from soap boxes and beneath flaming torches. They were in competition and obviously on a plane with the venders of razors, hair dyes and similar articles. Later the quacks advertised in the newspapers and published testimonials as to the value of the treatment advocated.

Today the most dangerous quack is a man who poses as a physician of high standing. He has a method for the cure of cancer which is secret. He claims it is as much his personal skill as the merit of the preparation which effects the cure. He exacts heavy fees and not infrequently insists that they shall be paid in advance. He may even run what he calls a cancertorium.

How is a person to avoid falling into the clutches of a fraud? The best plan is to engage a physician who stands well with his fellow professional men. If a doctor is not a member of the medical societies to which practically all physicians of good standing belong, it is possible there is good reason for it. If he claims he has been unjustly persecuted by the medical men, beware of him. If he claims to use a secret preparation, be suspicious of him. Any man who can produce a genuine cure for cancer need not keep it from the world in order to do good with it. On the contrary, let him announce it through the properly constituted medical channels. He will be promptly acknowledge as one of the greatest benefactors of the human race.

CENTRAL VT. FREIGHTER LIBELED AT NEW LONDON FREED THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 15—As a result of a receiver having been appointed for the Central Vermont railroad Tuesday, the railroad encountered further difficulties yesterday afternoon when a United States marshal placed a libel on the company's freighter, City of New York. The libel was of short duration, however, for today a bond was filed, permitting the release of the freighter. The steamer arrived in port from New York yesterday morning and it was intended that she would make the return trip last night but while the steamer was being loaded the libel was placed on the craft. The action prevented the steamer from leaving port last night, but tonight the trip was resumed without further interruption. The steamer was libeled at the instance of the Fletcher Engine company, Hoboken, N. J.

FUNERAL OF M. A. TINKER HELD AT LAKE'S POND CHURCH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 15—The funeral of Matthew A. Tinker, former town officer of Montville and that town's representative in the legislature for several years, who has resided in Chesterfield the greater part of his life, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Lake's Pond Baptist church, Chesterfield and was attended by a large gathering of mourners, including many from New London. The services were conducted by Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church, New London. Members of Thames lodge of Odd Fellows, Montville, acted as bearers. Burial was in Lake's Pond cemetery.

RUMOR RAILROAD MAN WAS ROBBED OF OVER $40

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 15—A report has been in circulation today of a holdup, but no verification of the robbery has been reported at police headquarters and nothing was known there of any robbery. It was stated that a man, an employe of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad was passing through Washington street on Tuesday evening and when near the corner of Huntington street, he was accosted by a man, who thrust a revolver in front of his face and demanded his money. The railroader turned over $40 to the gunman, who then disappeared in the darkness, at the same time firing two shots in the air, apparently to intimidate the man robbed. A resident of Washington street claims to have heard the shots and to having gone to the street where the railroad man told him of what had occurred.

MRS. E. K. EAGER'S FUNERAL WAS LARGELY ATTENDED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 15—The funeral of Mrs. Eleanor Kloppenberg Eager, widow of Fred C. Eager, of Harrisons (Waterford), whose death occurred in the Christian Science sanitarium, Boston, was held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at 15 Masonic street and was attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives. The services were conducted by Miss Almira Lovell, first reader of the local Christian Science church. The bearers were Albert H. Hart, George R. Morris, Jr., Charles Deering, David H. Seaman, William S. Nichols and H. Everett Eagles. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Since the announcement yesterday of the suspected deaths of three men in this city as the result of having drank poisoned liquor, or rather liquor made from distilled denatured alcohol, it was made known this afternoon that a fourth man is supposed to have died from this same cause. The report of the series of deaths from poisoned alcohol has led the detective bureau to double its efforts in an endeavor to ascertain whether the deaths were caused, either primarily or secondarily from the effects of the drinkers partaking of the poisonous concoctions. The latest death believed to have been from this cause, is that of a resident of a section of the city where a kitchen barroom is located immediately adjoining the house in which the victim died. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman has been in consultation with Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, but nothing tangible in the way of possible clues was revealed by the conference. However, the officers of the detective bureau are using every effort to determine whether the deaths were the result of the drinking of poisonous alcohol and if this can be determined arrests will be made for it is generally known the drinking places the death victims frequented.

Mrs. Catherine Ryan, wife of former Alderman John J. Ryan, died last night at her residence, 105 Blackhall street, after an illness of several weeks. Besides her husband, Mrs. Ryan is survived by a daughter, Mrs. William Fitzsimons and by four sons, James, John, Thomas and George Ryan, the last three named having served in the World war, all of New London. A granddaughter, Catherine Anna Fitzsimons, also survives. Mrs. Ryan was of advanced years and was well and favorably known here.

Irving Sandler, 22 Grand street, reported to the police last night that while his automobile was parked in the street a thief stole a spare tire, rim, stop-light and markers, 118997.

Patrick Mullins, who says he is a bricklayer and who has resided at 117 Middletown avenue, Hartford, was detained at police headquarters when he acted strangely after seeking lodging. He was presented in the police court today on a technical charge of breach of the peace. His case was continued to Saturday that observation could be made of his actions at the county jail. After he was locked up last night, Mullins was examined by two physicians, but they were unable to determine whether he was of sound mentality.

David Riley, formerly of Vermont, was charged with breach of the peace and was sentenced to 30 days in jail. Riley was intoxicated yesterday, went to the fruit store of John Gentilella, Bank street, where he created a disturbance when he placed several articles of canned goods in his pockets and refused to pay for them. Patrolman William Corcoran was summoned and when Riley became abusive, he was arrested.

Thomas F. Dorsey and son Peter have returned to their home on Neptune avenue, having spent several weeks at Miami, Fla.

Mrs. Frank H. Morrison has returned to her home in Los Angeles, Cal., after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Dorsey.

Tomorrow bids fair to provide an interesting session in the police court for at 9 o'clock tonight five inebriates were in cells at police headquarters. Besides these cases there is a continued case scheduled for presentation, that of Elias Salferda, Central Falls, R. I., who is charged with reckless driving. Salferda was driving an automobile on Ocean avenue in October, after he and a party of friends had attended a Syrian celebration at Ocean Beach. When approaching Glenwood avenue, Salferda attempted to pass another automobile and the cars sideswiped each other, Salferda's machine leaving the highway and overturning. One of the passengers was seriously injured and for several days after the accident it was believed that he would die from his injuries at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. The case has been continued several times, but tomorrow it is probable that it will be disposed of.

The 600 students at Connecticut college will start tomorrow for their respective homes for the Christmas and New Year's vacations and will be absent from the city nearly three weeks. Already the students are prepared for their home-going and by late afternoon all of them will have departed from New London.

St. Joseph's Women's Social club held a special meeting and social in St. Joseph's hall, Montauk avenue tonight. The social was one in a series which the members will enjoy during the winter months.

It is expected that the new Poquetanuck bridge on the military highway between Groton and Norwich, will be completed and ready for use by next July. But two pier foundations remain to be completed and the work is progressing rapidly as favorable weather conditions have prevailed since the work started.

Christmas carols will be sung by the girl students of Williams Memorial Institute and by students of the grade schools Christmas eve, in furtherance of the Yuletide spirit. The students from the institute, it is expected, will sing to patients at Smith Memorial home, Lawrence Memorial and Home Memorial hospitals. They will be assisted by students of Bulkeley high school. The grade pupils will sing carols at the home of shut-ins or where men, women and children are ill.

The streets of New London were never in worse condition for travel than at present and particularly is this noticeable on Bank street, a highway where the heaviest of traffic is the rule daily. Between Pearl and State streets on the east side of the street the highway is greatly depressed in spots, almost so as to be dangerous.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad is making arrangements to handle an immense throng of passengers next Friday and Saturday and already many extra coaches and parlor cars are being moved to New York to accommodate the thousands who will come to New England to spend Christmas with either their families or relatives.

INVITED TO FITCHVILLE BY NORWICH PYTHIANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 15.—At a meeting of Trumbull lodge, No. 48, Knights of Pythias, last evening members of Wauregan lodge, Norwich, extended a ninvitation to the local membership to attend a New Year's evening party at Fitchville. It is believed that the invitation will be accepted. One applicant was admitted to membership.

Salvatore LaRocco, 350 Jefferson avenue; Mrs. Stephen Pukas, 343 Crystal avenue; Gaspare Montrello, 57 Warren street and Miss Catherine Prevost, 36 Howard street, patients at Home Memoral hospital, were discharged today.

Mrs. Edward Latham, of Blackhall; Frank Miller, United States Coast Guard; Lyman V. West, 49 Pequot avenue and Henry Smith, of Hempstead street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged yesterday and today.

Peter Pijeax, former United States Coast Guard sailor, who was arrested in New York several days ago at the request of the New London police charged with burglary, will be presented in court in New York tomorrow, but he will not be turned over to a New London officer at that time. The case will be continued, probably about two weeks, to permit extradition papers to be issued, which is mandatory by New York laws whenever a prisoner arrested there is taken out of the state for trial. Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin is at work on the papers and as soon as he has prepared them, Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh will go to Hartford and obtain the signature of Governor Trumbull to the warrant and the officer will then continue to Albany and secure Gov. Al Smith's signature. Sergeant Cavanaugh will then return to New York and attend the court hearing of Pijeaux after which the accused will be brought back to New London for trial. Pijeaux is accused of entering the residence of Joseph Jackson, 12 Richards street, by means of a skeleton key, while the Jackson family was absent from the city and to having stolen clothing of the aggregate value of $500.

Roy Hughes, submarine base, was presented before Justice of the Peace A. Y. Miller in Montville yesterday afternoon charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in failing to grant right of way. He was fined $10 and costs. Hughes was arrested by a state police officer yesterday after the auto he was driving had collided with a car on Morgan Hill, Montville.

The teachers of the public schools will not receive gifts from their pupils this year, as has been the case for several years. Superintendent of Schools Warren B. Hanson had the students in the several schools notified today to refrain from the practice of gift-making to the teachers. Making the gifts causes an expenditure by the parents that is considered entirely unnecessary, especially where parents have several children attending schools.

Antone B. Enos, Jr., 53, died today at his residence, 363 Williams street, death resulting from heart trouble developing after an illness that confined Mr. Enos to his home about three months. Mr. Enos is survived by his wife, his father, Antone Enos, of Clark Lane, Waterford; a daughter, Mrs. Irving S. C. OF C. MAKES FINAL DRIVE PLANS AT BANQUET

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 15—Final instructions were given tonight to about 100 enthusiastic workers for the campaign put on by the chamber of commerce to secure a paid secretary at a meeting and dinner held in the Natnan Hale hotel. The session was in charge of Chairman Frank Bugby and William P. Jordan. The speaker of the evening was William T. Barber, of Hartford, field secretary of the state chamber of commerce. Mr. Barber gave some valuable suggestions on the spirit that should predominate for a bigger and better Willimantic and he gave hints to the listeners in the use of several timely illustrations.

It was reported by the executive committee that pre-campaign subscriptions had already been received for the approximate amount of $2,400. The goal for the year's budget was $7,500. Albert B. Smith outlined the system of canvassing and the team captains in their assistance chose cards which will be used in the campaign. During the drive which officially closes Tuesday evening with a dinner, a campaign office will be maintained in the hotel. The members of the executive committee are the chairmen, Messrs. Bugby and Jordan, John F. Carr, H. D. Lathrop, treasurer of the drive, Andrew Roux, P. J. Twomey, James B. Fullerton and Frank P. Fenton, president of the chamber.

The team captains are Roland B. Jordan, Joseph E. Riordan, Louis H. Arnold, Kenneth N. Hillhouse, Edward T. Kenney, Stanley J. Bumper, Nelson A. Daniels, Raymond A. Parker, Pierre J. Laramee and George W. Hickey.

Breed Theatre.

A circus with its big top, menageries, side shows, crowds, performing lions and other jungle beasts, horses, clowns, tumblers, trapeze performers, balloon ascensions and parachute drops, is staged by Tom Mix in "The Circus Ace," his latest Fox films, starring drama which opens a two days' run at the Breed theatre today. Tony, the wonder horse of the Tom Mix organization, is given opportunity to perform some of the most marvelous stunts of his equine career. His performance of his role indicates an intelligence of almost humanlike qualities.

Both Tom and the horse, Tony, are at their best in this story of a ranchman who looking up into the sky, sees a parachute drifting downwards toward him with a beautiful girl clinging to the trapeze. What follows is action woven into a story of dramatic interest that is jammed with suspense, thrills and considerable fun.

"The Circus Ace" is the kind of entertainment that is sure to please old and young alike.

Strand Theatre.

The Silent Hero is a dog story—a drama of danger, daring and devotion. The central prominent character is Napoleon Bonaparte, the marvelous canine performer of super-human feats. Edna Murphy makes a delightful heroine, Robert Frazer is a likeable hero, while Ernest Hilliard's "heavy characterization" is a truly inspired one. You're going to enjoy every minute of your visit to the Strand to see this remarkable picture.

The Canvas Kisser is a prize fight picture. The title belongs to Richard Holt, who was one—on the advice of his manager—but after he met a sweet little girl, he quit being a canvas kisser, in fact he quit the fight game altogether, and only returned to it to save the girl's father from ruin. Ruth Dwyer is the girl. This is one of the most thrilling pictures ever filmed around the prize ring and you owe it to yourself to see it.

Palace Theatre

Reared in seclusion by a grandmother who is ever afraid that her grandson will some day learn he is the offspring of a famous fighter is the basis for the latest Reginald Denny story, "On Your Toes," which commences a three day engagement at the Palace theatre today.

Denny is seen in the beginning as a dancing teacher, an effeminate sort of type. Into the little southern village comes a fight manager looking for the son of "Young Evans" a former champion. Investigation leads him to Denny and when seeing the profession chosen by the former champion's son, he decides to return to New York. It is here that the daughter of the manager intercedes and awakens a spark of manhood in the mollycoddle. From that point on there is not a dull moment in the whole picture.

An excellent cast supports Mr. Denny in "On Your Toes," with Hayden Stevenson as the fight manager, Barbara Worth as the daughter and Mary Carr in the role of grandmother.

The vaudeville consists of the Sandell Sisters Revue, a melange of mirth melody and music, Bell and LeClaire in a comedy presentation, The Try Out, Rich and Ray in an amusing flirtation bit, "In the Hotel Lobby," Myers and Nolan in comedy titbits and the Great Johnson, "The Silent Entertainer."

Tonight the Myrkle Harder company will present the greatest of all plays ever written about mothers and daughters 'Stella Dallas" even through her overdressiness and common tastes, you will have to sympathize with this most human mother.

Laughter, pathos and heart appeal will cause you to run the gaunt of human emotions, as this intense drama is unfolded. "Stella Dallas" was the kind of a girl that both Main street and Broadway knew and talked about, but what she did she did for her daughter, and it is up to you to see whether she did right or wrong.

NON-SUIT DENIED IN GROTON CASE; BIG BOILER PLATE WILL BE EXHIBIT

Late Thursday afternoon Judge John Rufus Booth overruled motion for non-suit in the $15,000 case of Maurice O'Donnell, Jr., of New London against the borough of Groton which was on trial all day in the superior court here. When the plaintiff's attorney Arthur T. Keefe, had rested his case about 4 o'clock. Attorney H. J. Brogan for the borough asked to have the jury excused while he presented and argued the motion for non-suit on the ground that no negligence had been proved on the part of the borough and that there was contributory negligence on the part of O'Donnell. Judge Booth promptly over-ruled the motion and the defense attorneys, who are Warren Burrows and P. Z. Hankey, in addition to Mr. Brogan, proceeded to call witnesses.

The case will be resumed next Tuesday morning, at which time a big 225 boiler plate will be one of the exhibits to be introduced by the defendant. The plate was carried in an ante room Thursday afternoon by about six men and left there ready for the court trial Tuesday.

O'Donnell is suing for injuries he received in a boiler burst at the plant partment on ay 21, 1927(the day partment on May 21, 1927, th eday Lindbergh was flying to Paris. William M. Jacobsus, superintendent at the plant, was killed and O'Donnell was severely injured.

On the day in question, O'Donnell was at the plant where he was engaged as an independent contractor, under the direction of the superintendent in welding plates on the end of an old steam boiler, which the defendant was converting into a tank for the storage of compressed air.

Having concluded welding the boiler and preparing to depart late in the afternoon, and while picking up his tools and welding apparatus, the boiler or tank without warning was negligently and carelessly caused, permitted and allowed by servants, agents or employes of the water and electrical department to explode with tremendous force and violence, it is alleged in the complaint.

As a result of the explosion, the papers set out, O'Donnell was thrown down upon the basement floor with great force, rendered unconscious, and permanently injured in that he suffered numerous wounds, bruises and contusions about his head, limbs and body.

His left arm was injured to such an extent that he suffered an atrophy of the muscles and a nerve degeneration and his eyes are seriously and permanently injured, all of which has caused and will cause O'Donnell great mental pain and suffering, it is alleged.

The papers also claim that O'Donnell was confined to the hospital, has spent large sums of money for medical care and attention, and has been deprived of his earnings as an electrical welder and will be permanently deprived of pursuing his business, in which he made large earnings.

The specific act of negligence alleged in the papers set out that the explosion was caused through, the carelessness and negligence of the defendant, its servants, agents and employes in permitting compressed air to flow into and be forced into the tank to an amount and at a greater pressure than the tank could withstand; in that the defendant had caused all of the tubes and stay-rods in the boiler to be removed, thereby greatly weakening the boiler; and failing to warn the plaintiff of the attending danger in attempting to put compressed air into the boiler; and failing to have a safety valve and pressure gauge on the boiler and in testing the boiler by the use of compressed air instead of by other methods.

George K. Crandall of New London, a civil engineer, was the first witness for the plaintiff, explaining plans and photographs.

He was followed by the plaintiff who occupied a long time on the stand.

He is proprietor of the Electric Welder company of New London. He told of having been hired by the superintendent of the plant to do the welding job, and on the day of the accident, he said, he was just getting ready to leave when he heard the explosion. The next thing he knew, he said, was when he woke up in the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospital.

O'Donnell claims that he informed the late superintendent of the plant relative to the pipe line leading to the boiler, and cautioned the superintendent, relative to the defective testing rod.

Other witnesses were Dr. E. O. Winship, Dr. George P. Cheney, James O'Donnell, a brother of the plaintiff, Leroy W. Bliven, Joseph L. Hewitt and Thomas C. Spiers. The last named testified that the usual method of making boiler tests was by water instead of compressed air.

Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve of this city was the first witness called to the stand by the defense in opening its case. He stated that his examination of Mr. O'Donnell Thursday morning which showed O'Donnell has atrophy of certain muscles of the upper arm and his circulation is slow but no difference appears between the two hands in that respect. The forearm is in good shape, the witness said, and he estimated a 50 per cent. loss of use of the upper arm. With proper treatment he thought the arm might be much improved.

Henry Gamber, foreman electrician for the New London Ship & Engine company and water commissioner of the borough of Groton, was the next witness. His testimony over what the board discussed at a meeting about the repairs to the boiler was admitted over the objection of Attorney Keefe. Attorney Burrows was endeavoring to show that Superintendent Jacobus had exceeded his authority or not obeyed instructions given him by the board. Judge Booth ruled against the witness answering a question on what Mr. Jacobus told the witness he told O'Donnell about the stay-rods in the boiler.

George R. Cole, meter reader with the Groton borough water and electric department, told of pouring soapsuds around the weld under directions from Mr. Jacobus by which a leak in the weld was shown. The witness then turned the valve off, he said. A second weld was then made and the witness told of two tests with air made later. Another leak was disclosed and the witness left and did not return till after the accident. The witness testified to a conversation he heard between Jacobus and O'Donnell on the day before the explosion when O'Donnell said he could weld right over the nuts to the stay-rods. There were no stay rods in the boiler at the time of the explosion.

The jury on the case is the following:

Frederick A. Gallup, Norwich; Erva L. Barnes, Charles M. Geisthardt, William W. Service, Preston; Henry S. Parks, Colchester; Joseph Roode, Otto Anderson, Jr., Griswold; William G. Totten, Elmer L. Pults, Lebanon; George A. Miller, Franklin; Clarence Fitch, Lisbon; Mason T. Gray, Voluntown.

COLLEGE GIRLS' CHRISTMAS CAROLS UNDER CANDLELIGHT

Caroling by candlelight under a starry sky, the students and faculty of Connecticut college at New London-on-the-Thames celebrated the eve of Christmas vacation Thursday, in the custom which has become traditional at the college.

The Christmas program, which opened in the gymnasium at 8 p. m., continued, with intervals of rest, until Friday morning's last "Merry Christmas" was exchanged by departing students. Music by the college choir, appropriate readings by President Benjamin T. Marshall, and a Yuletide play, "Why the Chimes Rang," were included in the gymnasium program.

The theme of the play, which depicts a little peasant boy who is visited by the vision of a great cathedral service, is built around the text: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Ann Hellpern, of Hartford, Conn., vice president of the Wig and Candle, the campus dramatic club, coached the players. The scenery, which represented a peasant hut in the woods and, later, the chancel of a cathedral, was painted by the students under the direction of Sarah Emily Brown, of Lexington, Mass. Lighting was arranged by Eleanor Lowman, of Hudson Ohio. Jeannette Bradley, of Springfield, Mass., was property manager. Costuming was in charge of Helen Reynolds, New York city. Roberta Bitgood, of New London, arranged the music. The actors in the play were Edith Cloyes, Lexington, Mass.; Doris Ryder, Oakmont, Penn.; Catherine Greer, Haverford, Penn.; Jean Crawford, Jackson Heights, L. I.; Constance Green, Dayton, Ohio; Elizabeth Gallup, North Adams, Mass.; Dorothy Davenport, Rochester, N. Y.; Barbara Salmon, Washington, D. C.; Truth Willis, North Brookfield, Mass.; Jeannette Booth, Maplewood, N. J.; Marguerite Reiman, Sag Harbor, L. I.; Barbara Chesebre, New London.

Following the play, the audience advanced in orderly lines to the front of the stage, where members of the cast distributed candles, which were lit at one central taper. To the strains of "O Little Town of Bethlehem," the singing audience, bearing the candles symbolic of the Light of the World, proceeded into the open quadrangle where the traditional carol service was held. President Benjamin T. Marshall, Dr. Gerard E. Jensen, and A. B. Lambdin carried the male solo parts in several numbers.

The conclusion of the service did not end the night's singing. After dormitory Christmas parties, at midnight the freshman class serenaded the upper classes. At daybreak, the sophomores waked the sleepers from their few short hours of rest, following merry-making and trunk-packing, to sing to them "Joy to the World," and other glad numbers. By noon the campus will be deserted, as more than 500 girls will be speeding to their homes for the Christmas holidays.

FINDS NO SAGGING IN SCHWARTZ BROS. BUILDING

Following a thorough investigation made at the Main street store of Schwartz Bros., where plate glass windows were broken out Sunday morning, Chief Howard L. Stanton issued a statement Thursday in which he declared that he was satisfied that the breakage of glass had been due to explosions and not to defect in the building.

The statement follows:

Wild rumors are being circulated that the breaking of the windows in Schwartz Bros. store is due to the sagging of the building. I want to assure the Norwich public that there is no vestige of truth in these rumors.

The breaking of the windows was due to gas accumulated in the chimney, due to insufficient draft of air. I consider the building as safe as other old buildings in the city.

HOWARD L. STANTON,
Fire Marshal.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME AT LIONS' WEEKLY MEETING

The Norwich Lions club held its weekly luncheon meeting Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with President William R. Frisbie in the chair. Dr. K. K. Markoff was the song leader and Miss Edith Boynton, a guest, presided at the piano. Max Hanover reported progress on the theatre party plans for the poor children of Norwich.

James L. Case, a guest, congratulated the Lions on their civic activities and expressed the hope that they will continue to aid in the civic betterment of the city. Rudolph Henschel, chairman of the entertainment committee, had arranged a splendid programme for the meeting. Miss Ada Raphael rendered several violin selections, accompanied by Miss Edith Boynton and Earl Styles entertained with tenor solos, accompanied by Miss Boynton. Mr. Styles also gave a demonstration of singing and accompanied himself on the tipple. Miss Boynton also rendered several pleasing piano numbers.

PAY TAXI FARE AND EXPENSES OF COURT

Two local men, John Rembowski and Anthony Marky, who refused to pay a 60 cent taxi fare, were presented in the city court Thursday morning after passing the night in cells. They were ordered to pay the taxi driver, a dollar each and also to pay the court $5 each. The taxi driver, whose name is Rogers, testified that he was sent by the taxi office to Bogue's garage about midnight Wednesday as a call had come in by telephone for a taxi there. Rembowski and Marky got into the cab and Rogers was directed to drive to Cedar street. Near School street the driver was ordered to stop and then followed an argument over the fare which was 50 cents. The argument lasted about three-quarters of an hour and the taxi fare increased during that time to $2. Rembowski claimed he did not order the cab and Marky said he had no money to pay the fares. The two men were arrested after the argument and locked up at police headquarters.

NORWICH TOWN

HUMANE AGENT'S EFFORT TO RESCUE CAT FROM POLE

Frederic H. Wyant, district agent of the Connecticut Humane society, received a call late Thursday afternoon, to come to the home of John Shelley, 46 Spring Garden avenue, to rescue the family cat, which all that day had been perched on a pole about twenty-five feet high evidently having been chased up by dogs. Fearing that the cat might be electrocuted when the current was turned on by the Norwich Gas and Electric Co., a hurry call was sent to N. C. Pierce, who immediately sent Edgar Robsky, night trouble man, to the location. The lights however were turned on before the cat was released from its perilous position. When throwing a searchlight on the cat, it being on the long arm which protrudes from the pole, in its fright it by good luck sought the safe path and walked to the outer end of the arm, thereby escaping the live wires. Climbing the pole, Mr. Robsky secured the animal and dropped it into a blanket held by Agent Wyant and Mr. Shelley.

A tall Christmas tree elaborately decorated is noticeable in the middle show window at the plant of Julian L. Williams, 25 Town street. This replaces the Thanksgiving attraction, a turkey pen, where a prize turkey was featured for a number of days. The decorations in the other show windows arranged for Mr. Williams' fall opening a few weeks ago, remain, harmonizing well with the Christmas tree.

A very interesting meeting of the Norwich Town club of New London county home and farm bureau, was held Thursday from ten o'clock on, at the home of Mrs. Wellington Miner, on Vergason avenue. Mrs. Marion Dakin from Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, gave an instructive demonstration as to preparing supper dishes, etc. Special salads, making use of left-over food, emphasizing the importance of different seasonings and what articles should always be kept on hand by the housewife were featured in Mrs. Dakin's talk, while she was cooking various things.

At noon, the hostess served a tempting dinner to the demonstrator, who was the special guest, the others although bringing a basket luncheon, sharing in the following repast: Meatloaf, escalloped potato, corn-custard, biscuit, pickled pears; tapioca pudding and coffee. Following this, while seated at the table, the secretary, Miss Florence Browning, read the minutes of the last meeting, also for the first time since the Norwich Town club was organized called the roll. Others present were Mrs. James Ringland, Mrs. Ernest Washington, Mrs. Freemont Vergason, Mrs. Arthur Fulton, Mrs. Frank Wheeler, Mrs. William B. Wilcox, Mrs. Herbert Bushnell and little daughter. The company had the pleasure of listening to an after dinner concert over the radio.

WHITE HOUSE WARNING ON THE REDUCTION OF TAXES

President Coolidge Believes House Bill Calling For a Reduction of $290,000,000 is Unwarranted by the Condition of the Treasury—Veto of Heavy Slash is Intimated—Republican Leaders in the Senate Will Attempt to Keep the Cut Within Range of the Administration's Limit of $225,000,000—Senator Simmons, Ranking Democrat of the Finance Committee, Adheres to His Declaration That a $400,000,000 Tax Cut is Feasible.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—(AP)—A warning to congress to apply the brakes to all moves seeking a reduction of taxes in excess of the treasury recommendation was issued today at the white house. It was disclosed that President Coolidge believes the bill as passed last night by the house calling for a reduction yearly of $290,000,000 is unwarranted by the condition of the treasury.

In his opinion the maximum reduction should be $225,000,000 applied as suggested by Secretary Mellon. He is waiting with interest to see the fate of the tax bill in the senate and fully expects that by the time it reaches his desk for approval, the measure will have been brought within what he considers reasonable limits.

Mr. Coolidge's desire to hold tax reduction to $225,000,000 already has rounded up a champion in the senate in Chairman Smoot of the finance committee who announced today that he will make every effort to cut down the figure approved by the house. Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking democrat on the committee declared simultaneously, however, without committing himself to any definite program, that he believes a reduction of $400,000,000 feasible.

Although there was no suggestion at the white house that the president had made up his mind to veto the bill if the reduction is in excess of the treasury figure, or too much out of line with Mr. Mellon's recommendations, it was apparent that some leaders in congress are fearful of such action. Representative Tilson, the republican house leader, who was a white house caller today, was among those who declared they would not be surprised if Mr. Coolidge sent back a bill calling for a reduction of taxes materially above $225,000,000.

The president was represented at the white house as being eager to hold down the total reduction because there is no certainty as to what the future has in store. He believes that it is probable that the country will continue to prosper and that the revenues of the government would thereby be accelerated. On the other hand, he also has taken into consideration the possibility of a business depression in which case the tax income would be greatly reduced.

Inasmuch as treasury estimates fix the surplus for the current fiscal year at $352,000,000 of which $75,000,000 will be non-recurring, he considers that a tax reduction of $225,000,000 is adequate and safe.

In addition Mr. Coolidge feels, congress should take into consideration the fact that there will be large drains on the treasury for flood control, building up of the navy and possibly for the restoration of alien property.

He believes that taxes should be reduced as far as practicable but he considers it unwise for any business, even one which is handling transactions aggregating $4,000,000,000 to operate in such a way as to impair the chances for at least a small surplus.

ALIEN PROPERTY MEASURE TAKEN UP IN THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—(AP)—Its decks clear of the tax bill, the house, which has been in an ambitious mood since the start of the session, lost no time today in taking up the alien property measure. When it adjourned late ni the day for the week-end, much of the time allotted for general debate, had been consumed, and leaders were confident that the bill would be passed and sent to the senate early next week.

Like the revenue bill which was approved last night, the alien property measure is the handiwork of the ways and means committee. Its provisions, in the main, are similar to those in proposal passed by the house in the last session, only to meet a slow death in the filibustering senate. As in the last congress, the bill has the support of both democrats and republicans with no signs of formidable opposition.

Basic fundamentals of the present bill include reciprocal settlement of all claims between the United States and Germany and citizens of each country; ultimate return of all private property seized by the United States during the war and temporary retention of sufficient German property to guarantee payment of American claims against Germany.

These ends are served by two main features of the bill, the first of which provides immediate complete payment in full of larger claims; early payment of half the German claims for half the German claims for ships, patents and radio stations seized; timate payment of all such claims up to an $100,000,000 limit, and immediate return of 80 per cent. of German property held by the alien property custodian.

The second feature provides for a "special deposit account" from which all compensations would be made except those relating to the 80 per cent. return of property. For this, an appropriation would be authorized by congress equalling the awards for the ships patents, and radio stations, of which $5,000,000 would be immediately available. With revenue derived from the 20 per cent. of property retained temporarily, awards of the mixed claims commission and other sources, this would make $138,000,000 available shortly after enactment of the bill.

Chairman Green, of the ways and means, explaining to the house that the measure was a compromise said "while not ideal, the committee thinks the bill represents the best and most just solution of the perplexing problem which these claims present."

BURNS DETECTIVE WAS A RELUCTANT WITNESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—(AP)—A Burns detective, on the stand in the criminal contempt hearings against Harry F. Sinclair, William J. Burns, and four others, was reluctant today to affirm under oath the absolute accuracy of reports he submitted to his superiors on the shadowing of two jurors in the Teapot Dome conspiracy trial.

Martin Stewart of Burns' Philadelphia office, who shadowed Edward J. Kidwell, Jr., and Gardner P. Grenfell, oil jurors, prefaced most of his answers as to whether statements in his reports of the surveillance were correct with remarks that he couldn't recollect or they were accurate so far as he could remember. He even refused to say definitely that his reports identifying Grenfell were true, declaring the man he shadowed was a man he believed to have been the juror.

GANG LEADER AL CAPONE HAS RETURNED TO CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 16—(AP)—"Scarface" Al Capone, prominent Chicago gang leader, returning to Chicago after a visit in Los Angeles, stopped off in Joliet where the state penitentiary is located for a sojourn today.

A reception committee composed of all the policemen in Joliet met Capone at the railroad station, leaving the police station in charge of a newspaper reporter in order to augment the size of the welcoming delegation.

After exchanging pleasantries with his hosts who relieved Mr. Capone and half a dozen of his friends who had motored to Chicago, of their luggage, including six large revolvers, the visitors were escorted to police headquarters and then to the city jail.

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 16—(AP)—Col. Charles R. Forbes, former director of the United States veterans bureau, today related to a federal grand jury here his story of an alleged narcotic traffic at the Leaven worth, Kas., federal penitentiary, where he recently completed a prison term.

Col. Forbes was before the grand jury for several hours. Upon emerging from the court room, he said he had been sworn to secretary and would not have a statement he had promised to newspapermen earlier in the day.

200 STUDENTS DRIVEN FROM SCHOOL BY FIRE

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 16—(AP)—Two hundred students were driven from the Academy of St. Louis and the St. Jean Berchmans pension when fire swept the six-story building tonight. The structure was threatened with total destruction when the flames, driven by a high wind, spread rapidly.

Firemen expressed the belief that all of the students in the institution had been rescued.

WITH CLAIMS OF $260,000 BROKER HAS NO ASSETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(AP)—Mark Temple Dowling, bankrupt real estate broker and member of exclusive clubs in New York and Boston, today testified at a referee's hearing that all his business was conducted by a young woman secretary whose address he did not know.

Dowling said he had no assets to meet creditor's claims of more than $260,000. When the bankruptcy action came last October, he said, his secretary took home all books and records and he had not seen her since. He promised to produce her at the next hearing.

Dowling came to New York from Boston five years ago and was connected with several realty and mortgage corporations here. He never even knew the dues of the Algonquin and Exchange clubs to which he belongs in Boston, he said, explaining that his secretary took care of all such details.

RUM LADEN SCHOONER SEIZED AT NEW HAVEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(AP)—Concentrating on the influx of liquor for the holiday trade here, state police last night boarded a two-masted schooner in the East Haven river and seized liquor valued at between $40,000 and $50,000 and arrested 11 persons, including Ross Mason, of Nova Scotia, captain of the vessel.

The raid surprised landing preparations and 11 ten-gallon kegs of malt whiskey, 33 cases of gin, and several quarts of "private stock" were seized.

The ship's papers indicated that it was the M. E. Hanes, of Port Digby, N. S., equipped with a motor auxiliary. Ross Mason, of Lunenburg, N. S., was named as master; Carlo Jensen, cook; Robert Carlson, engineer; Perleigh Mason, seaman, all of Lunenburg, were named on the crew list. The names given by the crew when arrested were believed by police to be fictitious.

POWER COOPERATION IN NEW ENGLAND NECESSARY

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 16—(AP)—The necessity for cooperation between the New England states with regard to power for manufacturing, was stressed here today by E. G. Buckland, vice president of the New York, New Haven railroad speaking at the ninth quarterly meeting of the New England council. Mr. Buckland declared that there had been a tendency on the part of some states to refuse to let power out and on the part of other states to refuse to let power in. This tendency, he said, had been materially lessened through the efforts of the council.

Mr. Buckland taking as his topic "the New England council—its purposes, activities and accomplishments" sketched the work of the council since its formation, taking up each phase of the work and explaining it in detail.

Anglican Church in State of Confusion

Result of Rejection in the Commons of the Revised Book of Common Prayer.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—(AP)—Seldom has a decision of parliament thrown this great community into such confusion as did the rejection in the house of commons last night of the revised book of common prayer.

Rejection seems to have been a possibility which no one contemplated, in view of the fact that the revised book had been endorsed by the bishops of the church of England and had been approved by the house of lords. Consequently, chaos reigns supreme in church circles and even high dignitaries appear nonplussed as to what their next step will be and are awaiting with great concern the meeting early next week of the archbishops of Canterbury and York to discuss the latest turn of events.

Convocations of the diocese of both Canterbury and York had been fixed and railway vouchers had been issued for attending members who were to formally ratify parliament's expected approval. Now nobody seems to know whether these convocations will even take place, although it is supposed the members will assemble and discuss the present position of the church. Preparations were completed for printing millions of copies of the new prayer book in the coming year and now all this work of printing and binding has suddenly ceased, throwing hundreds of workers out of employment.

The archbishop of Canterbury, primate of England, today issued a statement appealing for patience and charity "in this time of confusion and anxiety."

"Everyone will recognize the gravity of the situation which has arisen with regard to the life, the work and the worship of the church of England," the archbishop's statement read. "The archbishops of Canterbury and York will issue a statement next week, after consultation with other bishops, which may help to guide the clergy and the laity of the church in this time of confusion and anxiety.

"The archbishops feel assured of prayers on their behalf and, pending the issue of such statement, ask that patience and charity be exercised and precipitate words and acts avoided."

It was brought out today that an error had been made in the official tabulation of the vote which was originally announced as 247 to 205. The actual vote was 238 to 205, leaving a majority against the revised book of 33 votes.

Although Premier Baldwin recommended its adoption, the issue was not political and members of rival political parties found themselves on common ground when the vote on this question was taken.

A LOS ANGELES HIGH SCHOOL GIRL KIDNAPED

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 16—(AP)—Spirited away from the playgrounds of the Mount Vernon junior high school here, Marion Parker, 12, daughter of Perry M. Parker, bank official, and her three alleged kidnapers were the objective of a widespread search by hundreds of officers in southern California tonight.

Detectives, possessing a photograph of a suspect, were hot on the trail of their only clew tonight. If the photograph of the man could be identified by those who saw the asserted kidnaping, police said his arrest would follow immediately.

The girl was induced to leave by a man who represented that her father had been injured, school officials said. He was accompanied by another man and a woman, who came to the school grounds in an automobile. Marion was permitted to leave when he repeated his story to Mrs. Mary Holt, the girl's teacher.

Clark was disqualified to hear and determine the matter of the probate of the will of Mr. Capewell.

Other contentions were advanced in the document, all of which were overruled by Judge Clark, who admitted the will to probate.

Committee to Push The Hearst Inquiry

Determined to Prove or Disprove the Authenticity of the Documents Published.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(AP)—A far flung inquiry with the use of the secret service if necessary was promised today by the special senate committee as it determined to go to the bottom of documents published in Hearst papers purporting to show that a $1,215,000 Mexican fund was created for four United States senators.

Accepting the unqualified denials of the four senators named in the documents—Borah, of Idaho, Norris, of Nebraska, Heflin, of Alabama, and La Follette, of Wisconsin,—that they received any of the money, the committee pressed forward today in its efforts to establish the authenticity of the papers.

After another brief hearing it was still confronted with the story of Miguel Avila, American-born son of a Mexican father and Italian mother, that he bought all the documents with money furnished by William Randolph Hearst from clerks in the Mexican archives office in Mexico City and in the Mexican consulate in New York city. No witness was present other than the clerks whose names Avila furnished the committee in confidence.

The committee also has the story of Arturo M. Elias, Mexican consul general in New York, the supposed intermediary in the financial transaction who brands all the documents as forgeries.

Tomorrow the committee, headed by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, will go over the records of the cable and telegraph companies in New York—at the suggestion of Elias—to check the records for the messages supposed to have passed between President Calles of Mexico and his half-brother, Elias, as shown by the documents. Elias has denied that the messages were in the official Mexican code.

Avila was recalled to the stand today by the committee which questioned him further about his assertion that he knew Elias in New Orleans in 1924. Elias testified he never saw or knew Avila but Avila repeated his account of visiting the New Orleans Mexican consulate. He described the office generally.

George Hinman, who formerly was a Hearst correspondent in Mexico City along with John Page, who wrote the articles about the documents for the Hearst papers, told the committee he knew nothing of them. He said he had heard documents were available showing payments to Americans but had been called out of the country before he could go into the matter.

Victor Watson, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, who said he was called in by Mr. Hearst to examine the documents taken from Mexico City, told the committee he suggested that their authenticity be checked by getting the corresponding papers from the files in the New York consulate. He said he suggested having Avila get employment there Avila had testified previously he later gave a clerk in the New York office $3,500 for papers taken from the office of Elias.

"Did it not occur to you?" Chairman Reed asked, "that you were asking Avila to check on his own papers?"

"Yes."

"Then you were asking the same man who got the papers in Mexico to find papers in New York to support them?"

"Yes. We were interested in getting the New York papers."

Watson said he changed positions in the Hearst organization about that time and was unacquainted with later developments in the case.

MORAL TURPITUDE IS CHARGE AGAINST GOV. JOHNSON, OKLA.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 16—(AP)—A charge of moral turpitude against Gov. Henry S. Johnston was unanimously reported out tonight by the house committee investigating his administration with a view to his impeachment.

Announcement of this action was made by Chairman H. Tom Kloht of the committee after an executive session.

The committee, which already has voted six impeachment bills against the governor, heard several witnesses at an open hearing today and some gave testimony concerning the personal conduct of the executive since he was elected to office. Among other things the governor has been charged with general incompetency. The senate, a self-declared court of impeachment, has accepted these charges for trial.

Allegations were made at today's hearing that Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, the governor's confidential secretary, exercised an influence over the governor's office in the matter of making appointments and determining what persons he would receive in conference.

Few things bring greater pleasure than old photographs among old friends. Yet back of these priceless records is a thing we do not often consider when we become sentimental or reminiscent. It is this business of advertising.

Advertising in the early days showed us the possibilities of amateur photography. And the power of advertising so reduced the cost of manufacturing the materials of amateur photography that today there are few people who do not own a camera.

Nowadays advertising is telling us of the possibilities of motion pictures for the amateur. Advertising will bring this, too, within our grasp.

Advertising is news about things. Advertising is a guide to real value. Advertising, through the service it has rendered, has earned for itself its right to be, and its worthiness of our attention. Read The Bulletin's advertising regularly.

GERMANY HAS PAID ABOUT $892,000,000 REPARATIONS

Report Made by S. Parker Gilbert, Agent General For Reparations—Believes Germany Should Be Given a Definite Task to Perform Under Her Own Responsibility—Reiterates Acknowledgment of Germany's Loyal Fulfilment of Her Obligations Under the Dawes Plan—The Payment This Year Approximates $360,000,000.

BERLIN, Dec. 16—(AP)—Until Germany has been given a definite task to perform on her own responsibility, without foreign supervision and without safeguarding measures for the protection of her currency, neither the reparations problem nor its allied issues will finally be solved, is the conclusion with which S. Parker Gilbert, agent-general for reparations, sums up his report for the third annuity year under the Dawes plan.

Optimism mingled with stern warnings is the keynote of the document which again constitutes an exhaustive review of Germany's economic position for the year ending Aug. 31, 1927.

The agent-general reiterates his previous acknowledgment of Germany's loyal fulfillment of her obligations under the Dawes plan, and also gives a renewed emphatic expression to his criticism laid down in his much-discussed memorandum to the German government to Oct. 20, 1927. In this memorandum the growing tendency toward over-expenditure, overborrowing and other budgetary practices which he noted in Germany, was made the subject of criticism which temporarily provoked a storm of resentment in the German press.

"We are still in a testing period and further experience is needed before it will be possible to form the necessary judgments," Mr. Gilbert observed in his review. "But confidence in a general sense is already restored on many sides."

Mr. Gilbert believes that this is one of the principal factors to be relied upon in bringing about a mutually satisfactory settlement when the time for that arrives. He recalls that the authors of the Dawes plan did not indicate when in their opinion such a settlement would become possible in fairness to all concerned.

A significant passage in the report definitely places the priority of reparation payments over service for external loans floated publicly and privately with the exception of the German external loan of 1924.

Whenever the question has arisen, the report states, both the transfer committee and the agent-general have considered it their manifest duty to make full reservation of the legal rights of the creditor power under article 248 of the treaty of Versailles and the provisions of the experts plan.

"Bankers and investors have been left free to make up their own minds as to the investment merits of foreign loans issued by German public authorities or private undertakings in much the same manner as would be done with any other investments," the report declares.

The document adds that as confidence in the security of loans to Germany has remained high, it was to be assumed that she would become a large borrower from the United States and the European countries having funds to lend.

The tariff barriers confronting Germany in her endeavor to find a foreign outlet for her products are the chief difficulty in the way of a substantial increase in German exports, it was stated in the agent-general's report which was inclined to take a hopeful view of the future development of this aspect of German economy.

"If Germany, which preeminently is a converter of raw materials into finished goods continues to find her export relations chiefly with the industrialized countries of Europe rather than with countries which are primarily producers of foodstuffs and raw materials, originality in the development of new products will be necessary in order to overcome the tariffs and intensely competitive conditions which characterize European markets," the report says.

Of the 1,500,000,000 gold marks reparations payment for the third annuity year (approximately $360,000,000) the countries are credited with the following approximate amounts:

	Marks	About
France	767,000,000	$174,000,000
British Empire	307,000,000	75,800,000
Italy	108,000,000	26,880,000
Belgium	97,000,000	23,280,000
Jugoslavia	54,000,000	12,960,000
Rumania	12,500,000	2,900,000
Japan	13,000,000	3,120,000
Portugal	8,000,000	1,920,000
Greece	4,000,000	960,000
Poland	304,000	72,900

The United States shares in the third annuity amounts to about 99,000,000 gold marks, about $23,760,000, of which 19,000,000 marks are brought forward from the second annuity year. The United States government has taken in cash transfers of 55,000,000 marks on account of its priority occupation army costs in arrears under article A-A of the allied finance ministers agreement of Jan. 14, 1925 and a further 3,500,000 marks cash transfer on account of its 2 1-4 per cent share in the annuity.

Substantially the whole remainder of the share due to the United States amounting to slightly more than 40,000,000 gold marks was taken during the year in dollar equivalent under a special agreement with the German government for regular monthly payments on a basis substantially analagous to the financing of deliveries in kind.

Germany's total payments in cash and deliveries in kind for the three years during which the experts plan has now been in operation amounted to 3,720,000,000 marks (about $892,800,000.)

MISS BRADFORD RENOUNCES HER FORMER FIANCE

OTTAWA, Il., Dec. 16—(AP)—For the first time since she was injured by a dynamite explosion in her school near here, Miss Iola Bradford, declared today she would not marry Hiram Reed, who is held in the county jail, charged with the dynamiting. Slowly recovering from her injuries in her home near here the girl, expecting to become a mother, renounced her former fiance and expressed a fear that he still might try to harm her.

Until today, relatives and friends believed her silence regarding Reed was kept because she still loved him and perhaps would do as he had boasted, marry him and save him from prosecution for his attempt to kill her about three weeks ago.

The girl now fears him, she said, and will be afraid to leave her home when she recovers if Reed is released on bonds. "He would do anything," she said. "This assertion that I will not marry him and will testify against him will fire him to anger and he will have no mercy on me if he gets an opportunity to do me harm."

Reed still is in jail, unable to obtain bonds.

GOV. SMITH ORDERS SEWER INVESTIGATION

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(AP)—A state investigation into charges of irregularities in the $16,000,000 sewer construction in the borough of Queens was ordered today by Governor Smith.

He appointed Supreme Court Justice Townsend Scudder as his representative to conduct the inquiry into the charges of waste, fraud, unlawful monopoly and engineering incompetence that have been made against the borough government by Aldermanelect George U. Harvey.

The governor took no action toward removing from office Borough President Maurice E. Connolly, which also was asked in the formal charges filed by Harvey, but instructed Justice Scudder to serve upon Connolly a copy of the charges and give him an opportunity to be heard in his own defense.

The governor's action came just fourteen days after Harvey's first request for an investigation of the Connolly administration, which he charged "makes the old Tweed ring look like amateurs."

DAMAGE BY STORM ALONG SHORE NEAR BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Dec. 16—(AP)—One of the highest tides in years was reported here today as the result of the storm and a strong easterly gale which tied up shipping in Bridgeport harbor and did much damage to summer cottages along the shore. Unusually large waves dashed against the buildings which fringe the shore. The four-masted schooner Fanny Ross and two ocean-going barges scheduled to enter the harbor today were forced to anchor outside when tugs were unable to get beyond the breakwater to tow the boats in. The barometer dropped from 30.04 to 29.06 during the way with a rapidity that was alarming to mariners.

EFFORTS TO PROVE THAT GEORGE REMUS WAS SANE

CINCINNATI, Dec. 16—(AP)—Heading his own defense with a plea of insanity, George Remus fought futilely today to prevent expert testimony that the three major outbursts to which he has given way in the court room since his murder trial started five weeks ago, were nothing more than fits of anger and good acting.

Dr. David L. Wolfstein, first of the three alienists whose report that they had determined Remus was sane October 6, last, when he shot and killed his wife, Imogene, was read to the jury today, was in the witness chair.

Previously he had revealed to the jury three separate confessions by Remus of intent to slay the woman from whom he was estranged and had recounted the details of a long and intimate study of Remus which revealed him to be a man who "behaved like a normal man."

The Remus reactions were perfectly normal, testified the psychiatrist. Remus expressed indignation at the proper moments, showed emotion, and expressed sarcasm, uttered jeers and displayed facial expressions always "appropriate—commensurate with the subject in hand."

JURY DISAGREED IN BANK ROBBERY CASE

HARTFORD, Dec. 16—(AP)—The jury which had been hearing the case against Stuart R. Florian, 24, of Southington, alleged accomplice in a bank robbery there June 22, disagreed after deliberating two hours and 15 minutes in the superior court here late this afternoon. The jury stood 9 to 3 for acquittal.

Florian, petted a chicken wishbone for luck throughout the closing scenes of his trial.

State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn said that he would bring Florian to trial again in the March term of the criminal court.

HILLES BELIEVES THAT COOLIDGE MUST HEED CALL

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 16—(AP)—President Coolidge, despite his statement that he does not choose to run for the office of chief executive again in 1928, must heed the wish of the republican national convention if that body "chooses that he shall run," Charles D. Hilles, vice chairman of the republican national committee, and national committeeman from New York state, told 700 leaders and adherents of the party here tonight.

CARRIED AWAY ON LINER; RETURNED ON PILOT BOAT

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(AP)—Mrs. Patricia Wood, who was carried away on the French liner Paris today while she tarried too long in bidding her fiance goodbye, returned several hours later on a pilot boat.

Mrs. Wood had boarded the ship with a party of friends to bid farewell to Charles Belden, who sailed for France with his mother, Mrs. J. R. Belden. She failed to hear the call for visitors to go ashore, and before she realized it the vessel was in midstream.

C. OF C. SECRETARY DRIVE MEETING WITH GOOD RESPONSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 16—Willimantic showed an earnest desire to have a paid secretary for its chamber of commerce which is to be entirely reorganized, by responding wholeheartedly to the drive being conducted to raise $7,500, the proposed budget for the chamber for next year. About one hundred workers who set forth in opening the campaign today found the public responsive to requests for subscriptions and membership pledges. None of these pledges are holding unless at least $6,000 has been subscribed to when the final returns are made.

The "campaign" office maintained at the Nathan Hale hotel was a busy place today as workers made it their headquarters in using a card system of canvassing. The ten team captains were unusually busy men doing their own canvassing and assisting members of their team. Two prizes are being offered, one for the most subscriptions and the other for the most amount of money received and competition is keen. The decision has not yet been made whether the first prize will be a gold watch or a side of bacon, but whatever it is does not dampen the enthusiasm of the workers who have a higher aim than material remuneration as their goal. The exact amount of subscriptions received today could not be ascertained and will not be made known until the luncheon-meeting Monday noon, but that the drive was going over as a big success was assured by nightfall.

The call for a special town meeting to vote on matters pertaining to the purchase of a building as a site for the trade school here, has been issued for Wednesday evening, December 21st, by the board of selectmen, Ernest P. Chesbro, C. Arthur Keeney and Jeremiah C. Healy. Two matters will be taken up. The first is to determine if the town will authorize the selectmen to purchase a brick building at the corner of Valley and Bank streets known as the Turner silk mill, used more recently by the Goyer company, or some other suitable building, for use as a trade school. The cost of such building is not to exceed $38,000.

The sum of $282 and a large variety of merchandise were received during donation day at the Card Home for the Aged, it was announced today by the committee. The institution was also visited by many friends who brought contributions. The rooms had been decorated in Christmas greens by members of the Kings' Daughters, and the house committee received the visitors. Mrs. Jennie Bradshaw and Mrs. L. A. Larned served fruit punch and wafers. Mrs. Marshall H. Frost, and Miss Nettie Hall were in charge of the table of fancy articles made by the members of the home and Mrs. Edgar E. Bass and Mrs. Clifford E. Williams received the donations.

DR. MASON INJURED IN SKIDDING AUTOMOBILE

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 16—Dr. Louis I. Mason, of this city, medical examiner for Windham county, sustained injuries and members of his party were badly shaken up, when a Buick coach owned by him and operated by his chauffeur, Norman Collins, skidded on glare ice on Clark's hill, South Coventry, about 9:30 o'clock this forenoon, and overturned. The machine was headed for Hartford and was ascending the steep hill when it skidded and after turning around dropped over on its left side, landing against an embankment in a manner that prevented severe shock. In addition to Dr. Mason and his chauffeur, Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Egbert A. Case were in the car. St. Joseph's hospital ambulance was summoned and was rushed to the scene by James J. Lee and Attendant Jeremiah A. McCarthy. Dr. Mason, who appeared to have suffered the worst from the shock was taken to the office of Dr. Kenneth K. Kenney here where an X-ray was taken of his neck. It was found that the neck was wrenched but the injury was not considered serious. Mr. Collins suffered a cut on the hand. The machine was considerably damaged and was hauled to this city.

Joseph Frances, aged 50, of 23 1-2 Jackson Place was arrested by the police this morning after Police Chief Thomas F. Grady had received a complaint from the parents of a young Polish girl that the elderly man had maintained intimate relations with the girl. The complaint was to the effect that the girl, who is under 16 years of age had been hired for ten dollars a week by Frances to act as housekeeper and that twice a week since the latter part of November he had detained the girl at his house after supper and committed rape. Frances spent the day in the lock-up and will be presented before the city court Saturday morning on a charge of rape.

An old Colonial lantern that for more than half a century adorned the entrance to the office of Dr. David C. Card in the old Card block on Main street was presented to the Card Home for the Aged on Pleasant street. The unique gift to the Home which has been named for Dr. Card, is highly prized. The old Card block was torn down this fall to make way for the erection of the new Hall block now in the course of construction. The lantern was found while the excavations on the site were in progress. The ancient lantern was hung in front of the location for a time until seen by an acquaintance of the Card family who asked for the relic.

DANIELSON

TWO SENT TO JAIL ON VAGRANCY CHARGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 16.—A quartet of pounders charged with intoxication and vagrancy were presented in the town court this morning to answer to charges of vagrancy and intoxication. Appearances in the local court on such charges have not been numerous of late, and so attract passing attention. Thomas Ney, a man about 50 and claiming to have no place of residence, was given 180 days in jail for vagrancy and 30 days for intoxication. John Crane of Fall River got a similar sentence. Arthur LaBrie, of Attleboro and John Burgess, claiming Willimantic as his home, faced charges like those on which the other pair went to jail, but they would not plead guilty to vagrancy. After considering the matter, Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill withdrew all charges against the pair on condition that they get out of town, which they agreed to do. All of this group were arrested last night, some by state, some by borough officers.

What has been designated a White Gift service is to be held at the Baptist church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Walter Rawson is in charge of the gift-giving committee arranging the details. Those who attend the service are to bring little gifts wrapped in white paper and suitable for young and old and for invalids. During the service there is to be a story for the children. The gifts are to go to the West End Community house in Boston. It was said this afternoon that there may be baptism at the close of the service.

The December meeting of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., was held Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Eric V. Johnson. Features of the business meeting were the Flag Lesson given by Mrs. Nathaniel Hibbard, chairman of the correct use of the flag committee, the report by Mrs. A. S. Field, chairman on the work of the reservation of historic spots committee, and Mrs. Harry E. Back's report, is chairman of the conservation and thrift committee, on the sending of a box of materials for work in the detention room at Ellis Island, and the sending of a box of clothing to the Blue Ridge Industrial school at Dyke, Greene county, Va.

Two new members were voted into membership in the chapter. Miss Bernice Cogswell, Mrs. L. S. Ingalls and Mrs. A. S. Field were named as a committee to revise the bylaws of the chapter.

The program of the afternoon consisted of Christmas songs, and readings frob The Other Wise Man, by Henry Van Dyke, delightfully rendered by Mrs. Doris Paine Dewhurst of Stonington and Mrs. E. W. Johnson. Ice cream and cake was served. The hostesses were Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Lena C. Tripp, Mrs. C. H. Pike, Mrs. H. W. Chapin, Mrs. George M. Kent and Miss Grace Bacon.

Danielson's Tri-Y group continues its activities during the holiday season. At its meeting this week the members entertained a group of young ladies from Woodstock academy, where it is planned to organize the third Tri-Y group of the county. The local Tri-Y has voted to send $10 as a Christmas gift to the Home for Crippled Children, at Newington. A future event that interests the members is a Christmas party to be held at the home of Alice Ollsen, on December 27.

This week and during the early days of next week there is to be on display in a window at the Eastern Connecticut Power company offices here a display of aprons, bags and novelties made by members of sewing classes of Killingly high school, and of special interest as showing what is being done along these lines at the school. At the present time these classes are engaged in preparing a basket of clothing that is to be given to a needy family as a Christmas gift.

As in other recent years, the American Legion and auxiliary is arranging for a community Christmas tree on Davis park. It is to be put in place the coming week and will be illuminated for the first time on Christmas eve. The Eastern Connecticut Power company will put the tree in place, string it with lights and illuminate them each night until New Year's. Exercises will be held at the tree Christmas eve, when carol singers will also go about the town.

A northeast storm that was becoming a bit vicious toward sunset time today was a means of interference with the plans of those now hurrying with their Christmas shopping. Business men regarded it as a happy circumstance that rain came instead of snow.

Careless driving, for one thing, the storm for another, came close to causing a bad accident at the Franklin street crossing early this evening when a motorist barely escaped being struck by a south-bound freight. An eye witness who reported the incident said he did not get the number of the car, the storm bothering him, too, in this respect. The locomotive whistle was sounded in the usual manned as the train approached the crossing.

Scores of thousands of booster coupons already are in the contains put out to receive them at different points in the business section. The number deposited appears to grow daily as Christmas buying increases.

Officers of Mary A. Livermore tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war are: President, Mrs. Lottie M. James; senior vice-president, Mrs. Mary A. Bedard; junior vice president, Mrs. Frances A. Warren; treasurer, Mrs. Mildred K. Davis; chaplain, Mrs. Grace Lathrop; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Eva E. Shoales; tent council, Mrs. S. Estella Talbot, Miss Saidie E. Fulton, Mrs. Helen F. Young.

After several weeks spent in the south, W. Irving Bullard returned to Danielson today. He is to make another European trip soon after the first of the year.

One of the oldest organizations in town—the Killingly Theft Detecting society has its annual meeting scheduled for the coming week.

A slight rise in temperature this forenoon relieved the danger of an ice storm that was getting underway, but turned to heavy rain.

The annual parish canvass of St. Alban's church, with house to house visitations, is scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Raymond Allen is to have the members of the Ladies' Prayer circle at her home for a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Judge W. Fenner Woodward heard two more personal tax cases in the town court this morning, disposing of them in the usual manner, the persons summoned in paying the tax and officers' fees.

Miss Carrie Fellows will have the members of the Ladies' Reading Circle with her for a meeting Monday at the Old People's home. The members are to exchange little gifts.

A Junior class social was held at the high school building this evening.

It was given out this morning that applications for appointment as night patrol officer were considered by borough officials last evenings when they named Special Officer Hosea E. Greene for the place.

Among other things that may be purchased reasonably cheap in Danielson just now are Christmas trees.

Mrs. A. J. Tillinghast will have the Rev. E. P. Wright, new rector of Trinity church at St. Stephens, New Brunswick, is to be the new minister in charge at St. Philip's Episcopal mission in this city and will assume charge on February 16, 1928. Mr. Wright is a former Connecticut man and was born in Stamford.

Rev. R. D. Hatch, of Brooklyn, Conn., who has been in charge of the church for the past two years will continue with the work until that time.

On Saturday morning from ten to twelve o'clock, Miss Macdonald, of Storrs College, will demonstrate the taking of temperatures, pulse and respiration to the members of the Girl Scouts and of the H clubs at the church parlors of the Thompson Hill church. In the afternoon the girls will rehearse Christmas carols and join the Yeomen of King Arthur at a Christmas tree party in the church.

The many friends of Thomas H. Rawley in this city are pleased to learn of his promotion from that of assistant superintendent of the New London division of the New Haven railroad with headquarters at New London, to a similar one with headquarters at Providence. He will take up his new duties on January 1st. For eight years prior to last January when he was transferred to New London, Mr. Rawley was a resident of Putnam and had his headquarters here.

After January 1, the New London division as a division will cease to exist and the trackage, equipment and facilities will be absorbed by the New Haven Division and the business will be handled by the offices in New Haven.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. James Herron at her home in Newark, New Jersey. Mrs. Herron has been an invalid for a number of years but a helpless one for the past four years. She is a sister of Thomas McBriety, of Pomfret, and for a number of years was a resident of that town.

The Pomfret Nativity play will again be given this year at the Pomfret town hall on Sunday vening. The first performance will be given at 8 o'clock, the second at 9 o'clock and will be repeated at 10 o'clock if requested. This Nativity play has attracted nation-wide attention, magazines and newspapers have described and pictured it extensively and many people have made long journeys to witness this remarkable pantomine.

The pantomine is a portrayal of the Gospel interpretation of the birth of the Christ, showing the scenes of the shepherds, the wise men, the angels appearing, the star in the East and many other instances of the birth of Jesus. Miss Ella Boult and Miss Beatrice Stevens, two well known resident of Pomfret, were the originators of the drama pantomine, and with but few changes in the original setting and cast, it will be produced this year under their direction. The first production of this remarkable drama was given sixteen years ago and during all of that time for the first time was omitted last year. All who care to are invited to attend and there is no charge for admission.

At the seventh of the "friendly evening" meetings to be held Sunday evening at the Second Congregational church, the motion picture "The Goose Hangs High," taken from the play showing the relations of young people and parents, will be shown. The story is placed in an American home

GATHERING CHRISTMAS GREENERY

This isn't the only season when it is done but it is the time of the year when there is an unusual amount of tree and greenery cutting for the holiday ahead. Some apparently do not seem to realize that there is a law against such a practice, that they have no right to go upon another's property and take away just what they please. It is possible that they might obtain permission for the removal of a reasonable amount of such things if the privilege was asked, but they ignore that quite as much as if they considered the owner's consent of no consequence whatever.

Because of a growing disposition to raid the countryside, now that it is facilitated by the use of automobiles, states have enacted laws forbidding such acts and placing a penalty upon it. This is for the protection of the property owner and in some instances a protection for the shrubs and vines, some of which are threatened with extinction if a help-yourself attitude is permitted to prevail.

As a class the land owners in the country are particularly tolerant. In many instances they probably know nothing of what those seeking the greenery have done until they tumble upon evidences of it, but no blame can attach to those who are on the alert for the preservation of their rights and the protection of their property. The person who is found in a particularly attractive piece of laurel cutting it with only a thought as to the pretty decorations it will make, or those pulling up the ground pine or cutting down Christmas trees has no one to blame but himself if he is haled before a justice court and fined for his acts.

He might have gotten permission to do just what he was doing if he had asked. He might have been told that such greenery was being raised for the market by the owner or he might have encountered a flat refusal whether the owner had any use for it or not. But whatever the answer he would have had the satisfaction of knowing that he had shown respect to both the owner and the law, something which the raider too often ignores.

CHECK THE DEAD LETTERS

Are you numbered among those who sent mail matter during the past year which could not be delivered and had to go to the dead letter office?

Either there is a large number of those who do it occasionally, or else there are some who are constantly doing it, or doing it on a large scale when it is done, for there were over 6,500,000 undeliverable letters for the dead letter office employes to wrestle with and either get to the person indicated or back to the sender.

This large number attracts attention because it is even greater than during the previous year, indicating that carelessness is on the increase instead of the wane, and that little was gained from the lessons of previous years.

According to the postmaster general in his annual report the increase in this undeliverable mail matter over the previous year is considered to be due to the increased use of first class postage by direct mail advertisers and their failure to use return request upon their envelopes.

That explanation probably has much to do with the situation, but it is nevertheless apparent that there are too many users of the mail who fail to exercise the needed amount of care in writing plainly and giving correct addresses as well as being negligent concerning the placing of a return address upon the envelope. The dead letter office is maintained at much expense. It is kept busy all the time and is made necessary in a great majority of instances because of the carelessness with which the users of the mail address letters. It means that the postal employe is expected to assume the role of mind reader, or spend much of his time trying to find the person intended.

There are legitimate mistakes and there are instances where a change in address is not known by the person sending a letter, but if letter writers will write plainly the name of the person for whom the letter is intended, place thereon the name of the city together with the street and number, and then affix their own names and addresses in the upper left hand corner of the envelope, there will be a reduction instead of an increase in the business of the dead letter office. Here is a chance for the individual to help in postal efficiency.

THE ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

No one knows what Canada is going to do in regard to a treaty between the dominion and the United States relative to the construction of the proposed lakes-to-ocean waterway in the St. Lawrence. The matter has been hanging fire for a long time. There have been discussions concerning the merits of the plan, there have been conferences by those particularly interested, engineers have given long and careful study to that and other routes and the respective advantages of the different plans have been set forth. It has been urged strongly in this country both by those who are particularly interested and by the administration.

If and when such a development is undertaken the cooperation of Canada will be necessary. The traffic will go for a long distance through Canadian territory and it is known that there is some opposition to the plan, limited though the use of that waterway would be to a part of the year, because of the effect which it is felt it would have upon the port of Montreal.

Nevertheless Canada has much at stake among its people in other parts of the country. They understand the value of such an improvement to them and it is therefore of more than passing interest that the Canadian premier intends to make the seaway a subject for major discussion at the forthcoming session of the house of commons.

Facts and figures which have been amassed by engineers have been placed in the hands of the Canadian government. Upon their receipt steps have been taken to have a conference between the Canadian advisory committee and a sub-committee of the Canadian cabinet for the consideration of this matter. Whether this is preliminary to taking up negotiations with this country relative to a waterway treaty ought to be disclosed before the new year progresses very far. The outcome will therefore be watched with keen interest by the advocates of the seaway, and naturally it will be a matter of increased discussion on both sides of the border.

THE TAX MEASURE

The tax bill which has been voted by the house does not necessarily mean that the $287,000,000 tax cut will be ultimately voted and it doesn't mean that it will not be increased by the senate It is, however, so much in excess of the recommendations of the ways and means committee of the house, and therefore so much greater than the treasury limit, that it furnishes ground for the warning that has been issued by the president.

The senate hasn't indicated its intentions, but the bill as it left the house entirely disregards the warnings that have been issued by the president and by Secretary Mellon against plunging into tax reduction to an extent that is not justified by the estimates. Lest the impression be gained that the president will be satisfied by whatever is presented to him in the way of a tax reduction measure, he has deemed it wise to let it be known before it goes any farther that he meant what he said when he referred to the dangers of exceeding the limit of $226,000,000 in the cutting of taxes. The measure that was presented by the ways and means committee to the house was so little in excess that it probably would have been acceptable but when it is exceeded by about $65,000,000 because of reductions which are not believed justified at this time the president indicates that he intends to have the full responsibility for any such action placed squarely upon the shoulders of those who are responsible for it.

This means that senate will tackle the revenue bill with a full knowledge of where the president stands concerning it. As between good business and recklessness there's no question which should prevail.

A RHODE ISLAND SPY SYSTEM

Protests which are being made against the order issued by a Rhode Island Gas and Electric company to its meter readers and other employes that they should report the presence of stills in any homes which they visit were the natural outcome of such an order.

The idea is that inasmuch as the meter readers visit most all of the homes they have an opportunity to observe the conditions in many of the cellars and have probably become aware of the extent to which intoxicants are being made in one form or another and in violation of the law. Upon such reports as are anticipated the authorities would be expected to act by getting out the necessary search warrants. But that involves an undesirable job for the employe even though it isn't arduous. No one likes to be a snooper, no one wants to be a spy and it is inevitable that it will be looked upon as the invasion of personal rights. Inasmuch as a man's house is looked upon as his castle he is not going to welcome the spying meter reader whether he happens to violate the law or not. That would be a part of such meter reading that would be highly distasteful to all concerned, so much so that if raids followed the reader would find his job so uncomfortable that no one would want it.

And if the meter reader is expected to do such work, how long would it be before it was extended to the coal man, the ice man, the butcher, the baker, the grocer, the plumber and every other individual who visits the homes on business and gets a chance to look into the kitchen, the cellar, the icebox or the back room. Enforcement is to be expected but not by such methods as that.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Books—that is, good books—are treasures of the highest value, although they are not always treated as such. Prof. William Lyon Phelps, the well-known English scholar of Yale, has this to say of borrowed books, presuming that borrowed books are at least readable: "A borrowed book is like a guest in the house; it must be treated with punctiliousness, with a certain considerate formality. You must see that it sustains no damage; it must not suffer while under your roof. You cannot leave it carelessly, you cannot mark it, you cannot turn down the pages, you cannot use it familiarly. And, then, some day, although this is seldom done, you really ought to return it." This while written in a somewhat humorous vein, contains a fact well-known that really good people do not apply the principles of moral law to the uses that are made of borrowed books. They would stand aghast if called thieves, and yet what is it but that very thing?

There is one great danger to which a lover of books is exposed, and that is of becoming a recluse. When you get absorbed in a book that is really worth reading, you don't want to be disturbed by people about you jabbering at the rate of a mile a minute. The human mind is so obstinate that if you try to shut out what these others are talking about you are bound to hear every blooming thing they are saying. At length you quietly seek seclusion where you are not likely to be disturbed. But this act of self-protection is likely to bring in another danger, and that is making a recluse of yourself. This is something that no man can afford to do, valuable as good reading is, the companionship of real friends is more valuable still, and we cannot afford to lose their comradeship. If one wisely conserves his time he can find a place for both friends and books.

As time is of such value to most of us the natural tendency is to step on the accelerator and speed up in our reading. This tendency has both its advantages and disadvantages. Now whether we resemble the old-fashioned stage coach, or the more modern lightning express train in our reading will depend largely on the character of what we read. To go leisurely through a good deal of reading matter is to deliberately assassinate valuable time. More than a hasty glance at many a printed page is giving it unmerited honor. On the other hand there are gems of both prose and poetry, in the literature of all the ages that we may well spend our time upon, because they become a part of our being just as truly as the iromatoms of our blood. We may be pardoned for not giving much attention to the fact that John Smith over in Death valley sprained his ankle to such an extent that he could not milk cows for three days. But when the great poets sing we cannot afford to lose the music.

The above paragraph reminds us somewhat of an automobile. You can drive through the streets with an automobile, and through the pages of a book, like Jehu, and get nowhere, that is, you don't get anywhere very satisfactorially. You can go to the other extreme and plod along at the rate of ten or fifteen miles an hour and that may be even less satisfactory. With reading as with automobile driving one needs to have good judgment as to when and where to speed up and how fast to speed. There are times and places when it is just as dangerous to mope along as it is to speed up. On a crowded highway between large places a slow machine is a great menace. We need to have a certain intuition that is known as the "driving sense," and that is not a million miles removed from sense. If we get to mastering an automobile and also reading, we shall soon learn the rate of speed.

Perhaps a supplemental word is here necessary to be perfectly just in the matter of speed. To speed up both people and things may not be an unmitigated crime in itself. We all might as well realize just as soon as possible that the day of the stage coach is gone, and in all human probability it will never come back again. As far as general use is concerned it is equally true that the bicycle has followed in the wake of the stage coach. We shall probably see them no more only in isolated instances; merely as relics of the past. Their places have been taken by vehicles capable of far greater speed. Roadbeds throughout the country have been made to accommodate this era of more rapid transit, and in so doing have greatly decreased the liability of accident. Who would have thought of riding at the rate of 35 or 40 miles an hour over an old-fashioned New England country road? To prevent danger now requires rapid thought and good judgment.

Is it not a bit strange that there has not been thus far from some religious source or other an outbreak of dogmatism in relation to the severe floods that have been so disastrous? Usually at such times we are informed that it is sure evidence of the end of the world. When such calamities came years ago, sectarian sages were "Johnny on the spot," pointing to the chapter and verse in Isaiah or Daniel in which the event was clearly foretold. If these great writers seemed to be a bit obscure then recourse was had to Ezekiel who helped them out. Has anything occurred in recent years to question the validity of these predictions? One thing is absolutely certain and that is the end has not come yet, and we may reasonably question any knowledge whatever on the part of these writers as to what would happen 3,000 years, more or less, after their day.

Would it not be the very height of presumption for any man today, however great his natural ability, his fine spirituality, or his far-reaching scholarship, to speak dogmatically about any event that might happen, let us say in the year A. D. 5403? Would not one of our modern scholars, acquainted with the latest scientific knowledge of this earth's phenomena and the movements of all the planets of the solar system be in a better position to speak with authority about what is likely to happen in the future and when, than men like Isaiah and others of the Old Testament who knew absolutely nothing of such things. These men seemed to be raised up for a distinctive work, and that was to give us a record of God's historic work in human redemption. Of this work they had a clear vision. They brought out clearly the pathway between the first and the second Adam. Beyond this they made no attempt to go. To make out anything else is to read into the text what is not there.

Suppose we had the power to look into the far-distant future—what then? Would it make us any better? Would it change anybody's course of living: In fact would anybody believe us? Suppose we were inspired with the idea that we knew for sure that one thousand years hence New York public we would be mercilessly ridiwould be destroyed by some great disaster, if such prediction were made cuied. New York would go right on as it is now going. Ministers of all denominations would continue to point out the way of life eternal; doctors would go on curing the ills of the body with probably increasing skill; bootleggers would go right on selling poisoned rum to all fools who will buy it, and alarmists would have the same things to say about young people never being so bad as in the present. There is still some sense in the words. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Sunday Morning Talk

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

Said an eminent man of letters when asked his advice on reading, "The principal matter, after all, is to love and ponder the Book of Books, which outweighs in value the united libraries of the world." And he was right.

But the closer we make our scrutiny the more does our wonder grow. In the Bible you have the oldest war song in the world—the Song of Deborah; some literary pieces which are positively three thousand years old; the highest moral code by which any people was ever actually governed—the Ten Commandments; and unrivaled wealth of ancient customs of marriage, land laws, funerals and coronations. In it you have the only long poem framed entirely upon the proverb style ever written, and declared by many competent critics to be the finest dramatic poem in the world—the Book of Job, the finest elegiac dirge in the whole of literature—the Lamentations of Jeremiah; the richest collection of devotional pieces extant—the Book of Psalms; the most beautiful specimens of Oriental imagery any where to be found—the Book of Isaiah; what Renan has described as the most beautiful book ever written—the Gospel According to Saint Luke; what Dr. Fairbairn declared to be the greatest literary feat ever performed, namely, the presentation of a Supernatural Person in natural surroundings—the Gospel of Saint John; compare the simple reality of John's picture with the vague unrealistics of the Passing of the Third Floor Back, or the movie play, "The Miracle Man," the finest account of a voyage in all the writings of antiquity, and according to President Hadley, of Yale, the most compact and useful statement of pragmatism known to us—the Acts of the Apostles; what Coleridge describes as "the profoundest book in existence"—the Epistle to the Romans, a gallery of characters unmatched in the literature of any people, the story of the greatest human who ever lived—Saint Paul; the greatest thing ever said—"God is love," and the greatest Personality of all history—Jesus of Nazareth.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE MOON ON THE TIDE

Why is the tide?

Half the answer is easy, points out a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society. But most laymen find the other half hard to comprehend.

"It is relatively easy to understand why the moon should tend to pull a tide into existence on the side of the earth directly under it," says the bulletin. "But why at the same time should it appear to push up a tide on the far side of the earth?

Whirling a Child in a Circle.

"The usual explanation of the formation of the bulge on the far side is that just as the moon draws the water nearest it away from the solid part of the earth, so it draws the solid part of the earth away from the water farthest from the moon. But the average layman is likely to rebel at this explanation, since he does not carry in his mind the implications of celestial mechanics that go with it.

"The explanation begins with the fact that the moon does not simply revolve in an orbit around the earth. It also throws the earth to revolving in a little orbit.

"When you playfully grasp a small child by the hands and swing it around in a circle you cannot stand erect and pivot on a single heel. Instead you must lean backward and take tiny steps in a very small circle in order to maintain your balance. The small circle which your feet follow is traced out in the opposite direction to the larger circle traced by the flying feet of the whirling youngster.

Earth "Backs Off" to Whirl Moon.

"The situation with regard to the earth and moon is similar. The force which connects these two whirling globes is just as real as though it depended on a huge steel shaft, several hundred miles in diameter, connecting them. When the earth swings the moon around it, the earth must back off, so to speak, in a little circle (orellipse) of its own.

"What happens is that both bodies revolve around their common center of gravity. Since the earth has a mass so much greater than that of the moon this common center of gravity is not in space between the two globes, but lies inside the earth, along a line connecting the earth and moon centers. It is as though you had a freakish dumbbell made up of a heavy tenpin ball fixed to one end of the connecting shaft, and a small boy's marble fixed to the other. The balancing point would lie inside the big ball. You could find it (or the surface point above it), drive in a tack, and hang the balanced balls up by a string. Now, if you twisted the string the little ball would revolve about the line of the string in a large circle, and at the same time the outer side of the big ball would revolve around the same line in a small circle.

"In the case of the earth and moon, the 'balancing point,' or common center of gravity is about 1,000 miles below the surface of the earth, and about 3,000 miles short of the earth's center.

If There Were No Moon.

"Now imagine, for a moment, that the earth were somehow fixed in space, neither rotating nor revolving, with no moon in the heavens, and with no other forces acting on it but its own gravity. Its water surfaces would tend to form parts of a perfect sphere, no bulges. Now imagine the moon to be placed 239,000 miles away (its present average distance) and also in some way to be fixed in space: no motion to either earth or moon. Further, assume that moon and earth attract each other as they now do. The waters of the earth would bulge up on the side nearest the moon because the moon would pull them to a certain extent away from the rocky part of the (fixed) earth. But there would be no bulge on the far side of the earth.

"Now imagine the earth and moon to start revolving around their common center of gravity once every 27 1-3 days, as at present, but not rotating on their axes. Two fixed bulges would now exist, the one toward the moon would grow less than when the earth was motionless, but would still be held up by the moon's pull.

"But why would the bulge arise on the far side of the earth from the moon?

Earth Always Trying to Desert Moon

"The earth and moon, revolving around their common center of gravity in approximately one month, are striving to fly apart, and to strike out in space on straight paths that would carry them away from each other. They cannot really fly apart because gravitation holds them together, but nonetheless they are constantly trying to fly off.

"Consider now only the earth's tendency. Continually the earth seeks to fly off in a straight line away from the moon, and continually the moon drags it back into the little orbit that has been described. But the water on the side of the earth away from the moon is 4,000 miles farther from the moon than is the center of the earth; and it is free to flow as the solid earth is not. Therefore this remote water is pulled back with a weaker force than the solid earth, and so takes a slightly greater orbit than the solid earth and bulges away from the moon.

"Perhaps this tide-producing force on the side of the earth farthest from the moon can best be understood in terms of an automobile's motion. If an automobile is traveling rapidly in a straight line along a street and suddenly turns a corner, occupants of the back seat will be thrown forcibly to the outer side of the car, away from the center of curvature. Packages will slide across the floor and pile up on the outer side of the car.

Like Skidding Packages in Auto

"Both the automobile and its contents have the tendency to go on in a straight line. When the steering wheel is turned, the car—if it does not skid—responds to a force changing its direction; but the packages and passengers, being free to move about, respond to the changed direction less quickly, and 'pile up' on the outer side. If the car is driven rapidly in a small circle the movable objects and passengers are given a continual urge toward the outer side.

"Now, the earth is being driven constantly in a small circle, so to speak, by the moon. That is, its direction is continually changing from a straight line to a circle. The waters of the oceans are the most freely moving objects on this circularly traveling earth. Consequently, those nearer the outer side of the curved path tend to pile up to form the tide on the side of the earth away from the moon.

Earth Turns Under Tidal Forces

"Now, remembering that our imaginary earth and moon are revolving in space, but not rotating, let us make one more change to bring the situation into accord with the actual facts. Start the earth to rotating on its axis once in 24 hours. The tide producing forces, toward and away from the moon, would continue to operate as before, tending to pull the water into bulges. But those bulges would no longer remain at the same two places on the earth's surface. The earth would turn under the forces. Thus any point on the earth well away from the poles, would be subjected to a tide producing force approximately every half day. The period is slightly greater than half a day, because of the moon's revolution around the earth.

"How the tides actually operate, however, now their theoretical action is altered by the sun, by the shapes and extents of ocean basins and by basins, and by changes in the distance between earth and moon, make another story."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Rt. Rev. Charles M. Beckwith, who today celebrates his silver jubilee as bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Alabama, is 76 years old and a native of Virginia. After receiving his A. B. degree from the University of Georgia in 1873 he went to the Berkeley Divinity school to prepare for a career in the church. For two years he was an assistant professor of mathematics at the University of the South and from 1876 to 1879 he was master of grammar schools at the same institution. Following his ordination he became assistant rector of St. Luke's Cathedral in Atlanta. In 1886 he went to Texas as rector of a church in Houston and that state remained the scene of his labors until his elevation to the bishopric in 1902. Bishop Beckwith is the author of several profound tomes on ecclesiastical subjects.

YOUR HEALTH

What Does Healthy Mean?

By Charles D. Cleghorn, M. D., Miami, Fla., Member Gorgas Memorial

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as part of its Better Health and Longer Life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the memorial, which has been endowed and organized by prominent doctors and laymen throughout the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.)

We are constantly hearing and reading about health. Our friends are apt to discuss their health more than any other topic. We often speak of good health, poor health, lost health, regained health, failing health, and so on. With such attention being paid to this word, Health, wouldn't it be well if we first got a clear understanding of the word's real meaning?

Health, we find, is variously defined in the dictionaries. But in general it can be said to be "the condition of the body when it is free from disease." And how do we define disease, the one and only thing from which we must be free if we are to be healthy? Disease is defined as "any mental, moral, or physical disorder." That definition covers a large territory. It is seen at once that it is no easy task to set before anyone to discover in a community a "healthy" person. Rule out first those who are mentally abnormal, and next those who are physically abnormal, and I believe we will find that we have eliminated nearly all the moral defectives as well, and that the remainder will be mighty small. To be healthy is just to be healthy. There can be no middle ground. There are no degrees of health, for if a person is not "perfectly healthy," as we say, then they are diseased, be it ever so slightly. But, while there are no degrees of health, there are innumerable degrees of sickness. Illness may be transitory and completely cured, and health may be restored, but while disease is present health is absent.

To be healthy means that many separate physical systems must be working smoothly and effectively. Let us mention some of these systems and how they must be kept to be healthy.

The bony skeleton must be well developed for the age of the individual. It must be free from deformities and each bone held in proper relationship to the others. Feet distorted by tight shoes or high heels, ribs compressed, round shoulders, unexpanded chest, curved spine, all these mean an unhealthy condition. Then the muscles. They must be strong, well proportioned, and so exercised as to be capable of quick and vigorous response wherever they may be situated. Then the nervous system must be well-balanced. Can we relax and take proper rest and sleep? Does our blood circulate well and under normal pressure? Can our heart respond to a sudden call for extra exertion and not falter? Is our blood red and strong? Do we keep our lungs well inflated with pure air by deep breathing? And then how about our poor digestive organs? How do we treat them? By overloading with unfit food, improperly prepared, until our stomachs rebel and are finally discouraged and completely worn out? Or do we take irregular and insufficient nourishment so that the needs of our tissues are not supplied? Finally, do we neglect and abuse our kidneys by drinking too little pure water and by overworking them with an excess of those highly seasoned foods and strong drinks which will ultimately wear them out?

Yes, to be healthy every organ in the body, every bone, every nerve, every blood vessel, every muscle, must be well-developed, well-nourished, well-used, and wellrested. And then, like a welltrained and welltreated servant, every one will be ready to respond when the call for action comes, willingly and to the utmost. But neglect, abuse, or overuse will leave our bodies inefficient, diseased and painful, and at last dead.

Health is one of the very few things that money will not buy, and its conservation will pay by far the largest return for the time and care and money spent.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

What Reddy Fox Saw.

The cleverest may sometimes slip
And e'en the boldest sometimes trip
—Old Mother Nature

Reddy Fox knew, just as well as did Farmer Brown's Boy, the perch from which Terror the Goshawk often watched the chickenyard. It was the tip-top of a certain telephone pole, far enough from Farmer Brown's house to be safe from a terrible gun, but near enough to the chickenyard to swoop down and catch a chicken when there should be a chance. Reddy never went along the edge of the Green Forest nearest to that telephone pole without looking over to see if Terror were there. And whenever he saw him, Reddy ground his teeth, for he and Terror were sworn enemies.

"I wonder if he'll kill him," muttered Reddy.

It happened that on this particular morning Reddy was passing along in the Green Forest a short distance from a place where he could look out and see that telephone pole. At first he didn't intend to look. Then curiosity got the better of him. He hadn't seen Terror for several days, and he felt that he just couldn't pass without looking to see if Terror was on that telephone pole. So Reddy turned and trotted out to the edge of the Green Forest. When he reached the place where he usually peeped out he was so startled by what he saw that he walked right out in plain sight

"My gracious!" exclaimed Reddy. "What does all that mean?" He sat and stared with his mouth wide open and his tongue hanging out. Hanging, head down, near the top of that telephone pole was a great broad-winged bird, kicking and flapping and struggling to get free from something which held him securely. Reddy recognized Terror the Goshawk at once.

"I do believe he is caught in a trap!" exclaimed Reddy, who, you know, knows all about traps. "But who would have set a trap on top of a telephone pole?"

Just then Reddy noticed Farmer Brown's Boy running from the direction of the barn. He was heading straight to the telephone pole. Reddy crept back out of sight and watched. Straight to the telephone pole ran Farmer Brown's Boy. In his hand he carried a sack. Up the pole he climbed. Terror the Goshawk redoubled his struggles. Watching his chance, Farmer Brown's Boy got the sack over Terror's head. Then he managed to get the great wings held down and finally he had Terror wholly in the sack, trap and all. Then he came down the pole and started for the barn, carrying Terror with him.

Perhaps you can guess how curious Reddy was at that. His curiosity almost got the better of him. Yes, sir, it almost got the better of him. He did so want to see what was going to happen to Terror. "I wonder if he'll kill him," muttered Reddy. "I wonder if he'll kill him, or if he'll just make a prisoner of him. My, this will be great news to spread through the Green Forest! Yes, sir, this will be great news to spread through the Green Forest. I know a lot of people whom it will make very happy and it will make it easier for some of the rest of us. That fellow spoiled my hunting. He did so he spoiled my hunting! And to think that Terror should be caught in a trap! My, my, my, I must go right home and tell Mrs Reddy about that!"

So, while Terror the Goshawk, helpless for the first time in all his life, lay in the barn of Farmer Brown, wondering what was going to happen to him, Reddy Fox was racing for the Old Pasture to tell Mrs. Reddy the great news.

ATTRACTIVE DISPLAY PLAN IN MEN'S DEPARTMENT

To make shopping easy is the design of an attractive new system that has been put into effect in the men's department at the Porteous & Mitchell store by Frank T. Diggins, manager, and upon which he has received many compliments. All the goods have been arranged in departments in attractive show cases which are electrically lighted, displayed the goods to the best advantage and for the convenience of customers. Two of the departments which lend themselves particularly well to this plan are the hosiery and pajamas. The stock of the former is arranged on tables and in glass enclosed show cases against the wall, having a central section with electric lights. The pajamas are also displayed in an electrically lighted show case over which is a scene showing the origin of the use of pajamas through the habit of wearing them in India. The whole idea is a neat and orderly arrangement that contributes to the convenience and satisfaction of patrons of the department.

ROCHAMBEAU MEMORIAL OF INTEREST IN LEBANON

The Duc de Lauzun's French soldiers camped in Lebanon from December, 1780, to June, 1781, so there is Eastern Connecticut interest in the news from Newport, R. I. that the landing of 6,000 French troops under the command of Lieutenant-General le Comte Rochambeau at Newport in 1780 to aid in the colonial struggle for Independence, will be memorialized there next July. A monument to Rochambeau and his men will be erected by the Newport Historical society.

The French forces arrived at Point Judith several months after the British had evacuated Newport. The people of the community were badly in need of help when the French fleet was sighted and its appearance was greeted with great rejoicing.

As soon as the French landed, Rochambeau set his men to work reestablishing order and giving such civil and medical aid as was needed. He scattered his troops throughout the state, quartering many men in the Providence hills. While the Hussars were at Lebanon, some of the troops were scattered as far south as Norwich, those dying being buried at Norwich Town, in the old cemetery.

Until the following March the French ships were bottled up in the harbor by the British fleet. Rochambeau stayed in Newport until it was apparent that the danger of another British invasion was remote.

He then dissembled his men and made a long journey across Connecticut, taking up the Hussars at Lebanon, to join General Washington on the Hudson. The combined forces, French and American, went on to Yorktown and met General Lafayette. On the following October 19, the British commander, Cornwallis, was decisively defeated and the English hold on the colonies was broken.

Rochambeau was voted the thanks of the nation by congress for his part in the engagement and a memorial was elected in Washington in his honor. He returned to France in 1783 and was appointed governor of Picardy and Artois. He narrowly escaped the guillotine during the French revolution in 1792, but with the advent of Napoleon, he was restored to his rank and estates. He died at Thove, May 19, 1807.

VERMONT FLOOD SUFFERERS SEND THANKS FOR NORWICH CONTRIBUTIONS

Francis T. Diggins, chairman of the Loyal Sons and Daughters of Vermont association of Norwich is in receipt of a letter from a resident of Waterbury, Vt., which will be of interest to all those Norwich people who were contributors of clothing, bedding or money for the Vermont flood sufferers.

The letter follows:

I want to express my thanks to you for the most generous gifts of clothing, bedding and every useful article sent to us since the terrible flood of November 3.

We were badly flooded, or thought that we were, until we saw other flooded homes, and then we knew that for some special reason we were not so badly hurt as most of our friends. As soon as our house was dried out and the mud shoveled out, we came back home and have been fairly comfortable since. We received word from you about boxes coming and we decided that as we had a nice warm home (our best room was turned into a shed anyway for this winter) we would have the boxes opened and the gifts distributed from here. Well, the boxes came and in such large sizes and such quantities of gifts, such generous donations, and so many warm quilts and blankets and warm underclothes, well, the people came and none left without what they needed and some carried clothing to their friends who had lost coat and couldn't go out, and two mothers with small children actually went upstairs and put on clean warm underclothes and shoes and stockings that were sent by your association. You should all be proud and indeed, very happy, if you never again are called upon to do a charitable act in your lives, you will know that you did a wonderfully friendly and most charitable work. We will never forget your kindness and wish that you and your good friends could see the happiness of men and women who came here cold and picked out a good warm coat and in all cases it didn't matter whether fit or style was right, only if it were warm. I must tell you that in a week everything was gone except one man's coat and a few vests. Some of the clothing went to people from Bolton, but most of it was given to people of Waterbury.

Of course you know that other organizations are doing good work here, but most people were a little shy about appealing to them for help, and really were getting along as best they could, which was no way at all.

I wish that I could speak to each one that contributed clothing and bedding and everything, and thank them, but know that you will spread the thanks and good will and sincere appreciation of the people of Waterbury and Bolton, and know that even with a cold, pitiless winter ahead very many are being kept warm and comfortable by your generosity, and as we approach the Christmas season there will be more grateful prayers of thanksgiving offered for those gifts and be happy to do without our usual little luxuries.

We wish you and the good people of the Vermont association of Norwich a most happy Christmas and know that your hearts should glow with happiness that comes to those who do a true Christian act of charity.

Most sincerely,

MRS. ISABEL EAGAN

Waterbury, Vt.

Speaking Friday of the contributions of clothing made by Norwich people, Mr. Diggins said it was remarkable both as to quantity and quality. Over 100 men's overcoats were received, a large number of sheep lined coats, an unusual number of women's fur coats and a great quantity of fine quality underwear and blankets or material that could be used for blankets.

All this was sent by freight on the Central Vermont road as far as Essex Junction and from there transported by motor truck to Waterbury.

MORRILL WON SHOOT OFF MAKING PERFECT SCORE

At the weekly shoot of the Norwich Rifle club at the state armory Wednesday night, Everett Morrill won the prize of 500 feet beam flashlight, making a perfect score on the shootoff to decide tie. Morrill, Stebbins, Kudlik and Pierce were tied with 99 in handicap shoot, Lucia had score of 98, Holms 98, Brend 96, Welsh 96, Karkutt 95, White 95, Robinson 92, A. Brand 91, H. Robbins 87, Parsons 82. Next Wednesday there will be a turkey shoot open to the public as well as club members, offhand with any rifle, iron sights, and if enough pistol or revolver shooters are interested, a pistol shoot for chickens, all at 50 ft. range. Several candidates were initiated into the Order of the Yellow Dogs of America. A round robin letter was sent to Charles B. Palmer, captain of a Block Island fishing fleet, challenging him to a match, with any member of the club, any position, any rifle or pistol, or anything from sling shots to stokes mortars.

At the turkey shoot Dec. 21st, each contestant can pick his own handicap which will put him on an equal footing with any shot there no matter how skillful the other may be, so all have an equal chance. There will be a first prize of turkeys, and possibly a fifth place prize of some other articles of merchandise.

After the shoot, in a pistol match, White shot a 5 shot group with pistol at 50 ft. that would have hit a half dollar every shot. White has shot at Camp Perry with a navy rifle team. The rifle club has a pistol team that would like a match at 50 ft. with pistol team of any other club. Instructions will be given by club members to any member of bank or of police dept. if they wish, on some night other than Wednesday. Dr. Holms is captain of the pistol team and will give full information.

CONNECTICUT LEGION IN MEMBERSHIP CONTEST

The regular meeting of the Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, was held at the post rooms Friday evening with Commander Charles Colt presiding. Reports of officers and committees were read and accepted. Several applications for membership were read and two new members were initiated. Bulletins from state headquarters were read showing the state organization off to a flying start on its 1928 membership campaign. The state of West Virginia has challenged the state of Connecticut and the challenge has been accepted for a membership contest to run to April 6.

The annual department school for post officers will be held on January 7 at the Y. W. C. A., Hartford at 2 p. m. These schools were instituted in 1925 when the first of them was held at Meriden with subsequent schools in 1926 at Bridgeport and 1927 at New Britain. The value of these schools in familiarizing post officers with their duties and in discussing similar problems arising amongst the posts have done much toward unifying the practices of posts officers throughout the state and is undoubtedly one of the things that has made our posts more successful in the past few years. This year the school will be divided into seven groups, commanders, adjutants, finance officers, historians, service and welfare officers, Americanism officers and chaplains.

State Commander Richards issued a call to the legion posts of the state to assist the department of Vermont in the work of flood rehabilitation which the legion is still carrying on there. Funds have already been sent to Commander Lawrence of the Vermont department to be followed by more to be raised among the various posts of the state of Connecticut. As one service man to another the legion appeals again to all ex service men not to let December 31st go by without making application for the adjusted compensation certificate, December 31, 1927 has been designated by Uncle Sam as the last day to file claims for this policy. Not one cent of expense to the applicant.

Rev. Myron E. Genter of this city was elected president of the District Superintendents association of the New England area of the Methodist church when its 26th annual meeting was held in Boston this week.

The programme of the meeting opened with an address upon Latent Talent in the Average Church, which was given by Rev. Mr. Genter. This was followed by a debate upon the question, Resolved: That the bishops should be elected for a limited term, with the possibility of a re-election. On the affirmative were Rev. C. C. P. Miller, Malden and Rev. J. L. Ivey, Worcester. The negative was by Rev. E. A. Dunham, Haverhill and Rev. J. N. Seaver, Tilton, N. H.

Other numbers of the programme were the following: The Pastor, the Key Man in the Benevolences, Rev. E. A. Elliott, Cambridge; book review, Rev. R. L. Roberts, New Bedford; The Price of Success in the Ministry, Rev. R. G. McCann, Bangor, Me.

DUWELL CHRISTMAS PARTY FOR EAST SIDE KIDDIES

Sunday afternoon at the Palace theatre, the Duwell A. A. will, for the third time in as many years, play host at a Christmas party to the kiddies of the East Side. Over five-hundred children and probably as many elders, parents of the children, are expected to fill every seat of the theatre, the third different scene of the affair, secured through the kindness of Manager Fink after it had been found impossible to comfortably accommodate the ever increasing number, at either of the other two halls, the Elks and the Pulaski hall, so generously contributed during the first two years of the party.

Following practically the same plan as that inaugurated two years ago, the Duwell committee has arranged a program of entertainment and of course an official visit from Santa Claus.

The program will be officially opened at 2 o'clock with an address of welcome by Mayor Milo R. Waters, followed by an "Our Gang" comedy, secured especially for the occasion by Manager Fink. The remainder of the program follows:

Music by Palace theatre orchestra; Dancing skit, Miss Lucille Gross and Miss Mary Gallagan; A bit of Scotch, Alex Finlayson; Indian dance; A trip into the land of magic, Prof. Banfield; Comedy skit, Ed Connelly; Music by orchestra; Arrival of Santa Claus; distribution of Christmas packages.

In the past years it has been the custom to have Santa Claus distribute to the children different sorts of presents. This has resulted in some dissension among the children, especially the older ones, and this year, it was thought advisable to treat each child alike. A Christmas package, the size of an average shoe box filled with fruit, candy, nuts and other goodies, will be distributed to every one. This plan, it is expected, will prove more favorable as no will by any chance receive what in their opinion might be a present of less value than the one received by his or her playmates.

Invitation tickets have been distributed to all the children of the Bishop school, and of those residing on the East Side attending other schools. Children under the school age will be presented with tickets upon application at the Duwell club today (Saturday). There is no way to reach these youngsters unless the parents do as requested. For the first time since the party was inaugurated, the children of the county home will also be the guests of the club, as the matron, Miss Gibson, has promised to have the entire body of 71 children on hand for the festivities.

Five hundred seats in the front of the theatre will be reserved for the young ones and it is hoped that the leaders will not attempt to crowd them out of this space, as there will be plenty of room in the rear of the theatre for the parents. So as to avoid any confusion, children will be admitted only upon the display of their invitations at the door.

HUGH CAMPBELL WILL CELEBRATE 85TH BIRTHDAY

Hugh Campbell, druggist at Uncas-on-Thames, where his son, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, is superintendent, will today (Friday) celebrate his 85th birthday. Before coming to the sanatorium he was a resident of Philadelphia, his native city, and was engaged in the drug business since his graduation in 1886 from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy.

Mr. Campbell enjoys the best of health and rarely misses a day at work. He makes daily visits to the wards, especially to the women's infirmary, where he delivers the morning mail, and his cheery smile and kindly word make his coming eagerly anticipated by the patients. His many friends will join in wishing him many more happy birthdays.

It was learned Friday night that Miss Jennie Fellows and Miss Harriet Fellows, formerly of this city and now resident in Washington, had been severely injured there while waiting at a street corner for a trolley car. They were run into by an automobile, sustaining such serious injuries that they had to be taken to a hospital, where they are still patients. Miss Jennie Fellows is employed in the congressional library.

RELIGIOUS STATISTICS SHOWN BY STATE REGISTER

The Connecticut state register for the current year gives the following religious statistics:

Advent Christian church: The number of ministers is given in the register, but nothing is said about the number of churches, nor of worshippers. The number of ministers given for 1927 is thirty-three. Ten years ago there were thirty-eight ministers of this sect. The officers of the corporation consist of a president, A. D. Peck of New Haven; and a secretary and treasurer, George E. Tyler of South Vernon, Mass.

African M. E. Zion church: There are fourteen ministers listed the present year. Last year the number was the same. The bishop lives in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the presiding elder, now in Middletown, Conn. Ten years ago there were twenty-seven ministers in this sect. At that time the presiding elder lived in Cambridge, Mass. The report in the register gives no information as to church buildings or population.

Baptist: There are 155 churches in the state, and 124 settled pastors. There are also forty ministers without pastoral charge, including what are called licentiates. Altogether there are 164 ministers for the 155 Baptist churches in the state, and the denomination has a membership of 27,290, an average of one minister for a fraction, over every 166 worshippers. Last year there was one less church in the state, the number of ministers was the same, but membership was 1,032 more.

In the 1927 register the amount of money raised for home expenses is shown to be $503,356.54. The money so raised as shown in the 1926 register was $480,436.18. The report for 1927 shows $153,676.91, as the sum raised for benevolences. The report for 1926 shows $187,618.65, a sum greater by $3,941. The value of the church property is increasing. In 1927 the church property free of debt is estimated $5,239,794. Such property in 1926 is valued at $4,516,057.85. Taking the number of churches at 155, and the membership at 27,290, there is an average of a fraction more than 176 members to a church.

Catholic Apostolic sect: The name of James McDonough of West Hartford as minister is mentioned in the register for 1927. Ten year ago, two names were given. Besides McDonough of West Hartford, was the name of James Edward Gill, of Hartford.

Congregational church, the original sect of the settlers of Connecticut: The 1927 report shows 321 churches, 416 ministers and 81,657 communicants. In the report for 1926 there were 323 churches, 415 ministers and 79,329 communicants. Therefore two churches have been dropped, although the number of ministers has increased by one, and the communicants by 2,328. Taking the number of churches, 321, and the membership, 81,657, there is an average of 255 persons to a church.

The number of Lutheran worshippers in the state is not given. But the whole number of ministers, including the ministers of congregations formerly called German Lutherans, is thirty-eight. To these should be added fifteen Swedish Lutheran ministers, making a total of fifty-three in the state.

There are two divisions of Methodists in the state, Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant. The latter sect is represented by three or four ministers, with the same number of churches. Of the Methodist Episcopal division, there are 170 ministers, including those without pastoral charge. The total membership numbers 36,229. To this are to be added 3,711 non-residents. The number given for Sunday school is 34,645. Neither the number nor the value of church is given in the state register. These same figures are given in the 1926 register.

There are twenty-three Presbyterian clergymen in the state. Of these eleven are without pastoral charge. Neither the total membership nor the number of churches is reported in the register.

The Protestant Episcopal church is well reported. Rt. Rev. Chauncey B. Brewster, D.D., of Hartford, is bishop, and Rt. Rev. E. Campion Atchison, of Middletown, is bishop coadjutor.

There are 155 parishes and fifty-five missions. The number of clergymen is given as 215 with 53,438 communicants. This gives an average of a trifle less than 250 persons to each clergyman, a little less than 345 to each parish. In the 1926 register, the same number of parishes is reported; the number of missions was then fifty-two instead of fifty-one; but the number of clergymen was only 205 instead of 215 and the number of communicants was 1,308 less.

The Russian-Greek Orthodox have seven clergymen. Neither the number of churches nor of worshippers is given in the report.

There are only two Unitarian ministers in the state. Ten years ago there were four churches and ministers.

The Universalists have fourteen ministers in the state, including five who are without pastoral charge.

The statistics for the Catholic Diocese of Hartford, which embraces the state of Connecticut are given as follows:

Bishops two; Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, D.D., of Hartford, bishop, and Rt. Rev. Maurice F. McAuliffe, D.D., of Hartford, auxiliary bishop.

Clergymen, 489; parishes, 224; missions, 43; religious women, 1,810; church members, 572,500; parochial schools, 96; teachers, 1,000; pupils, 47,780.

ATTACKS STATE MOTOR LAWS AS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The constitutionality of the Connecticut statutes on drunken and reckless driving was attacked Thursday in criminal common pleas court at New Haven by Attorney Franklin Coeller, counsel for Stephen Andrews, convicted last month on both counts. He said he would carry the fight to the supreme court of errors, if necessary.

Attorney Coeller raised four points in which he claims the laws are unconstitutional. None of the points have been decided by a Connecticut court.

It is the contention of the lawyer that both the drunken and reckless driving laws are too vague for a criminal statute. "The statute," he said, "must afford some comprehensible standard or rule or information of what must be done or avoided, to the end that the ordinary member of society may know how to comply with the requirements. Laws which create crimes must be so explicit that men subject to their penalties may know what acts it is their duty to perform and what avoid."

The conviction of a man for reckless driving who has been convicted of drunken driving on the same condition of facts was further attacked on the claim that a conviction for driving while under the influence of liquor implies that the man had not control of his faculties, and to be guilty of reckless driving a motorist must have been cognizant of the right acts and must have wilfully and recklessly disregarded them.

Coeller also hit at the Connecticut dual reckless driving statute. Under the Connecticut law, the prosecuting attorney makes two reckless driving charges, one being explicitly driving in a reckless manner, and the other being driving so as to endanger the life, limb and property of others. No person may be convicted on both of these counts on the same set of facts, and upon a conviction on one count, and other is nolled.

The lawyer contends that if a man is acquitted on one count, or if one count is nolled, it implies and must follow that he is not guilty on the other count, since reckless driving endangers the life, limb and property of others and so endangering the life, limb and property of others is reckless driving.

A trial judge in a lower court has the power to declare a criminal statute unconstitutional, but the instances of so doing are rare. This is partly because, while the state would appeal to the supreme court even in the event of a decision favorable to the state in th high court the accused man could not be re-arrested and punished under the statute.

ROOF ON FIRE BY SPARKS FROM CHIMNEY

Little damage resulted from a fire at 6.10 o'clock Friday morning on the roof of the house at 96 Thames street owned by John Murphy, ex-police chief, of Page's Lane and occupied by several tenants. Squad A, Engine 4 and the deputy chief responded to the telephone call and three gallons of chemical were used to extinguish the blaze. Sparks from the chimney was given as the cause of the fire.

ARMY AND NAVY SEVER FOOTBALL RELATIONS OVER ELIGIBILITY RULE

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP)—The United States Military academy at West Point, through Major General E. B. Winans, superintendent, in effect severed football relations today with the Naval academy at Annapolis, Md.

General Winans took this course, he announced, when Navy insisted on inclusion in the present contract of an additional clause barring from service clashes any players of over three years varsity experience. The head of the Military academy reiterated in his statement today that such a step could not be taken at West Point. Navy already has adopted a three year eligibility rule.

In a letter to General Winans, under a Dec. 3 date, the head of the Naval academy referred to the additional clause requested in the contract covering the football contest next fall and declared that "rejection of the eligibility feature X X X will be considered as rejection of the contract and the Naval academy will consider itself free to schedule another game on Nov. 24, 1928."

In his reply, published today, Major General Winans refused the eligibility clause "for reasons fully covered in previous correspondence between the authorities of the two academies" and returned the contract unsigned. He added that it was the Army conclusion that "authorities of the United States Naval academy wish to be released from the (four year) contract entered into in 1926. I wish to assure you that under the circumstances, the authorities of the Military academy will not oppose your wishes in this respect."

Army objections to the three-year eligibility rule, accepted by the Navy were voiced by General Winans yesterday in a statement which approved recommendations of the West Point advisory council that rules governing eligibility would not be subject to further changes.

General Winans explained then the necessity for all students at the Military academy competing in sports on a basis of equality, declared that the eligibility standard already in effect had brought objections from no other colleges, and pointed out that while Army-Navy contests "traditionally form the most important part of West Point schedules, the main purpose is development of sports throughout the Army."

The statement of the Cadet academy head was made today in response to numerous queries as to "why he had made public a statement regarding the rules governing members of West Point athletic teams yesterday," he said. General Winans explained that "the position of the West Point authorities was clearly defined for the information of the public at this time because it was necessary to take action on the proposal of the superintendent of the Naval academy to enter into a contract for the annual service game on Nov. 24, 1928. This contract normally covers only business details of individual games."

"As will be seen," General Winans continued, "the effect of the proposal of the superintendent of the Naval academy would be to abrogate the main contract unless the three-year rule is at once agreed to and adopted by the Military academy. Since the best interests of the Military academy absolutely forbid the adoption of any such rule, the contract was returned unsigned."

The text of Admiral Nulton's letter of Dec. 3 to General Winans follows:

"The original and true carbon copies of a contract for the proposed Army-Navy football game in 1928 are forwarded herewith. Attention is invited to paragraph 14 relating to eligibility. In June, 1927, the superintendent of the Naval academy adopted the three year eligibility rule for intercollegiate sports in which the Naval academy participates. The superintendent of the Military academy was informed of this decision on June 10, 1927. Rejection of the eligibility feature by the United States Military academy will be considered as rejection of the contract, and the Naval academy will consider itself free to schedule another game on Nov. 24, 1928.

Early action on this contract is requested."

(Signed) L. M. Nulton,
Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy.

Clause No. 14 of the contract was quoted as follows by General Winans:

"It is mutually agreed by the superintendents of the United States Military academy and the United States Naval academy that no contestant shall take part in this game on either team who has had three years experience in intercollegiate football, the three-year rule to apply to all contestants and to include participation in intercollegiate football while at either academy or any other accredited college or university."

After acknowledging receipt of Admiral Nulton's letter, General Winans replied as follows on Dec. 15:

"Because of the inclusion of paragraph 14 relating to eligibility which paragraph I cannot accept for reasons fully covered in previous correspondence between the authorities of the two academies, the contract is returned herewith unsigned.

"In view of the statement in the letter of the superintendent of the U. S. Naval academy that rejection of the eligibility feature by the U. S. Military academy will be considered as rejection of the proposed contract, and that the Naval academy will consider itself free to schedule itself another game on Nov. 24, 1928, I conclude that the authorities of the U. S. Naval academy wish to be released from the contract of October, 1926, under which the two academies mutually agreed to play Army-Navy football games in the years 1927, '28, '29, '30. While I regret that you should feel this to be necessary, I wish to assur you that under the circumstances the authorities of the Military academy will not oppose your wishes in this respect."

(Signed)
Major Genral E. B. Winans,
(Superintendent U. S. Military academy).

The rule allowing only three years of varsity play whether at college before entering the academies or in the service institutions themselves, would bar several famous athletes from West Point teams. Captain Harry Wilson, shining light in Army's 14 to 9 victory this fall, played several years of varsity football at Penn State, and his mates in the backfield, Murrell, Nave, and Keener Cagle all had college experience before entering West Point.

Under the ruling adopted voluntarily, Navy lost such stars as Tod Sloane, end who caught "Whitey" Lloyd's spectacular pass for a touchdown last November, "Bud" Sprague, all-American tackle and captain-elect of the Army, played college football in Texas before coming to West Point.

In their long series of combats, Army has won 15 of the annual football clashes, losing 12 with three games tied. During that time the cadets pushed 325 points over the middle goal while Navy scored 218

OUTLAWS AND BUDDIES CLASH AT "Y" TONIGHT

Tonight at the "Y" gym the Y Outlaws, more commonly known as the Y Seniors open theirs and also the "big-time" season of Norwich basketball in tackling the unbeaten Plainfield Buddies, companion team of the Plainfield Pros. This game is expected to draw a capacity audience for it is an attraction that will stand well up with any of them this season.

The lineups of the clubs to battle tonight read like a list of Who's Who in eastern Connecticut basketball. With the Y are Lambert, Harris, and Conklin in addition to those listed below while although the Plainfield performers are probably not so well known in the city nevertheless their opponents for many years and especially those who have run into them this year and been thrown back will vouch for their greatness.

There are few better pairs of forwards outside of pro basketball in the state than Peterson and Mercier, the Plainfield sharpshooters. These boys have that essential, teamwork, down to the well-known T and they have been stopped but fe wtimes by teams of their own class.

The bleachers at the Y will go up for the first time of the season in anticipation of a large audience. The preliminary will get underway at 8 o'clock.

Probable lineups:

Y Outlaws	Plainfield Buddies
Yerrington, lf	lf, Mercier
Gauthier, rf	rf, Peterson
Pingree, c	c, Cooper
Brown, lg	lg, Arsenal
Eccleston, rg	rg, Bromley

The lineups for the opening game of the Senior Church leaguel bringing together the Brothers of Joseph and First Baptist quintets follow: Brothers of Joseph—Segal, Tigar, Charon and Ogulnick, forwards, Sussman and Ogulnick, center and Swartzburg, Sherry and Sakowitz, guards. First Baptist—Archibald and Evans, forwards, Nelson center and Tucker, Montgomery, Burke and Johnson, guards.

ONLY NINE MERIT LETTERS AT NEW HAMPSHIRE

DURHAM, N. H., Dec. 16—(AP)—"Making" the football team, fall dream of most husky undergraduates, and even achieving a regular varsity berth, means little to the athletic authorities of the University of New Hampshire when time comes to award football letters.

Out of the entire "Wildcat" squad, only nine men, two less than the full quota required on the gridiron at one time, have been granted insignia as rewards of their part in the 1927 New Hampshire pigskin campaign, most disastrous in the sport history of the university, furthermore, William Dane, captain of the squad that tied Colby in its first time out and then lost seven straight games, failed to win a letter although he was a member of the athletic association executive committee that made the awards and president of the Student Athletic association.

"The season just finished was a most peculiar one," the athletic association declared in a statement that admitted itself "in a quandary as to the best manner of awarding letters."

"Inasmuch as there was no first team at any time during the season, but an attempt at selecting a team that would give its best in each individual game, the awards were not based on the amount of participation of respective players in the games. Football ability as indicated by attitude during the season, regard for training rules and football spirit was the basis of awarding the coveted letters."

Captain-elect Lyle Farrell, of Manchester, N. H., headed the letter men. His fellows in the select list are Ralph Regali and John Rogers, both of Everett, Mass.; John Clark and John Shea, of Manchester, N. H.; Sandy Roy, Amesbury, Mass.; Nelson Gaunt, Worcester, Mass.; Frank Sylvia, Middleboro, Mass.; and John Wettergreen, Malden, Mass.

PRESNELL AND RANDELS JOIN ALL-EAST TEAM

OMAHA, Neb. 16.—(AP)—The "All-Eastern" football team which is scheduled to clash with an "All-Western" squad at San Francisco in a charity game December 26, was completed here today when Glenn Presnell and Ray Randels, University of Nebraska players joined the "all-stars."

Stopping for only a few minutes the players hustled out on the platform to face the icy gusts of almost zero weather.

Chet Wynne, coach of the University of Creighton, was there to meet his "baby brother" Elmer. Elmer was fullback on Notre Dame's team this fall and followed in the footsteps of Chet, a Notre Dame All-American.

Herb Joesting, All-American fullback from Minnesota, was joined by his bride of a week who came from Minneapolis on a different train to accompany him on the trip.

Coach Andy Kerr, football coach from Washington and Jefferson stood aside and watched the players warming up in the brisk wind. "Nice bunch of boys" was his only comment.

DIXIE ELEVEN READY TO LEAVE FOR COAST

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 16.—(AP)—From through Dixie tonight, 19 football players representing the senior classes of southern conference schools, assembled here as the first all-star eleven to represent the south. The southerners will play an all-star Pacific coast team in a Christmas day charity game at Los Angeles.

Under the tutorage of Coaches Wallace Wade, Ala., Dan McGurgin of Vanderbilt and Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech, the Dixie team will go through a brief drill on Denny field, Alabama stadium, before they entrain tomorrow for California.

Although without the services of Nash and Shiver, powerful University of Georgia ends who have announced they will not be able to make the trip, the team will lack neither speed and drive on the offense nor power on the defense. Wing men included in the aggregation are Spotts, of Washington and Lee, Crowley of Georgia Tech., and Cresson of Vanderbilt.

Spears, ace of the Vanderbilt backfield, will be counted on to lead the attack of the southerners.

Boxer Goes To Leavenworth.

DETROIT, Dec. 16.—(AP)—Patrick (Patsy) Drouillard, former lightweight champion of Canada and one of the greatest boxers ever developed in the Dominion, left here today for the federad penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to serve a 14-months sentence for violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic act. A quantity of narcotics was found in Drouillard's possession here recently. He resided in Windsor, Ont.

ACADEMY BASKETEERS HAVE STIFF SESSION

Academy basketball workouts are now progressing rapidly. Friday they were at such a stage that a session of floor-work was given the squad.

Physical Instructor Herbert Mebers had charge of the 20 candidates Friday in Coach Whitney's absence and he put them through a 2 hour workout that was a little stiffer than anything previous. Buck LaCroix was present but Les Pingree another regular was not because of a lame leg received in Thursday's drill. The practice opened with members of the squad taking shots at random after which a bit of passing and short drills on pivoting and cutting for the baskets took up most of the afternoon. Some more shots from all angles closed the afternoon and first week's work for the Academy basketeers.

Thursday's practice was devoted largely to work for getting the shooting eye in trim while cutting for the basket also came in for attention.

BASKETBALL BRIEFS

All ready for the Y-Plainfield Buddies game tonight. It officially opens the big-time basketball for the season in Norwich.

Danielson is still losing some tough ones. With Billy Schofield around Thursday they probably would have beaten Nortons of Worcester.

That Taftville Crescents-Danielson game next week should pack them in. These two clubs always furnish some thrills when they meet.

The C. F. C. found the Hartford Central Baptists a little too much once more when they lost in the Insurance City Wednesday. However it was much closer than last year's game between these teams at Hartford.

Stavnitsky, the lanky center of Plainfield Pros showed that he can stand with the best of them in the State league by totaling 9 points from a guard position for Meriden against Bristol the other night. And the same thing goes for other members of the Plainfield club, who right now appear well able to hold their own with the best of them.

The Y Emps are compiling quite a little record. They have taken the Willimantic Emps twice and New London Rotary Y boys once in the three starts.

The new rule in the professional end of the game whereby five fouls eliminates a player from further scrimmaging seems to be speeding up the game. At least, that is the way it is affecting teams in the American league.

Taftville Whirlwinds play Noank Nuggets tonight at Noank. The locals will use Durr and Paradis at forwards, Adams at center and Lanasser and Raymond at guards with E. Adams sub.

Chapman Tech has the Alumni for the opposition next Tuesday.

Crosby of Waterbury suffered quite a setback in losing four players for her game with South Manchester. One of them was the captain.

The idea of a city basketball league in Norwich now seems to have lost its hold. Little talk has been heard of it lately.

The Senior Church league, however, is one loop to get started. Its inaugural comes tonight as a preliminary to the Y-Buddies game.

The Sacred Heart of Taftville and Norwich Town Congregational churchse have added teams to the Junior Church league, bringing the total in this loop to eight teams. The season opens Tuesday at 5 p. m. with the Central Baptist and First Baptist teams performing.

The C. F. C. plays Noank Nuggets at the Y Monday evening and the Y Emps meet the Kappa club of this city in the preliminary.

Any teams in either church leagues wishing practice periods can apply to W. C. McKean, physical director of the Y.

Excluding the Academy fraternity league, which is now in the process of formation there are now 26 teams using the Y gym for basketball.

Offer $12,000 For Hockey Star

OTTAWA, Dec. 16.—(AP)—An offer for $12,000 for "Sailor" Herberts, crack forward of the Boston Bruins, has been refused, President Frank Ahearn of the Ottowa Senators announced today. Ahearn also declined to trade Hector Kilrea, his own star wingman, along with a $4,000 cash consideration for Herberts, he said.

TEN BOUTS ON PASTIME AMATEUR CARD END IN QUICK KNOCKOUTS

Twelve of the wildest slugging matches that have been seen in a Norwich ring brought ten knockouts, six of them in the first round, on the semi-monthly amateur boxing card Friday evening at Olympic hall staged by the Pastime A. C. The slightly less than two hours work of boxers from Westerly, Jewett City, Putnam, Danielson, Lebanon, Colchester, Willimantic and New London in addition to the local favorites produced probably more action than has been seen in any and all previous attempts along this line here.

There were no feature bouts. In every match the boys trod from the dressing room, climbed through the ropes, and slug! slug! slug! and then some for there were no petting parties in that eighteen foot enclosure last night.

Only Two Bouts Go Distance

Only two bouts went the limit and one the extra round. And still these were little below the rest in action, although, the last affair, that between Vic Darr and Kid Switch seemed tame in comparison to what had gone before and for the only time of the evening the fans called for action. However, this bout speeded up after the first round.

It's best to start right with the first bout and ascend in that order.

Sal Comfort of Westerly furnished a real upset by stopping the popular Young Wakely of Danielson in the middle of the second round. Both started slow but it took little time to warm them up and they both started in with their stiff shots to the face and body. Wakeley had the better of the first round, setting the Westerly lad down for a count of one and also having him on the run most of the way although. Comfort covered up his retreat with some hard punches to the head. Comfort went down, mostly from slipping in the second round for a two-count but then got up and went fater Wakely in a busy manner, finally forcing the towel in after two minutes had elapsed. The weights were 117 each.

Loung Lizzio of Westerly had little trouble in beating Young Savage of Norwich although the latter with his hit-and-run tactics was a bit hard to handle for a brief space. After two knockdowns of 9 and 2 the towel came in. Again, only two minutes had passed. The weights were Lizzio 110, Savage 109.

Lary Gets One of The K. O.'s

Boots Lary, the hard punching local bantamweight, got Young Sposato of Westerly in a corner after a little more than a minute and a half n the first ound and the Rhode Island boy fell to be counted out. There was plenty of action while it lasted.

What was advertized as the "feature of the evening" found Young Talbert of Norwich getting a terrific beating from Billy Cavallant of Putnam.

Talbert was floored twice before the towel came in, after a minute of work in the first round. The weights were 150 pounds each. The fighting motorman was left at the switch, as it were.

Young Blum, a pocket edition of Sid Terris, Ruby Goldstein and what have you, came down from Lebanon and got a technical K. O. over Young Jonas of New London after one minute of the second round. The first round was fairly even with both boys mingling some wicked waltops with fancy sparring. The finish came with Jonas helpless in a corner. The weights were 131 pounds each.

Kid Swift of Norwich got a technical K. O. over Kid Kinoski of Jewett City just before the bell in the first round. There was a bit of wrestling about halfway through the thing during which both went down. Swift got up the stronger and pounded away to a win. Kinoski had been down early in the bout, also. The weights were Kinoski, 144, Swift 138.

The first string of knockouts ended with the seventh bout when Young Volinsky, chunky little battler from Colchester won on a real K. O. over Young Broulas of Westerly after a minute's fighting. The Rhode Island boy got a stiff one in the stomach and that finished him.

Benny Fons, a clever blinger from Lebanon won a close decision over Young Wallace of New London. Wallace had the reach but Fons made this up with his clever headwork. It looked like a good draw. Both weighed 117.

Some More K. O.'s

The knockout epidemic broke out againw hen Young Boswick of New London, rallied from a poor start and first knocked Young Koulash, of Jewett City down and then the second time out. About 2 minutes of the first round had elapsed. The weights were Koulash 142 and Boswick 141.

Two lanky boys scintillated in the next bout. Young James of New London won on a K. O. in one minute of the second round over Young Gray of Willimantic. Gray was out on his feet at the bell in the first. It was a slow punching but punishing fight. Both weighed 142.

Young Latso of Norwich staged a sensational comeback after a tough minute in the first round and knocked out Young Carpenter of Willimantic after 1 1-2 minutes of the second round. Latso ran into several stiff punches that puffed his eyes way up but toward the middle of the initial stanza and for the rest of the way he held the reins. The weights were 117.

The final bout went the extra round with Vic Darr of this city getting a close decision over Kid Switch of ewett City. Darr seemed bothered by the left hand he injured a few weeks back, fighting mainly with his right. The weights were Switch 131 and Darr 132.

Danny Doyle was th referee with John J. DeGrange and Herbert Ring judges and Jack Carney timekeeper. Jack Callahan and Tony Murano were the announcers.

Lew Hirsh of New York, was introduced as a leading contender for the world's lightweight title. He handled Fons of the Lebanon team.

There were plenty of lean and lanky boys on the card.

Only 10 bouts were originally scheduled but because of the many K. O.'s two were added.

The announcement of a show at the Lyceum theatre, New London, Jan. 25 was made. Young Peecheni of this city will meet Johnny O'Keefe of Hartford on the card.

There was plenty of comedy intermingled with the fierce battling.

A. A. U. Boxers Warned

Several of the local favorites incuding Frankie Adams, Johnny Kopp, and Young Plante, who expected to appear on the card, were warned by the local A. A. U. commissioner before the bouts that they would be barred from the A. A. U. if they fought on the card. Each of the boxers claimed that they had never received an A. A. U. card from the local commissioner or the board of registration and did not know whether they were really registered or not. They said that they supposed they had been registered when they fought for the Duwell Athletic club last fall but as they received no card they supposed that their registration had not been accepted. Adams, Kopp and Plante did not go on but Vic Darr, another local boxer who had been warned did not consider himself as registered with the A. A. U. because he never received a card so he fought in the last bout of the evening.

Commissioner Donohus at Ringside.

State Boxing Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue was present at the ringside in his official capacity and thoroughly enjoyed the battling. The commissioner said that he had never seen so many knockouts on one card in his life. In speaking of the bouts, Mr. Donohue said that they were exceptionally well conducted and purely amateur, even if they did not have the sanction of the A. A. U.

In speaking of the A. A. U., the commissioner said that the A. A. U. did not control boxing in Connecticut and never had. This was in answer to a question put by some of the boxers who were under the impression that if they boxed at an unsanctioned show they would be classed as professionals. Commissioner Donohue cited several cases where professional seconds and matchmakers were used in amateur bouts in other sections of the state. Mr. Donohue complimented Mr. Quinn on the way the show had been conducted.

Mr. Donohue leaves for Toronto today to attend the Jarvis-Belanger bout on Monday night. The winner of this bout will meet Frankie Genaro.

SPORT SLANTS

By Alan J. Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP)—The Yankees and Giants may have one or two baseball deals in the fire but the evidence of the mid-winter baseball pow-wow just closed emphasizes the fact that none of the other fourteen major league outfits are anxious to do anything that might strengthen either of the powerful New York clubs.

It is significant that the Yankees and Giants are the only clubs that have failed so far to figure in the off-season trading.

The three-day parley here developed some of the briskest activity by the baseball David Harums in years but most of them showed a distinct tendency to avoid anything like negotiations with either John McGraw or Miller Huggins. The mere mention of giving the Yankees anything like a "break" provoked a shudder among at least a half dozen managers.

There is considerable foundation for this apprehension. In the last seven years, the Yankees have collected five and the Giants four pennants out of the total of 14 distributed. The Senators, Cardinals and Pirates have been the only clubs to break up the Metropolitan march.

If Kiki Cuyler doesn't "burn up" the National league in his new Chicago uniform next season, Joe McCarthy, boss of the Cubs, will be sorely disappointed.

Cuyler, Joe holds, gives the Cubs the greatest outfield in the game, with Hack Wilson and Riggs Stephenson to support the fleet ex-Pirate stormcenter. And Joe doesn't except the Ruth-Meusel-Combs combination of the Yankees, Speaker-Goslin-Rice trio of the Senators or the new Detroit combination of Heilman-Fothergill-Rice.

"Look 'em over," McCarthy invited while here. "Stephenson led the league last season in doubles and was inside the 'first five' leading hitters with a mark of .344. Wilson led in home runs and was right behind Paul Waner in runs batted in.

"Cuyler was in the lead in stolen bases until he was injured and then kept out of the game. He will lead the league next year in that department and in most everything else. He's one of the greatest natural players in the game."

Cuyler, it may be vouchsafed, won't bat second in the Cub line-up. It was Kiki's superstition against that spot in the batting order that figured in his being benched by the Pirates. McCarthy intends to put Cuyler third, the outfielder's favorite position.

Jimmy Hamilton now manager of Nashville in the Southern association had Cuyler on his club in 1922 when he won the South Atlantic association pennant for Charleston, S. C., when he moved to Nashville he took Cuyler with him.

"This superstition of not being able to hit second is not new with Cuyler, said Hamilton when he was in New York during the baseball meetings.

"He told me at Charleston that he could not hit in second place and I said 'well, if you can't hit second, you can hit third' ".

N. Y. COMMISSION IS RATHER CAGEY WITH ADVICE

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP)—The New York State athletic commission was in a negative mood today, as boxers, promotors, and even another state boxing commission applied for advice and assistance.

The solons waved the plea of Charles Cardio, manager of Red Chapman, Boston featherweight, for help in collecting th eforfeit Red posted with Promoter Humbert Fugazy for a match with Honeyboy Finnegan. A fellow townsman, last summer, Chapman, who failed to go through with the match, was told to seek aid elsewhere.

The request of the Illinois Boxing commission for assistance in labelling Stecher and Strangler Lewis a heavyweight championship affair was turned down with the notation that New York recognizes no titleholder among the limb twisters.

NAVY HAS NO PUBLIC STATEMENT TO MAKE

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 16. —(AP)—In the absence of Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton, superintendent of the Naval academy, navy athletic authorities said tonight that no public statement, regarding the reported football break with West Point, would be made.

The opinion was expressed that Admiral Nulton would not answer Major General E. B. Winans, superintendent of the military academy in connection with severance of football relationship between the two schools, until an official communication had been received from West Point authorities

To date no official word has reached the Naval academy, regarding the reported break, navy authorities said, and until it does Admiral Nulton would not comment on the matter

MORGAN WINS ON FOUL FROM GLICK AND SCHWARTZ OUTPOINTS BROWN

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(AP)—Smashed to the canvass three times for long counts, groggy and bleeding from cuts in his eye, nose and lips, Tod Morgan, game little junior lightweight champion from Seattle, Wash., stuck to his guns tonight to save his title on a foul in the fourteenth round from Joe Glick, vicious body puncher from Brooklyn.

Glick was disqualified when a right smashed into Morgan's groin after two minutes and nine seconds of fighting in the 14th, next to the last round. Up to that time the Brooklyn challenger had been warned for almost every conceivable form of foul—low punching, hitting after the break in clinches, punching after the bell, and back-handing.

Morgan went down for a count of nine in the second round when Glick lashed him suddenly with a right uppercut to the stomach. Morgan claimed foul, 15,000 fans in the arena yelled in support of his claim, but the bout continued. Twice in the fifth session, the champion crashed to the floor, the first time from a left hook to the body, the second from another right that soomed into the stomach. Morgan came up at eight after the first blow and although the bell rang at the count of eight on the second knockdown, Glick continued to punch the champion lustily until hauled away by the referee.

Reeling about the ring drunk from punches, his face twisted as if in pain, Morgan pulled himself together to go down like a champion, with colors flying. Through four rounds, Glick hammered him about the ring, never able to put him on the floor, until blood streamed from cuts in Tod's lips, a gash over his left eye was streaming, and his nose just a crimson smear.

Morgan blindly forced the fighting dove forward into terrific body punishment and in as courageous a stand as the huge garden ever saw, finally turned the fighting in his favor. In the ninth, tenth and eleventh rounds, Tod battled like a stricken animal, drove Glick finally to cover, and forced the challeng.. to hang on.

The furious battling furnished the strange spectacle of a home product whipping a champion apparently beyond chance of loss yet the crowd cheering every move on the fading titleholder, roaring him on to gamer stands, and finally standing for ten minutes to rock the building with cheers when Glick was disqualified for a palpably low punch in the 14th round. The Brooklyn boy was groggy himself at the close of the 13th session and glad to hold on as Morgan's bitter head punching pinned him nearly helpless, on the ropes.

The bout was the second meeting between the pair since Morgan won the title over three years ago from Mike Ballerino.

Last December Tod belted Glick in good measure to retain the crown in a fifteen round go.

In the semi-final, also fifteen rounds Corporal Izzy Schwartz, phantom of the army, outscored Newsboy Brown, of Sioux City, Iowa, throughout to win recognition in New York as the holder of the flyweight championship, vacated recently by Fidel Labarba.

The tiny soldier fought his huskier rival to a standstill to gain the throne left vacant here by abdication of Fidel Labarba, California college student. Brown forced the fighting throughout but was rarely able to evade the short uppercuts Schwartz snapped inside to his chin.

Although there were no knockdowns, these uppercuts several times sent Brown reeling. The newsboy refused to retreat, however, and several times shook up Schwartz with short jolts to the head and ribs. Izzy was bleeding freely from the ear and left eye at the close.

Benny Schwartz, Baltimore bantamweight, outpointed Johnny Erickson, of New York, in ten rounds. Schwartz weighed 117; Erickson 116.

Marty Gallagher, Washington heavyweight, scored a technical knockout over Pete Hackett, of New York, in the second round of a four round preliminary.

WESTERLY

FIRE STATION TOTAL COST IS REDUCED TO $86,474

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 6.—When the committee of the Westerly Fire District on the building of a new central fire station on Union street adjourned this morning at 12:15, they had voted to follow the recommendation of the successful bidder, Thomas H. Morrison and on fifteen items had reduced the construction cost $1796. This left the total amount of the contract signed by Contractor Morrison and the members of the committee $86,474. The contract will be reviewed by Attorney John J. Dunn for the Westerly Fire District before its final acceptance. Thursday the large steam shovel was put in commission near the Union street site, in readiness to begin operations there.

FINED $100 AND COSTS BOOTLEGGER TAKES APPEAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 16.—Associate Justice Charles A. Walsh came into court at 11:25 o'clock today when the only ones present besides the court clerk and stenographer were two deputy sheriffs, two lawyers and two reporters. Attorney George R. McKenna requested and court ordered that the action at law, John P. Murphy vs. Flora C. Mooney, in which he represented the plaintiff be set down as the first case for trial on the Westerly calendar of February term. Adjournment was announced by Sheriff Edwards at 11:30.

Judge Oliver H. Williams held an all-day session of the district court.

A case for automobile law violation was brought by Corporal James E. Norman of the R. I. state police against Clary V. Palmer, of Charlestown, R. I., a member of the Coast Guard, on the complaint that he suffered an auto to be operated Dec. 5th on the Boston Post road which had not been registered. Palmer stated that he had been directed by the captain of his station to go for mail. Inasmuch as the captain is to go to Block Island for a Christmas furlough, Judge Williams directed Palmer to have his captain see him Saturday and continued the case to next Friday.

Trial calendar—State, Thomas E. Brown vs. Richard Smith, 18, of Stonington. Aplea of guilty was entered by the defendant on a charge of operating an automobile on Canal street, Dec. 10th, without securing a license. The complaint was the result of an automobile accident at Varietyville. Smith stated that he took a short joy ride in an automobile belonging to a friend. He was fined $25 and costs.

Oscar L. Heltzen, of Providence, assistant attorney general, appeared in court in prosecution of the case for possession of intoxicating liquors against James Nicosia, brought by Corporal Norman of the Rhode Island state police. George Hilman of Shannock, testified to the purchase of whiskey, analysis of which by State Essayer Fenner, showed alcoholic volume of 43.65. Nicosia was fined $100 and costs. Notice of an appeal was given to the superior court and surety was continued. There being no appearance for liquors and vessels seized in the raid, Judge Williams issued a warrant for their forfeiture and destruction.

Charles Turano, charged with reckless driving of a Chevrolet truck Wednesday morning, at the Junction of High and Pleasant streets, pleaded not guilty.

Jesse Gouvera, of East Providence, driver of the Pierce-Arrow truck, testified that he pulled to the left to avoid being hit by the defendant, who was operating his auto at a high speed, and the latter crashed into the tool box on the side of the truck. Andrew S. Grant, janitor of High street grammar school, testified to seeing the Chevrolet car driven with such speed that it pushed the larger truck at the time of collision. A witness of the collision was Wesley L. Whipple. Police Officer Robert M. Keesel, investigator, testified to measurements and Engineer Merton L. Lewis, Jr., to making plans. The defendant on the stand gave evidence that he was not going more than fifteen miles per hour on his way towards Ashaway and that a washing machine not fastened in his truck was not thrown out.

Judge Williams declared the defendant guilty of gross violation of auto traffic law on this dangerous curve and fined him $50 and costs. Attorney Roche gave notice of an appeal, and the bondsman was continued in the same amount.

Other court business was disposed of as follows: Albert A. O'Brien, of Providence, twice called for the morning court session and failing to appear came into the afternoon session and later changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. He was accused of crossing traffic lines at the junction of Elm and School streets, as the result of which other cars were forced on the curb line to prevent accident as he cut out from behind another auto stopped for the semaphore beacon just as it turned green. He was fined $2 and costs.

The assault case with a dangerous weapon, brought by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown against Demetrio Servidio, was called and Solicitor Ferguson informed the court that defendan'ts attorney, M. Walter Flynn, was unable to be present. A continuance of two weeks was granted.

Civil Docket—Cornelius H. Conway vs. Thomas Euell, continued two weeks; Luippold Mineral Waters Co., Inc., vs. Beppo Boumenot, continued two weks; Granite Street Garage vs. Antonio Fiore, continued one week for trial; LeRoy Sherman vs. A. NOANK

The new fishing boat at the shipyard is coming along well and it looks as though the owner in New York will have to come across with two boxes of cigars, for he said if the boat was overboard in three months he would treat the workers all. But if it was not in the water at that time, Foreman Charles Butson must get his boss a box of cigars. The boat is all planked, the work is beng rushed and a sign in the joiner shop reads "Work hard, shipyard and let's set a record."

That will make them sit up and take notice. Expert Engine Setter Almond Meister is getting ready to put the new engines in place. This shipyard always used to have boats launched on time, but all the working men want this boat to break all records since the yard was opened 40 years ago.

The fire engine was sent for Wednesday morning to help pump out the school cellar which was filled with water from the damaged pipe. The janitor had to put on rubber boots to tend the heaters and the water was up to the ash pit. So Engineer Earl Foster got the fire engine going and for over an hour pumped a heavy stream of water. A force of men is working on the drain. However, an electric pump and hand pump could not keep water from the cellar until that drain is fixed While the engine was working drills were held in several rooms of the building and recess was omitted. Many thought a fire had broken out when the engine was ringing the bell on East Main street. A trench several feet down in front of Mrs. Abbie Fish's on East Main street was dug where the pipe was damaged.

The weather has been with the men so the pipe can be fixed, otherwise if it got cold it might be necessary to close the school.

He was some proud to bring home a record breaking prize. He also had in his hunting coat nine more birds, making a good day's bunting.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange, No. 172, had a meeting of special interest Wednesday evening in Steiner hall with Worthy Master Ralph Marsh presiding at the business session at which a gift of $100 towards the building fund was received from the grange auxiliary of which Mrs. Alida Boyens is president.

It was announced that the next meeting this month is to begin at 7:30 as it is the Christmas party for the children, which is in charge of Miss Howie. Mrs. Bode, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. E. Peckham are to be in charge of the tree, which will be furnished by Albert Avery and John M. Swahn is to care for the music.

The programme at the grange meeting was in charge of Mrs. Ida E. Richardson, chairman of the home economics committee, and opened with the grange song. This was followed by a talk by Mrs. B. H. Robynson of the county farm bureau, whose subject was "The Way to a Man's Heart Is Through His Stomach." She described the nutritive values in food, the necessity for different foods for different ages, and different members of the family, spoke of the harm done by hurried breakfasts and gave some of the ideal combinations for a well balanced meal.

This was followed by a recitation, A Little Bug Will Get You If You Don't Look Out, by Miss Beulah Rogers, and a solo, The Second Minuet, by Mrs. Helena M. T. Church, who gave for an encore "Aint Just Nuthin'."

An interesting demonstration of setting a table and of table etiquette was given by Rose Norcross and Ethel Main, two 4-H club members, and was followed by a burlesque demonstration of dressmaking in which five men were the dressmakers and five women members of the grange served as models. The men were given two newspapers and a supply of pins apiece from which to fashion the dresses. Those taking part were Lee Coles and Mrs. Woods, Leonard Staubley and Mrs. Bode, Ralph Marsh and Mrs. Sylvia, Charles Ellis and Mrs. Lillibridge, Thurston Lillibridge and Mrs. Spencer. The prize award was made to Mr. Coles with his partner Mrs. Woods.

At the close of the meeting the feast committee served salmon wiggle and coffee.

A count taken on the attendance of grange meetings during the year shows the high average of 98, the total having been 2,270.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

As an expression of sympathy and respect to the most faithful and beloved president of Mercier assembly, Miss Lucy Marsh, who was recently bereaved in the loss of her mother, plans by the committee for the singing of Christmas carols in the rooms next Tuesday evening have been cancelled and, let it be noted, that any and all other social features planned for this meeting will likewise be suspended at this time in respect to the esteemed leader.

The meeting will be one of a business nature only with a report and final appeal from Miss Mary Weller, chairman of the Christmas committee. Each year this work becomes more extensive and with the great demand on the funds of the committee which buys clothing, goodies and provides Christmas cheer in many ways for needy families and children, it is necessary that every and every member do her bit. Response, generous and whole-hearted, is looked forward to by Miss Weller when she makes her last appeal for a modest sum from the members who have not already responded.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS

Only six men of the thousands who volunteered for service under the American flag in the war against Mexico in 1846 are still living today. Records at national headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars reveal that these veterans, all members of the V. F. W., range in ages from 95 to 99.

William F. Buckner, of Paris, Missouri, at the age of 99, has the distinction of being the oldest living veteran to see service on foreign soil, in the United States. He was a member of Co. A., First Missouri Mounted Volunteers, after he left home at the age of nineteen in response to a call for volunteers.

Buckner, and his five comrades, are still spry and able to reminisce despite their advanced years. The Missouri patriarch is able to recall vividly adventures with America's "first A. E. F" and enjoys mingling with the younger comrades of the Spanish-American war and the latest conflict within the V. F. W.

ODD FELLOWS

MYSTIC

The Mystic-Noank library, the gift of the late Elihu Spicer on Library street, is one of the attractions of the village. It is surrounded by trees with ample grounds and is an architectural gem. It is built of the best materials and the upper floor has the library, which has been changed in management a little, for several weeks, Miss Fuller, an expert librarian, has been engaged in making a new catalog of the books. The beautiful assembly hall is now opened for lectures and meetings; until its formal opening most of the people in Mystic never saw it. The Monday club, composed of about 25 members, invited the public to inspect the library Thursday afternoon from 3 to 6 and served tea. About ninety availed themselves of the opportunity. Visitors were present from Groton, Noank and Pequonnoc.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the Caledonian society held a highly successful dramatic entertainment in Breed hall. The same week a Greeneville young woman was burned to death and a brakeman was killed here when a train backed as he was uncoupling cars. Extracts from the files of The Bulletin of December, 1877, follow:

Monday, Dec. 10, 1877—Doyle's new block on Main street, a short distance above the post office, was opened to the public inspection Saturday morning. The block is to be largely occupied by the firm of Doyle & Hourigan.

The committee recently appointed to solicit aid in behalf of the Provident association will begin their labors systematically today and it is to be hoped that a liberal response will be made to the call of this worthy organization, which has labored so faithfully in the past to mitigate the suffering of the poor in the city.

The "We Girls" club at Norwich Town has not got an exclusive patent on its delightful name, as might have been supposed, and its namesake has appeared in Greeneville as a missionary society. The latter association met last week with Mrs. James Lindsay, and besides having a pleasant time added a large number of names to its membership.

Tuesday, Dec. 11, 1877—The Central Methodist church was crowded last evening to hear Mrs. Malloy. She spoke on the financial and political relations of the liquor business. It was voted to have her speak again on these points at some future time.

Iron gratings were erected at the windows of the lodging room at the police station yesterday, to prevent the escape of tramps, as it has become quite the fashion for these gentlemen after enjoying a night's rest to gain their liberty through a window and thus avoid the several hours' work that otherwise would be exacted from them.

Arrangements have been completed so that all from neighboring towns who attend the county Sunday school institute tomorrow may be sure that they will be hospitably entertained. It is the hope of those having the preparations for the meetings in charge that the number present may be large.

Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1977—About 12.30 this morning, as one Palmer, a brakeman on the 11 o'clock freight train, went down to pull a coupling pin, the train backed up, he lost his footing and fell under the wheels of the cars. He was horribly mangled and his death was instantaneous. He was about 19 years of age and a son of Nathan Palmer of New London.

Elder James L. Smith, who went to Heathsville, Va., recently, distributed the articles entrusted to him, to the people of that vicinity. They were received with immense gratitude and Elder comes back burdened with the most thankful acknowledgments and the kindest remembrances. He reports a marked improvement in the condition of the colored people of Heathsville, since his last visit there two years ago. They are buying themselves homes and settling down to habits of industry and thrift. The schools are in a flourishing condition and exerting a decidedly enlightening and civilizing influence upon the people.

Thursday, Dec. 13, 1877—The store of Fuller and Parish on Water street, was entered Tuesday night by thieves, who appear to have been frightened away before they had secured any articles of value.

A broken window pane was removed at the store of Rawson & Whipple and some cartridges and knives, that could be reached, were extracted. It is presumed that both operations are the work of the same party.

A sadly fatal accident occurred yesterday forenoon in the house partially occupied by Kelly Bros. store on the Greeneville road. As a young woman named Hannah Connelly, upwards of 20 years of age, was engaged in work about a cook stove in the apartments in which her parents live on the third floor, her dress in some way caught fire and before help could reach the afrighted girl, her flesh was so severely burned that her recovery is pronounced impossible by the physicians.

Friday, Dec. 14, 1877—The Caledonian Entertainment—The dramatical entertainment of this enterprising society at Breed hall last evening was a flattering success. The musical drama of Guy Mannering, or, the Gipsey's Prophecy, and the beautiful, as well as humorous Scotch play, Cramond Brig, were well put upon the stage and drew forth storms of applause from a good-sized audience.

The breaking of a belt, which a man named Walsh, was adjusting at the Falls mills yesterday, resulted in a very painful wound in his face.

The family of Charles A. Converse spend this winter in New York city leaving for the metropolis this week. They will be greatly missed. The genial colonel, we are glad to learn, will be absent only two or three weeks.

Saturday, Dec. 15, 1877—Retail prices remain about the same as our figures of the middle of last month. The best butter, however, as retailed by leading grocers, is put at 34 cents; potatoes sell for 75 and 80 cents a bushel, chicken 20 cents, turkeys 22 cents, porterhouse and sirloin steaks 20 cents, roasts 23 cents, sausage 12 cents.

POETRY

Johnny's Christmas

Well, I've bought all my presents;
Now I have to wrap and tie
Gee, it took a lot of money
All these fine gifts to buy.
But I am glad I got them,
For I really do believe
It is far more satisfactory
To give, than to receive.

Now Mother's going to give me
A bright silk yellow tie,
For me to wear to Sunday School,
And I think it's fine, but my!
I've got her a dandy present—
Boxing gloves! For I believe
It is far more satisfactory
To give, than to receive.

Dad's bought me an encyclopedia
To teach me many things,
But look what I bought him—O, boy!
An airship that moves its wings,
He'll have lots of fun a-sailing it—
O, yes! I do believe
It is far more satisfactory
To give, than to receive.

I crept in Sister's room and found
A box of writing paper there
With my name upon it,
So I thought it would be fair
To give her this dandy pocket knife
With three blades, for I believe
It is far more satisfactory
To give, than to receive.

Now all my gifts are ready,
And I'm sure there's going to —
A very happy family
Around our Christmas tree.
We'll have fun with our presents,
For I really do believe
It is far more satisfactory
To give, than to receive.
—Olive F. Wolley Burt, in Normal Instructor.

Rain

Sharp drives the rain, sharp drives the endless rain.
The rain-winds wake and wander, lift and blow,
The slow smoke-wreaths of vapor to and fro
Weave, and unweave, and gather and build again.
Over the far gray reaches of the plain,—
Gray miles on miles my passionate thought must go—
I strain my sight, grown dim with gazing so,
Pressing my face against the streaming pane.

How the rain beats! Ah, God, if love had power
To voice its utmost yearning, even tho'
Thro' time and bitter distance, not in vain,
Surely Her Heart would hear me at this hour,
Look thro' the years, and see! But would She know
The white face pressed against the streaming pane?
—By Charles G. D. Roberts.

KALEIDOSCOPE

A tiny toy balloon made a 300-mile air "hop" in three days. The craft took the air one Saturday night according to its owner, O. C. Inman, of Nashville, Tenn. Inman tied a slip of paper to the balloon asking the finder to write to him. After a week had gone by Inman received a letter from Hubert Mitchell, of Lavonia, Ga., 300 miles away. It read: "I found a balloon about one mile out of Lavonia one afternoon with your address on it. It had a small hole in the bottom and looked as if it had been melted by heat. It came down at sundown in a pasture."

The Spanish government recently promulgated a decree which contains provisions for the control by the state of all operations appertaining to Spain's coal mining industry. To those companies which register under the new plan the government will afford assistance by granting advances for the purchase of equipment and will accord special privileges, such as low railway rates and exemptions from certain taxation. Funds to carry out the scheme will be derived from various sources, among them a specified tax of 75 centimos a ton on foreign coal, coke and patent fuel imported from those countries not having specially agreed import tariffs with Spain.

ITCHY RASH ON BABY'S SCALP

Scratching Caused Eruptions. Cuticura Healed.

"The general appearance of the breaking out on my baby's scalp was in a rash. It kept spreading over her head and formed scales. It must have itched as the baby scratched, causing eruptions, and she was very fretful. Her hair became lifeless and dry and fell out. The trouble lasted two or three months.

"I used other remedies without success. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it helped her. I purchased more and in a short time she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Wellington Morey, West Fairlee, Vt., Jan. 6, 1927.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY HER PROOF.

She lifted her finger solemn and slow:
'Tis true, for certain and sure, I know.
And I think when I say so you ought to believe.
They kneel in their stalls on Christmas eve.

The red one, the white one, the specked and brown,
When the clock strikes twelve, they all kneel down,
And it happens so every Christmas eve,
Well, I'll tell you this if you won't believe;

'Once ages and ages ago it was,
I thought I would see for myself, because
I doubted a little, just like you,
Whether or no the story was true.

And so one Christmas eve, I staid
Awake till twelve—O, I was afraid;
The wind was a-blowing and no moon shone
But I went to the stable myself, alone.

And when I had slid the big doors back
I couldn't go in, it was so black;
But—solemn and true—I so declare,
I heard the cows when they knelt down! There!"

POOR SANTA CLAUS

I saved my cake for Santa Claus
One Christmas eve at tea;
For if riding makes one hungry,
How hungry he must be!

It put it on the chimney shelf
Where he'd be sure to go—
I think it does a person good
To be remembered so.

When every one was fast asleep
(Every one but me),
I tiptoed into mamma's room
O just as still—to see—

If he had been there yet, Dear me!
It made my feelings ache—
There sat a mizzable little mouse
Eating Santa's cake.

YULETIDE.

(That is, you'll tide over somehow.)
Now the snow is on the grasses
Where the wily rabbit passes
(If you're south of Mason-Dixon, go and read some other piece!)
Every brooklet ripple's frozen
(They can't do their daily dozen!)
And the human innards hanker for some cooking done in grease.

It is Yuletide; anti-schooltide;
And you'd better keep your mule tied
If you wouldn't have him ramble to the shelter of a stack.
See the swine go humped and squealing,
Goosefish on their pink revealing—
Quite ungrateful that cold weather keeps the ticks from off their backs!

Darkness comes so dratted early
From the east (the west is pearly),
That it keeps a fellow hustling to get in the wood in time,
Stamping snow from off each doglet
As you perchward lug the loglet,
(It's a shame to take the money for this easy sort of rhyme!)

Earth is filled with Christmas spirit;
You can feel it, you can hear it.
Filled with none but Christmas spirit, where the Volstead law's obeyed!

Let's (come on—let's do!) be happy;
Altogether—make it snappy!
(If I made this "poem" longer, there'd be trouble, I'm afraid!)

NORWICH THE ROSE OF NEW ENGLAND.

Dear Editor and Writers: We have all of us often heard that revenge is sweet. It may be sweet in anticipation, but it is usually sour or bitter. I hardly believe that any real lasting satisfaction comes from revenge, "getting even," or being resentful. The victory is shallow and worthless. I remember some years ago a certain man got mad at my uncle and got men to burn his barn and stock for revenge.

Did he get his revenge? I should say not, for he was found out, and paid dearly for the deed he had planned by serving a term of years. The best part of his life was lost. At the end, the man passed out after a long lingering illness.

So it does not pay for us to harbor a desire for revenge. Do good for evil has been the motto since the dark ages. Even though the good book says, "revenge is mine, thus said the Lord."

Life is too big and broad and satisfying. Only those who are able to rise above the spirit of revenge have the foresight to see the big things in life of our wonderful universe.

"Live and let live" the Quakers say. That's one reason why we had some trouble with some of our people over the drafting in our last war. Many of them did not want to take arms, and cause ill feelings in revenge. They chose peace and harmony, instead of revenge.

Bernarr Macfadden says, revenge isn't sweet, and I realize from my own personal observation of the viewpoint that he is right. If we could only follow the Golden Rule there would be no time or room for revenge. If we could it would permit us more time to acquire a kindlier spirit. If we held no ill will, but good will towards our neighbors, and fellow men, how much better we would all feel. Then there would be no revenge and then we would not miss some of life's greatest opportunities. If we cling to revenge, how miserable our life will be.

I would like to ask through the Corner, if any of you can tell me, how and why did the city of Norwich obtain the name of "The Rose of New England?" The question has been asked many times and I am almost ashamed, living so near it, at being unable to answer it. Perhaps the editor can enlighten us right here.

According to the Norwich Quarter Millenium "when the committee on decorations for the bi-centennial celebration in 1859 was considering an appropriate designation for the town, the chairman, James Lloyd Greene, said, 'Well, she is a rose, anyway!' 'Yes,' responded Edward T. Clapp, 'Norwich is the rose of New England.' The suggestion was accepted, and on an arch under which the procession marched, on Broadway, near Broad street, were inscribed the memorable, 'Norwich, the Rose of New England'." —S. C. Editor.)

Last week's letters informed us that Nonesopretty has moved from Rhode Island up into Killingly, where she will be near many of her relatives. If the weather her way was anything like it was in my section the day she moved, it was anything but pleasant.

Trusting that old St. Nicholas will gladden the homes of every Social Corner member, I wish a Merry Christmas to all. KOCHIA.

HOW TO MAKE A CHRISTMAS DOVE.

Dear Social Corner Friends: I wish you all a happy Christmas season.

I wonder if any of the members feel as I do about Christmas time. I begin to celebrate two or three weeks before and keep it up until "Little Christmas," which, I believe, is the day when the visit of the wise men to the infant Jesus is commemorated.

I am going to tell you how to make a Dove of Peace as a Christmas decoration.

Let me say first that, when finished, the dove is very life-like, more so than you would believe when you consider what it is made of.

It takes two or three hours of patient, careful work; and I rather think the busy housewives and those engaged in preparing many gifts will not find two hours to spare. But there are many Christmases ahead of us, friends; and, at least, this idea for Christmas will be in time for 1928.

The year I made the dove, I also made two little dovelets, fastening themto a large pine bough. They were made in the same manner as the larger birds. As I held one on its back in my hand, it seemed so real that you could almost see it quivering like some poor little bird you had rescued from a hungry cat.

Use unbleached muslin, or something equally strong, for the body and head.

Double this and draw the body and head in one piece with a pencil on the cloth, bearing in mind that stuffing it will make it appear smaller. If you do not get it exactly right you can improve the shape by padding it on the outside with cotton batting.

If you have time, you can baste it together and try stuffing it, to see if the size is right. I have made two large doves and happened to get them about the right size.

In cutting, leave enough for a seam. Sew this strongly. When sewing that part of the head where the beak goes do not sew too closely. Of course you must leave a space to put the stuffing in. Use something for stuffing through which a needle or pin will go easily.

When sewing that part of the head where the beak goes do not sew too closely. Of course you must leave a place to put the stuffing in. Use something for stuffing through which a needle or pin will go easily.

Use writing paper as foundation of wings and tail. I think I used half sheets, pinning them on so that the wings would stay spread out, and the tail in a natural position. A little pleat helps to make the wings stand out from the body.

Shape the wings—that is, cut them to a natural shape after they are pinned on. Cut the tail in pointed scallops like feathers.

Use cotton batting to cover the dove.

If you have a whole roll of this, you can separate thin layers which can be laid over the muslin and paper foundation and tacked here and there.

A toothpick doubled forms the head. I colored this with water in which I had been soaking a bit of red tissue paper.

Small circles of gold paper were used for the eyes and the knot of the black thread used to hold the paper in place makes the pupil of the eye.

A thin stick from a bush long enough to reach from wing tip to wing tip, tacked to the body and then to each wing, keeps the wings wide spread. This does not show as the dove is hung high.

The tooth pick beak can be opened and a twig of holly or black alder. (I believe this is the name of the wild shrub which has red berries growing in this locality) placed in it.

Cornerites may remember my description some time ago of the way to make a bayberry ball.

I had the ball hung high in the center of the room—a ball about 14 inches across.

The dove was suspended from a string which I fastened to the center of the ball as I made it.

On each side of this hung a ball of bayberries about half the size of the large ball.

This made an effective and rather unusual decoration and was much admired.

A strip of paper with the words: "Peace on Earth" can be placed in the dove's beak instead of the twig of red berries if desired.

Hepatica, Aries and Kitty Lou; I hope to write the letters sometime which I have promised so long. All good wishes to you for a happy Christmas.

I think almost everyone is familiar with the saying "The Gift Without the Giver Is Bare" and I thing the following lines, also well known, refer more to the giving of ourselves in kind words and deeds than to the giving of material things—

"Ceasing to give, we cease to have,
Such is the law of love."

Sometime ago, I copied from some paper a piece in which was the expression, "the royal law of love." I thought that was good, and I am going to close this rather long epistle by quoting a verse from a hymn which is before me on the wall in the handwriting of a loved friend—a verse which tells of the greatest love of all, which gave the most precious gift of a little child to lead us:—

"For the love of God is broader Than the measure of man's mind; and the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

MOODS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I am sending in a poem called Moods, to be published when there is an opportunity. When we are in a cheerful frame of mind we are apt to think that this is a fine world to live in and the people are faultless but if we are not we criticize everyone but ourselves and perhaps we are the faulty ones. CLUB NO. 3 TO MEET DEC. 21 AT LEBANON

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Friends: First I wish to thank all who sent me birthday cards both Social Corner writers and others.

Well, Thanksgiving has come and gone and it is nearly Christmas. How much we have to be thankful for. There are many hours where the holidays are saddened by the loss of some dear one, yet the pleasant memories of when they were with us remain.

I was so sorry to hear of the death of our Social Corner sister, Amy. She was always so cheerful and doing something to make others happy.

I suppose the sisters are all busy with preparations for Christmas. We all enjoy remembering our friends and being remembered at Christmas, but I wonder if we are not losing the real meaning of the day when we come to the season which should mean peace and joy with our nerves a wreck and our money all spent just because we try to give more than we can afford. A card or letter would show we remembered as well as a gift we can't afford and we should try to make them happy, not forgetting the poor children who have so few things to make them happy. These we can reach by giving to the Salvation Army who do so much good and help people that no other organization can reach.

B. Natural: I was at the Baptist convention in Hartford and would liked to have met you. I see you belong to the D. A. R., so we must be interested in the same things. Do you belong to the grange?

Grace: Do you think I have forgotten you and am not keeping my promise? We have had the house upset for so long, put in new chimney and made some other repairs, so have been waiting until we were settled. As Aunt Sarah got Club No. 3 started once more it seems a pity to let it die out again so we will have a meeting in the chapel of the Lebanon Baptist church on Wednesday, Dec. 21. I hope as many as can will come whether members of Club No. 3 or other clubs, or friends who are interested. Every one will be welcome. Please bring plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon and something for the dinner. Also if any one has a song or reading to help out the program it will be appreciated.

Am sending a poem which was sent to some friends of ours on their golden wedding anniversary which I hope the readers will enjoy when it can be printed.

Wishing all a merry Christmas and happy New Year.

DORINDA.

HOW ZANY LIKES PIG'S LIVER

Editor and Corner Friends: Christmas is almost here and I would feel badly to have it slip by and not wish you all a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year all through 1928.

Club No. 4 has had several very pleasant meetings this year. Many of them held at private homes, which I think we all appreciate very much. Halls are all very nice but they do not furnish the thrills one gets in going to the country places. Glad to welcome so many new members to our club. Sorry to note the passing away of Lydia, Poplar, Here's Hopin', and others, if there be those whom I do not now recall. My sympathy goes out to all who have lost dear ones. To you, Rural Delivery, in the loss of your companion for years. Am very glad I had the pleasure of meeting her at E. K. "Old Home" day last July. She left a very pleasing impression in my mind.

Nema: Your letters are always interesting to me and when I read how, unkind you thought the words "slacker" and "immigrant" were it seems to me they are very tame as compared with the word "scab," when that word is applied to a person who is willing to work.

Was amused when I read the two recipes in Saturday's Bulletin for the "Eggless, Milkless and Butterless" cake. One calls for 4 teaspoons of baking powder, the other for 6 teaspoons of soda. My recipe is the same as Aries' only it calls for 1 teaspoon of soda and is called "War cake" as it was originated in war times when every one was supposed to cook as economically as possible. Have made many loaves and the one teaspoon of soda seems a plenty. Like rich fruit cake it is better with age.

Zany is very fond of pig's liver cooked as our mothers used to cook it, so guess I will tell you about it. Wash and slice the liver and put on to cook with a little more than enough hot water to cover. At the same time add as much lard or butter and finely sliced onion as you think you would like. Season with salt, pepper and poultry dressing and when done thicken with a little flour and water mixed. This is better after being warmed over a few times and is nice on a winter day served with baked potatoes, mashed turnip and cranberry sauce.

This brings to mind something I used to like but do not get nowadays. When on a farm, mother always tried out her own lard and she knew how to do it so as to have nice scraps, and those with Rhode Island johnny cakes and big cucumber pickles would taste very fine for dinner this rainy day.

If you have ugly cracks in furniture try this: Slightly soften beeswax until it become pliable then press it firmly into the cracks and smooth the surface with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood, and work the dust into the beeswax. This gives a finish to the wood and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared.

Merry Christmas to all, and sympathy to those who are in trouble.

TWICE TWENTY

HOW I MAKE CAKE

Dear Sisters: With the growth and expansion of my work I have often thought that I would move it out of my home kitchen into larger quarters. Each time, however, I have decided against such a change for it would be out of keeping with the basic idea of my work.

To reach the highest degree of skill, the home cake-maker must first give attention to her utensils and material points to be considered in connection with these are cleanliness, readiness and quality.

With everything in readiness, put the ingredients in the cake in the following manner: First prepare the flour. Then beat the eggs stiff and stand aside, when the time comes to use them do not whip them further, as beating them after they have reached this stiff condition makes them knotty. Cream the butter. By "creaming" is meant reducing it to a soft, smoothing condition. This is done not by melting but by working it. To this add the sugar gradually, working them together thoroughly. This may be done with a large mixing spoon, but time is gained by kneading it with the fingers, as the temperature of the hand softens the butter. If milk is used add a little milk to the cream butter and sugar; then a little flour, then a little of the stiffly beaten whites of eggs, blending thoroughly, add more milk, flour and eggs, in rotation until all have been used. Lastly put in flavoring to taste.

I would say if the butter is too salt wash the salt out of the butter as the salt retards the lightness of the cake.

In making cake in winter bring the work near the stove for a warm temperature. If the butter is hard, cut in cubes and put over warm water. In the summer after the sugar has been added to the butter, set the bowl in a pan of cracked ice while mixing in the other ingredients. The object of this is to keep the temperature for cake making nearly the same in summer as in winter.

In contrast to the butter cakes are the sponge cakes, of which the angel cake and the sunshine cake are an example. These are made without butter.

Their lightness depends mainly on the handling of the ingredients, particularly on the care taken in adding flour to the beaten egg. This batter does not stick so is poured into the baking pan.

The evenness and smoothness of the cake depends to a large degree on the way the batter is put into the baking tins. Care must be taken that the corners are filled and that the batter does not lie thicker in the middle of the pan. A bulge or a lift in the center of a baked cake is often the lack of precaution. Smooth the batter lightly with the spatula. It is very necessary to have special baking pans for different varieties of cake, such as the angel food pan. The moment the batter has been spread, the cake should be put into the oven, as it will lose its lightness if allowed to stand.

For my cake I use a gas stove. When ready to bake the flame should be turned low and the cake placed four or five inches from the bottom of the oven. When the cake has doubled its size, the heat, if not sufficient to cook it may be increased. When the top surface of the cake feels firm to the touch, with no tender spots which show a tendency to stick to the fingers, it should be put into the bottom of the oven to brown.

I find tea cakes have to be put in quite a hot oven or they have a tendency to flatten.

A warm cake fresh from the oven will bend to fit the shape of any surface upon which it is laid. It is necessary then to cook the cake upon some surface that will not be affected by the heat. Both wood and metal warp. The most satisfactory material is a sheet of card board, such as is used for book covers. Such a board should be added to a cake makers permanent paraphernalia. Over this fold a piece of closely woven linen, as the cake will not stick to this fabric. When the cake is taken out of the oven run your spatula or knife around the sides, loosening them. The card board with its linen napkin should then be laid on top. With a deft turn of the wrist invert the whole, and the cake will drop on the board bottom-side up, and now in a position to be frosted.

A cake should be iced when it is cool but tender. Do not wait until it is stiff. The icing is spread on with the spatula covering the sides as well as the top of the cake all the imperfections on the surface are concealed and the loaf presents a more attractive appearance. The icing dries by standing, but if the cake is to be served in an hour it may be set in the oven a few minutes to harden the frosting but it must be carefully watched, however to avoid browning.

I was asked to give general suggestions for angel and sponge cake. In making these cakes always use pastry flour. Have your bowl and beater perfectly dry before beating the eggs, as any moisture will prevent them being light. Eggs beat better and lighter when cool, consequently they should be kept in a cool place until needed. Add a pinch of salt when added to the whites and beat. This toughens the fibre and helps retain the air. The lightness of the sponge cake depends principally on the amount of air beaten into the eggs. Care must be taken in adding the flour. It must be folded or blended in, never beaten. Beating the batter after the flour is added breaks the air-bubbles, thins the pastry and makes the cake tough and heavy. Do not grease your tins. Layer cakes do not need to be inverted out of the baking pans. Let them cool in the tins to prevent shrinking.

I should have said bake in a moderate oven.

THREE EGGLESS CHOCOLATE

Dear Corner Members: I am sending recipes for three eggless chocolate cakes. Mix 2 cups of sugar, 1-2 cup lard, 4 heaping tablespoons cocoa together. Add 2 cups sour milk to which 2 level teaspoons of soda have been added. Add 1 teaspoon of salt, 3 cups of flour, 2 teaspoons of vanilla. Beat until smooth. (There is where the secret lies. It is the beating that makes it light).

Divide batter into three loaves and put it in three separate pans, when baked this cake is a rich reddish color. Bake in a moderate oven. The longer you keep this cake the better it is.

You can frost it if you wish. I use mocha also vanilla and frost it as I use it.

Chocolate Layer Cake: 1-2 cup of butter, 1 1-2 cups of sugar beaten to a cream, add well beaten egg yolks of 3 eggs, sift 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, add 3-4 cup milk, put together with the following.

Chocolate Icing: 4 squares of unsweetened chocolate, 1 1-2 cups of milk, 1 1-2 cups confectioner's sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Melt chocolate in milk, stirring until thick, add sugar and cook until mixture thickens. Cool, flavor with vanilla, spread between layers and on top the cake.

Chocolate Cake: Filling 1 cup milk or cream, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon of arrowroot, 1-4 cup powdered sugar, 1-2 ounce bitter chocolate, 1-4 teaspoon vanilla. Mix cornstarch with 1-2 milk. Scald remaining milk with chocolate, add cornstarch or arrowroot gradually while stirring, cook 15 minutes. Beat egg add also vanilla to the mixture.

Layer Cake: 1 cup sugar, piece butter size of egg, 1 3-4 cup of flour, 3-4 cup of milk, a little salt, 1 egg, mix all together, beat well, bake in large pans in hot oven. Spread on cream while warm.

Here is a Christmas menu for five people at the cost of $3.14:

Celery Cranberry Olives
Baker Stuffed Pork Chops
With Gravy
Yellow Turnips Squash
Onions Mashed Potatoes
Plum Pudding with Whipped Cream
Grapes Oranges Apples

Allow 2 medium chops for each person. Place in a shallow dish and nearly cover the chops with milk. On each piece place a generous helping of your favorite dressing. Bake one hour or until the chops are tender, brown the dressing well, remove carefully on the platter and thicken the gravy.

FAIRY GODMOTHER'S GREETINGS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Children: Once again the time has arrived for me to greet you all. It does seem to me as if the year 1927 has just flown on wings to meet the year 1928 which is almost here. I have been grieved when the angel of death has entered our ranks and taken one of our members, but all I can say is God's will be done and their gain is our loss. To the bereaved members I send my sympathy. To our sick members I send a word of good cheer and leave you in the hands of the Great Physician who doeth all things well. To all members of the great Social Corner family I send a Merry Christmas, a Happy New Year and peace on earth, good will to man, is the wish of your

FAIRY GODMOTHER.

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER.

Dear Corner Friends: What a disagreeable day last Sunday was with its ice and sleet. I suppose many of the sisters are very busy just now preparing for Christmas.

E. L. M.: So you are investing your dollar for the new house! What patience you must have to still be waiting. Still, I suppose you know that patience is a virtue.

Interested Reader: I often think of you and all your troubles. Do you suppose you will ever survive them? I hope so.

Skipper: Was much pleased to learn that you are still in the land of the living.

Mrs. M. J.: Am glad my letters are of such interest to you, that you look for them in the Corner page. I thought I was to see you long before this. Have you moved to your new home yet? I hope you find a suitable rent.

Joan: Your letter made me laugh. I thought you belonged to the W. C. T. U. but now I have formed a different opinion.

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

CLUB NO. 5'S CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: The weather conditions of December 7th made it an ideal day for a large attendance at our meeting.

The Christmas spirit prevailed throughout the day. Stubby was hostess and with a few helpers served at noon. With a rising song of thanks, we sang "Bless Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts In Christian Love." We then saw a Christmas feast that delighted the eye and appealed to the appetites. Many times during the dinner, thoughts wondered amid the rugged hills of Vermont to an appaling destruction of life and property caused by the disastrous flood with only cold and hunger for many in that devastated section of the country, and wondered if we fully realized our many blessings.

Learning of Calamity Jane's resignation as program director we paused for a moment and reviewed the long term of services given with one thought in view—promotion and higher ideals of amusement—and recall many enjoyable programs given, for working with many co-operators and with unity of spirit success was achieved.

The entertainment committee for the day were Prudence, Kasha and Calamity Jane substituting for Elva. The afternoon program opened with a Christmas scene with a real live Santa Claus in our midst garbed in full Christmas costume. Standing beside a prettily decorated Christmas tree, there were vivid memories of days of youth when the Christmas tree was the child's delight, but the vision soon passed as Santa Claus began distributing gifts from his pack. The task was finished and he soon took his flight. Snowflake came forward with an interesting reading on the origin of Christmas. Several short sketches were given and a humorous monologue by Gentleman Jim and Queen Bess caused much laughter. This brought the enjoyable Christmas session at Club No. 5's quarters to a close and we thought it was good to be there on that day.

GREETINGS FROM KATRINKA.

Dear Cornerites: I have been silent so long perhaps my name has been taken from the list. There are so many good letters that it doesn't seem necessary for me to write as it is hard for me to write about things that are interesting.

What a poor day for the club meet in Westerly or any other meeting? Wish I could have been there.

If not too late I wish to thank those who sent me birthday cards.

Nancy Peck: Thanks. We are both fine now. Just heard you have a furnace. Glad for you. I have pansies and dandelions in bloom in my yard.

Cosmos: Sorry I could not be with you today. I enjoy those meetings very much. The topic was right in my line.

E. L. M: I came very near going through what you have been going through. I am glad that things happened as they did here. Some job to remodel

Connie: Do you live on the place near N. T. M's. truck garden farm, and does your hubby work for a young dairy farmer? I think I know you.

KATRINKA.

HURRAH FOR CHRISTMAS

Dear Cornerites and Social Corner Editor: Just to wish you all a merry Christmas and a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Here is the Red Cross creed.

Do something for somebody, somewhere
While jogging along life's road;
Help some one to carry his burden,
And lighter will be your load.
Do something for somebody gladly,
'Twill sweeten your every care—
In sharing the sorrows of others,
Your own are less hard to bear.
Do something for somebody, striving
To help where the way seems long,
And the homeless hearts that languish
Cheer up, with a little song.
Do something for somebody, always
Whatever may be your creed—
There's nothing on earth can help you
So much as a kindly deed.

Bay State: Thank you kindly for my badge. I was very pleased with it. Think it is lovely.

Ethelyn: We made two "Kitty Kats" this afternoon. I wish you could see them. I know you would laugh. They are too comical for anything. Now, hurrah for Christmas! I say.

ANN TENNA.

CALIFORNIA.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have not forgotten any of you but have been too busy to write.

Five weeks in this beautiful country and many wonderful things to see. It was quite warm when I came but the nights are quite cool and last night we had a white frost. I am with a sister I had not seen for 12 years, so you well know how we have talked. She owns a dear little home on the side of Mount Washington and houses rise up above us and lovely mountains are in view.

In the garden iris, chrysanthemums, geraniums, calla lilies, sweet peas, nasturtiums, roses, marigolds, are in bloom and a tree is filled with ripe persimmons. I wish I could write you of all the new flowers, the palms and vines but one can not do them justice.

I have had a wonderful trip up in the mountains over night; the atmosphere was so clear it seemed we could almost touch the stars. Then we went to Santa Monica, to the beach. On the sands of the Pacific ocean it was beautiful and warm. Catalina Island was in full view and sea birds every where. The ocean is well named. Not much like our wild Atlantic.

Last week a fierce forest fire and a bad sand storm east of us filled the air with smoke and minute sand which even got into the houses.

It is Christmas season and although I have seen many cities the world over I never saw such decorations as the stores have here. They cannot be described and such goods and fancy and grotesque things to sell. One must have money and more money to buy. One very attractive buy and reasonable, is the fruit, boxed and basketed for shipment.

We are enjoying lovely green vegetables, especially green peas. One can go to a wagon and for 50 cents bring in a half bushelful. Lovely juicy, ripe oranges, small, for ten cents a dozen.

The deaths from auto accidents and shooting are legion. Crime every where.

I have been out to Hollywood a goodly number of times but so far have withstood trying to get into the movies. One sees all kinds and funny kinds, any members of Club No. 6 who are fond of "whiskers" and "knickers" should not hesitate to come out at once.

The most notable "star" I have seen is Agnes Ayer. She appeared to sponsor a Philharmonic concert. She was very blond, red, wore a full skirt down to the floor, a beautiful Spanish shawl over one shoulder, an immense red silk bag hung from her wrist by a broad, red ribbon, and her earrings looked like old fashioned brass door knockers. She was some freak. The homes of all the movie stars are magnificent, built up in the hills.

I have enjoyed some fine music since I came west. I have eaten in some wonderful restaurants, one the "Pig'n Whistle" is beyond describing.

I have seen "Minona" once since we came out. She is a long way from me. She looked fine and liked it out here.

I think of you all when the meeting date of Club No. 6 comes due, but I am fond enough of New England and will be back when warm weather comes to you again.

I have enjoyed reading the letters some of the sisters have sent and thank them. I'll answer all in time.

Wishing you all a merry Christmas and happy New Year.

SOME CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters of the Corner: I know it is hard to select gifts so I am sending some suggestions for a few Christmas gifts.

Tie backs for curtains are easily made. Purchase one-quarter yard each of the following colors in mercerized gingham or Peter Pan cloth: in pink, yellow, blue, lavender and green; also a skein of six strand black embroidery floss, a roll of one-half inch twill tape, and two small ivory rings, for each tie back.

Cut circles four inches in diameter from the cloth. For one tie back cut two blue circles, two yellow circles, one pink and one lavendar circle; also cut from the green cloth two leaves. These leaves are cut double.

Turn in the edge of one of the circles about one-eighth of an inch and gather all the way around. Draw up the gathering thread, fasten and turn so the gathered edge will be on the under side and inside of the flower. Make five or six French knots in the center with the black floss. Do the same with all six circles, then sew them in the following order on the tape. "Green" the leaf at the ends blue, yellow, pink, lavender, yellow and blue. Cut the tape about 22 inches long. Turn in the edges of the back and front of each leaf. Baste together and blanket stitch around the edge. Next outline the veins on the front side of the leaf. Arrange a leaf at either end of the tape under the end flower and sew an ivory ring onto the projecting piece of tape at the end of each leaf.

A soft star rattler for baby—Cut two circles of white flannel eight inches in diameter. Draw a circle through the center of this four inches in diameter. Along this small circle make a dot every two and five-eights inches, draw a line lightly straight from dot to dot, making a hexagon shape. Make a dot in the centre of each of these five lines and a dot corresponding on the very outer edge. Now make a line from each corner of hexagon to point on outer edge. Draw them all, making a nice five pointed star. Cut out the star and sew together, leaving space enough to stuff. Turn inside out carefully (pencil marks must be inside and not show) and stuff with soft cotton batting; sew up. Draw a face and outline with bright red silk floss. Also outline-stitch the lines that were drawn to make the star. Sew wee jingle bells on each point. It sounds complicated but it is easy when you catch on to the idea.

Take an old vinegar jug, paint the bottom tan, part old rose and leave the upper part and handle brown, the original color. I painted a bunch of wild roses, white pinks, mauve and old rose, some flowers on the old rose part below, and a few birds trailing upon the handle. I put in it a few sprays of inch plant, or Wandering Jew, and it makes a very pretty vase for use in summer and winter.

A crocheted face cloth in sets of two, with a nice cake of toilet soap, make a good gift. Make a chain of 95 stitches, turn, miss three, make a treble stitch in each of the following stitches and turn. For the second row chain three, a treble in each treble. Repeat this row until the cloth is as large as you wish, then make a pretty edge for the border.

A box of stationery with the envelopes all stamped is a nice gift.

Snap shots is another gift. Get a piece of glass at the hardware shop and mount your picture on cardboard. Then put your glass on with a piece of cardboard for the back. Then bind all around for the binding, mitering the corners together like a boughten frame, now attach a small hanger and you have a framed picture.

ETHELYN.

ESTEL'S BROWN BREAD

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: It has been sometime since I have written a letter so guess I will get busy and do my bit.

I wish to thank Interested Reader, Rebe, Ruthina, Ida'eane, Lady Lou, Y. Y., Connie and others who remembered with cards on my birthday.

Sorry to have missed the meeting on Dec. 13, but having a hard cold, thought best to remain at home.

Brown Bread: One pint of rye meal, one pint of Indian meal, a little salt, 2 teaspoons soda. Put in sieve and sift together. One cup of molasses, one egg. Mix with sweet milk enough so that you can pour it. Steam three hours. Wishing all a merry Christmas.

ESTEL

TIME TO CHEER LONELY HEARTS.

Dear Corner Members: "Let us gather up the sunbeams lying all along our path."

What memories those lines recall, and what a number of pleasant hours are before us, if we only find our sweetest comfort in the "blessings of today, with a patient hand removing all the briars from our way."

How often we can extend a helpful hand, and it is really wonderful how much a kindness is appreciated. In this season especially, there are lonely hearts a very little effort can cheer. THE BANSHEE.

JOINS THE CORNER.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Having had the pleasure of attending your meetings a few times, I would like very much to become a member of the Social Corner and of Club No. 6.

For my pen name I'll take

PETAL.

DIRECTIONS WANTED FOR OIL CLOTH DOLLS AND PIN BALLS.

Social Corner Editor: Am not a member of the Corner but have been an interested reader for years. Would like very much if "Just a Nut" would send her directions for oil cloth dolls also if Kitty Lou would send her directions for pin balls, to be published in the paper. Merry Xmas to all.

A RURALITE.

A LONG TIME SILENT

Dear Social Corner Sisters: How are you all? Yes, I have been silent for a long time, been on the go since June. My longest trip by train was to Newark, where I visited for several weeks. While I was there I had many pleasant auto rides with my friends. I will mention some of the places I passed through: Belleville, Arlington, Rutherford, Leimehurst, Nutliye, Bloomfield, Montclair and Verona.

These were historical places with homes for children a hospital for tubercular patients and other institutions. Being in the summer, the grounds and beds of beautiful flowers were at their greatest beauty and were very attractive to the tourist. From New Jersey on my home run I came to New London. There my brother and his wife from Detroit met me. They were coming east by auto. Then we made another start and arrived at the farm O. K. all ready for supper. Later I returned to the whaling cit yand sewed for the grand children. I had a delightful time. I finished my vacation and came home feeling I had spent a very pleasant summer and fall. I arrived at Prairie Chicken's home for Thanksgiving. The children and grand children were all home except my son who could not leave his duty in New Jersey.

I was sorry to miss the Bulletin while I was away. Came home just in time to read something about Stranger in the city teaching. I certainly did smile. You have another guess, Kochia.

Here at the farm my people have butchered and we are in the midst of it. I thought I was in Connecticut but for a few days we have been in "grease," but we will have many a good bite in store for the cold winter days to come.

Yellow Jacket: I suppose you are still buzzing. I want to say I had a good time at the supper and dance but my two cups of coffee were two cups too much I never went to sleep till three in the morning. Some one ought to have played the record Three O'Clock in the Morning about that time don't you think so?

Where are Weus and Wheleer? Up on the hill I never hear from you. There is a phone at our house now. The name and number will be in the next directory. E. F. M: I don't suppose you come to center school with orders any more. Did you send for the article my youngest spoke to you about at the fair? I called you up not long ago but a gentleman answered. Is the house completed?

Skipper: Did you recognize me when I waived to you from the trolley window?

Joan: I never have seen you at our gatherings at North Stonington.

I will close for this time but do hope Kochis will not lose her much needed sleep guessing who I am. Best of wishes for our editor and all the Social Corner members.

STRANGER IN THE CITY

MITCHIE'S GREAPEFRUIT PIE.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Think it time I wrote and did my bit to keep the Corner page full as I had such a pleasant time at the Social Corner meetings.

Mrs. Farmer: What has happened we never hear from you anymore?

Mitchie has sold all her chickens. She will not have to shovel any more snow.

E. L. M.: Many thanks for the pretty birthday card I received so long ago.

B. Natural: I am sending the recipe for grapefruit pie:

Grapefruit Pie: First bake a shell as for lemon pie. For filling mix one tablespoon of cornstarch in a little cold water and over this pour one cup of boiling water. To this add the juice of one large grapefruit, the grated rine and juice of one orange, the beaten yolks of two eggs, the white of one egg and a small piece of butter. Sweeten to taste, about one-half cup of sugar. Cook in a double boiler until thick. When cool put in shell, frost with white of eggs and two tablespoons of sugar. Brown slightly.

Success to the Corner is the wish of

MITCHIE.

NONESOPRETTY'S GREETINGS.

Dear Editor and Friends: Well we are having some fine weather. Hope it lasts.

Kochia: Poor little boy, do be sure you hang your stocking where Santa can find it and if yours is not long enough why just hang up your ma's.

Kansas Lily: Start one of your letters. Why not join Club No. 4, get a pin and have some good times?

Peter Prose: Where are you?

Providence Rose: Come on in now, that new house can wait ten minutes for you to write.

Ann Tenna: Many thanks for the card. I do think the poor things must have been hurt by the looks, but I am much pleased with it.

Aries: I hope you are all right. I am like you. Am in one room for the cold winter. I have a very pleasant tenement and a fine landlord. You know that means a whole lot.

Peggy Alder: Hope you are feeling better. Will call on you as soon as I can.

Comfort: You say you knew Kochia's uncles. Well they are my cousins and cousins to Peggy Alder's mother, too. You might remember her. She went to the same school. They called her Libby C.

Well, I wish all the members a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. NONESOPRETTY.

U.S. STEEL COMMON AND GEN'L MOTORS LEADERS IN BUOYANT STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP)—Resumption of the upward price movement in today's stock market, under the leadership of U. S. Steel common and General Motors, each of which advanced more than 3 points, carried the average of 20 leading, industrial issues to a new high record for all time. While gains of 1 to 3 points were quite common at the close, a few specialties showed net gains of 6 to 12 points. Total sales crossed the 3,000,000 mark for the fourth time this year and the 12th time in the history of the exchange, transactions in General Motors alone running above a quarter of a million shares.

With federal reserve brokers' loans showing the first decrease in seven weeks and call money remaining stable at 4 per cent. in the face of tremendous mid-month turn-over of funds, comparatively little attention was paid to the further withdrawal of $5,000,000 in gold for shipment to the Argentine. Sterling exchange eased further, removing the likelihood of any additional shipments to England within the next few days.

Buying of the steel shares was stimulated by reports that automotive manufacturers had entered the market with large orders for plates and other products. U. S. Steel common touched 150 for the first time in two months. Sloss Sheffield ran up 6 1-2 points to 121 1-4 and Bethlehem, Crucible, Republic and a few others mover up a point or two.

Greene Cananea resumed the leadership of the copper group with another of its sensational upturns, soaring nearly 9 points to 126 1-2, a new high, and closing at the top. Anaconda sold at 56 for the first time in five years.

Short-covering played a prominent part in the rise of General Motors, buying of which was accompanied by rumors of an important announcement regarding new models next week. Hudson moved up 3 points and Chrysler 1, but the others failed to make much progress. Renewed weakness of Gabriel Snubber, based on rumors of a cut in the dividend, carried that issue to a new 1927 low at 27 1-8.

American Metals responded to reports of increasing business by touching a new peak at 43. Other issues to break into new high ground included Fidelity-Phenix Insurance, Fox Film A, Hershey Chocolate preferred, Indian Motorcycle, Life Savers, Liquid Carbonic, McCrory Stores B, National Surety, Philadelphia Co., and Southern California Edison.

Collapse of the pool in Porto Rican Tobacco B carried that stock down another 9 points to 30 1-2 as against a high of 52 1-8 a few days ago. Conspicuous heaviness also was shown by American Republics, Gillette Safety Razor, National Tea and Wright Aeronautical.

Rails, as a group, made an even better showing than the industrials. New York Central was heavily bought in the belief that stockholders would receive an extra cash dividend early next year. Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atchison and other high grade carriers also were in good demand.

Foreign exchanges were slightly reactionary, with sterling cables ruling around $4.88 5-32 as against a recent high of $4.88 7-16. Money rates were unchanged.

Commodity markets moved within a rather narrow range. Cotton and wheat prices closed slightly higher but rye advanced about 1 3-4 cents a bushel. Coffee quotations dropped about 10 points and sugar prices held steady.

New England Industries

Dyestuffs

The principal products of the dyestuffs industry are dyestuffs, gums, tanning, and sizing for textiles, including household dyes.

Unfavorable conditions in the textile industry, and changes in the nature of demand have caused decreases of sales in recent years in two thirds of the establishments reporting in a survey conducted by the United States department of commerce in cooperation with the New England council. Total sales in 1926 were 5 per cent above those of 1921. Lower production costs and extensions of territories have accounted for most increases.

The average age of plants is twenty-eight years, and the average period of present management is nineteen years. Only one company, formerly a paint concern, has changed from its original use. The chief reasons for locating and remaining in New England have been nearness to market, availability of raw materials, and transportation facilities. The chief raw materials, aniline dyes, chemicals, and starches, are usually purchased outside of New England, chiefly in New York.

Piece work or other incentive wage methods are used for only 8 per cent of all employes in the plants reporting according to this survey. The minimum employment period comes in July, with the maximum period in October, the variation being 10 per cent in 1923 and 15 per cent in 1926. Almost half the concerns report steady production throughout the year, with no slack periods. No development of supplementary employment or special products has been reported.

Almost every company reports improvements affected in the continuous maintenance of plant and equipment.

Variations in total volume of sales have been slight from 1921 to 1925, the years covered in this survey. But during these years two-thirds of the reporting firms have suffered decreases in sales. Besides changes in nature of demand, depression in the textile industry has been a marked factor, since textile sizings make up a large part of the product of this industry.

New England sales average 41 per cent of the total. Distribution of sizing is chiefly made directly to textile manufacturers, while producers of household dyes for the most part distribute their products through wholesalers and jobbers. Over half the reporting producers mark their entire

WHAT DOES YOUR MIRROR SHOW?

A yellow, sketchy, pimply skin? You also have a dull, tired worn-out feeling? No wonder. Your system is clogged with intestinal poisonous waste. Remove it at once with Schenck's Mandrake Pills. Take them tonight as we tell you and the sallowness and pimples will start to disappear and oh how much brighter the world will look to you.

Schenck's Mandrake Pills are purely vegetable. Thousands of families for three generations have found nothing better than Schenck's Mandrake Pills for cleansing the system of poisons that cause skin trouble.

Get them at your druggist or send 25c for a box (sugar-coated or unsweetened) to

WORRIED CHICAGO PARENTS SEEK MISSING SAILOR SON AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 16—The police of Chicago have requested the New London police to make a search for Charles Frederick Eberhart, whose parents reside in Chicago and who fear that the young man has met with foul play or has suffered an accident that is causing him to be confined in a hospital. They have not received any letters from him in several weeks and he is absent without leave at the submarine base, where he was an enlisted man. The last heard from Eberhart was the latter part of November when he was given a 72-hour furlough and failed to return. Dec. 1, Eberhart was declared to be a deserter, but his parents assert that the youth would not desert for he had always expressed a desire to advance in the navy as rapidly as possible. He had always corresponded with his parents until he disappeared mysteriously when given the leave of absence. The young man is described as being 17, about five feet, 11 1-2 inches in height, weighs about 170 pounds, stout, light brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion.

There were no special developments today in the investigation being made by Detective Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh in their endeavor to obtain clues that might lead to the detection of the bootleggers and distributors of alcohol, believed by the officers to be of a poisonous nature and, which, it is believed, caused the deaths of three or four men here since Thanksgiving. Numerous stills, it is positively known, have been maintained in Waterford, and it would not be surprising if the poisonous alcohol was the output of one or more of the stills operated outside the city limits.

BRIDGEPORT YOUNG MAN THREATENS TO TAKE LIFE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 16—John Saunders, of Bridgeport, is detained at police headquarters, being placed in a cell early this morning because he had threatened to commit suicide. To prevent him from carrying out his threat, Saunders was placed under restraint. Saunders, was a guest at the Hotel Royal, Bank street and at 2.30 o'clock this morning declared that intention to his brothers, Fred Saunders, 265 Orchard street, Bridgeport and George H. Saunders, 109 Burr road, also Bridgeport, who had been at the hotel when their brother threatened to end his life. They went to police headquarters and requested that the police take charge of the young man. Patrolman George Cockell and George Laboue were dispatched to the hotel, but when they arrived there, Saunders had left and his brothers did not know in what direction John had gone, for he had left before they returned. The officers made a search of the streets near the hotel, but failed to find the man. A half hour afterwards, Patrolman Louis Wheeler found Saunders lying on the sidewalk, corner of Howard and Bank streets. He had him taken to police headquarters and placed in a cell. A commission will probably be appointed for the purpose of examining Saunders and determining his sanity. Saunders' brothers said that the young man had been a patient at two New London hospitals, also at Norwich state hospital.

Saunders was examined by physicians this evening and was adjudged insane. He was committed to Norwich State hospital, by City Physician George P. Cheney. Two police officers accompanied Saunders to the hospital.

Five cases of intoxication were given a hearing in the police court today and in every instance, excepting one a fine of $5 and costs was imposed. The other case was disposed of by suspension of judgment.

Harry Rogers of the state armory, Charles Drixing, 642 Bank street; Mrs. Earl New, 33 Potter street and Mrs. Louis Lampert, 60 Bank street, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital were discharged today.

The funeral of Miss Annie A. Weaver was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the First Baptist church, the services being conducted by Rev. Chester H. Howe. The bearers were George W. Peabody, Henry L. Watrous, Richard W. Mansfield and Charles C. Perkins. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

George B. Prest, executor and trustee of the estate of Edward Prest, has sold three building lots, corner of Blackhall street and Garfield avenue, to Nellie Raba, New York.

Police Sergeant Patrick Murphy was unable to perform street duty today, being confined to his home, Bayonet street by a severe cold.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles R. B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the license of Joseph Francis of this city. The right to drive of John Gentilella, 848 Bank street, was denied. Gentilella was convicted and fined in the police court several days ago for driving without a license. The driver's license of James E. Molanson, 54 Hempstead street, suspended three weeks ago, was returned to the owner.

R. E. Cotton of Keene, N. H., who is staying temporarily at 30 Mercer street, made complaint to the police last night that while his automobile was parked in front of the Mercer street house, a thief stole two robes.

In the New London Y. M. C. A. boys' division, owing to the elevation of Judge Alfred Coit from chairman of the boys' work committee to president of the association, there is a vacancy in this office.

Under an arrangement with Chapman Tech High school, members of the classes have the use of the gym at certain periods each afternoon except Saturday.

Every Friday evening now finds the smaller boys' room reserved for the practice of the Banjo club.

With the influx of high school students, the smaller room has been set aside for the use of older boys. A pool table, in excellent condition, has been installed and other features are to be added.

The classes of juniors are picking up and the leagues are under way.

Meeting at 8 each Monday and Thursday there is no more loyal class on the gym floor than the intermediates.

Under the able leadership of Mr. Harris, the Rotary boys' group is numbering sixty this year.

Pale club (employed boys)—This group of boys, in full or part-time employment, meets each Wednesday at 7:30.

At the beginning of the year it looked dark for the Hi-Y group, so many of the former members having gone on to college. But now the club numbers sixteen, and is steadily growing.

The membership of the Junior Dramatic club, which is the only "co-ed" club of the division, is limited, and a waiting list has been created.

The work of painting the interior of the municipal building is progressing and it is expected that the task will have been completed next Saturday night. The painters are now at work on the third floor where the council chamber is located. This room will require the longest time to complete because of decorating the walls. The other offices will be completed as soon as work on the council chamber is concluded.

Two men were arrested tonight by special agents of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad charged with train-riding. They will be presented in the police court tomorrow. The men were detected riding on a freight train as it passed the union station.

Vitorio Fierdecci, residing in the Fort Neck section, was made the defendant in a suit for damages today and which action was instituted by the federal government. The specific charge against Mrs. Fierdecci was stated by the internal revenue department for $8,000 for violation of the prohibition laws. Suit is brought for $8,000 damages. It is alleged that Mrs. Fierdecci, June 24, 1927, defrauded the government of taxes of $1855.25, and on Aug. 19, of the same year, the government should have been paid $5,317.75, which defendant failed to pay. Mrs. Fierdecci, it is claimed, was permitted under the statutes to manufacture certain alcoholic beverages, but failed to pay the tax for which she was supposed to in the manufacture of wines, etc., for her home consumption. Property belonging to Mrs. Fierdecci was attached this afternoon.

Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh will go to Hartford Monday and obtain the signature of Governor John H. Trumbull to extradition papers that will be necessary in order to bring back to New London Peter Pilseaux, former United States Coast Guard sailor, who is under arrest in New York charged with burglary.

Incessant rain interfered with the business of merchants today. A northeast storm set in during last night and continued throughout the day, making out of doors travel extremely disagreeable.

The rain and wind of the past few days have tested the staying qualities of the roping of pine that has been festooned on the poles along the business streets under the colored electric lights. Some of the roping has yielded and fallen, but will be or has been replaced in position.

There is talk that a nice cafeteria, or self-service restaurant, will open in this city. Such a place was established here at one time but failed of success. It is claimed that Norwich has such a place and the projectors declare they can conduct one such in New London.

There has been an exodus of students from Connecticut college today for the holiday recess has begun and the girls have gone to their homes to remain till after the new year sets in. The taxicabs did a rushing business to convey the girls to the railway station.

The stormy weather today kept in port the fishermen who go out and fish in the waters adjacent to Long Island Sound. There is said to be a scarcity of fish in the New York market at present. The absence of fish brought in by the small boats is apparent in the stopping of trucks that carry fish to the big city markets.

No move has been made yet to tear down the Bronstein building at Union and Pearl streets, which has been condemned and which is to be demolished. The property has been tenantless many months. Every window in the building has been broken out and the place is most unsightly.

There have been fewer barges or other craft in the harbor this week than in the same time in several months, it is claimed, along the river front. There is apparently little coal moving at present, whether because the dealers are stocked up or because the mines are not as busy in producing as they have been. The mild weather has limited the consumption of coal thus far this winter and there has been no snow to date. People of limited means are hoping that the weather conditions that have prevailed will continue till after the new year sets in.

Policeman Walter Rehn has been absent from duty nearly three months because of injuries he sustained last September. There is little probability that he will return to police duty for some time.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Out of the darkness intensified by the whistle and warning bells a long piercing shriek ending in a high quavering, sobbing note, then the muffled gasps of a woman in terror—comes "The Ghost Train," which will be the Myrkle-Harder presentation at the Broadway matinee and night today. Everyone has either seen or heard of this wonderful mystery melodrama. It is one of the greatest mysteries conceivable. It has more logic than "The Bat" and "The Cat and Canary" with three times as many thrills. "The Ghost Train" ran for six months at the Copley theatre, Boston, and was a sensation in New York and London the past year.

Breed Theatre

"Paid to Love," an original story by Harry Carr, produced by Fox Films under direction of Howard Hawks, will be the offering at the Breed theatre for three days beginning tomorrow night. This is a colorful romance of a mythical kingdom, with George O'Brien in the role of a Prince. Virginia Valli plays the leading feminine role. The cast includes J. Farrell Macdonald, Hank Mann, Sam Allen and others.

Tonight will be the last opportunity to see Tom Mix and Tony in the finest picture of their career, "The Circus Ace." This is a western that pictures the thrills and excitement as well as the fun of a big circus in which Tom plays an active and colorful role. Natalie Joyce is the girl and Tony, as usual, has an important part.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

A double feature bill will be the attraction at the Broadway theatre on Sunday and Monday. The main feature will be "The Cheer Leader," a peppy snappy college drama featuring Ralph Graves and Gertrude Olmsted.

Here is a clean-cut story of college life and athletics that has everything to recommend it from any way you figure it and it is a practical demonstration that a picture can have a legitimate dramatic punch without the assistance of our old friend, "sex appeal," or similar frayed out devices.

Of course there is romance; what co-ed college could be without it? There are also the wild college pranks which are part of the life of our youth—and there is a football game. This is one of the most exciting things that the screen has offered in some time. The leading figure this time is not on the gridiron. He is leading the cheering section—but it is through him that his team wins. How—we are not going to explain here as we don't want to deprive you of the surprise element which is one of the punches in the picture.

The co-feature will present Bob Custer in "The Fighting Hombre, this stirring story of the west is liberally endowed with action of the highly dramatic order revolving about an intense love story in which Custer and the beautiful daughter of his employer are principals. With its environment in the great reaches of scarcely pioneered regions of the west, "The Fighting Hombre" gains a wholesome appeal of remarkable depth.

Strand Theatre.

Cyclone Bob featuring Bob Reeves is a terrific tornado of thundering thrills. The second male lead is Al Richmond, a well known western star, and Alma Rayford has the leading feminine role. The scene of the story is on a western ranch, and tells of a rancher in love with a girl, whose father is the country's cattle king. How the father opposes the love match and the enemy ranchers try to drive the lover out of the country by tying him to the back of a wild horse and letting the horse loose, how the girl saves her sweetheart and the happy ending, can be enjoyed by seeing this wonderful picture at the Strand on Sunday night. Queen O'Diamonds, showing at the Strand on Sunday night is a story glittering with the glamor and sheen surrounding the romantic figure of a great Broadway show—a struggling young author enshrined in her heart—and their glorious romance amid the blazing lights of New York's Great White Alley! Evelyn Brent is hitting the high places of stardom. And here she is again in a smacking melodrama of love and adventure behind the scarlet curtains that shield the night life of the world's metropolis.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

The final performances of "On Your Toes," starring Reginal Denny are being shown at the Palace theatre, today, in conjunction with a splendid vaudeville program consisting of five acts.

Tomorrow night brings to the screen a double feature program consisting of Bessie Love, Rudolph Schildkraut and Junior Coughan in "A Harp in Hock." The story deals with a Jewish pawnbroker in the Ghetto of New York, who adopts a motherless Irish boy—a comradeship that involves both in trouble. The companion feature is a starring vehicle for Tom Tyler, "Cyclone of the Range." As the name implies this is a western drama of real action and thrills galore and should satisfy those seeking excitement in their screen entertainment.

The feature photoplay for Monday is based on the story from the pen of Louis Joseph Vance, "Alias the Lone Wolf." Starring in the picture are Bert Lytell and Lois Wilson. It would be unfair to reveal all the details of the plot, or the manner in which jewels are stolen and then replaced. However it is a mystery drama that has all the allure associated with stealthy figures moving in the dark, menacing shadows, and plotting and counterplotting. The thrills in this production are indeed many.

Five acts of vaudeville round out the program, together with a comedy subject and the Metro News events. nvEymeC;s-dulpcofpuytcl'on nu nu nn

With the Poets at Y. M. C. A. Sunday.

An afternoon service of unique interest is arranged at the Norwich Young Men's Christian association on the coming Sunday at 4 o'clock in the big gymnasium. These four great poets, namely Whittier, Poe, Holmes and Bryant will be portrayed on the screen in moving pictures. Whittier, often called America's most beloved poet will be the tracing of his life in New England, and the dramatising of two of his most famous poems, "The Barefoot Boy" and "Maud Muller."

The picture of "The Tragic Genius of America," Edgar Allen Poe, gives a brief sketch of his early life and dramatizes the most beautiful of all his poems, "Annabel Lee."

The reel on Oliver Wendell Holmes, gives a pictorial biography of the life and works of Harvard's most famous poet and man of letters; scenes around Harvard, Cambridge and Boston and a short dramatization of "The Height of the Ridiculous."

William Cullen Bryant will be represented on the scene by the interpretation of the lines from his classic, "Thanatopsis," and "The Crowded Street."

To this unusual service the adult public is cordially invited, both men and women. Parents may bring children who are twelve or over, but children will not be admitted alone.

The usual music will be furnished by Hugh Kinder and a brief talk will be given.

GREENEVILLE

A social hour and shower of pearls took place in the assembly hall in St. Mary's Memorial church, Friday evening at 8 o'clock with a large gathering attending in spite of the bad weather and with much enthusiasm manifested.

A surprise party was held Friday evening at the home of Patrick O'Connor of Russell Road with 20 invited guests being present. The home was decorated with Christmas effects. Music was furnished by radio for dancing. Guests were present from Jewett City, Plainfield, Willimantic and New London. Fruit salad, assorted cakes, fancy cookies ice cream and coffee were served.

The N. M. Sewing circle of Greeneville met Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Alvin Barrows of Tyler avenue. Refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Harold Wickham of North Main street.

Mrs. Charles Smith of 385 Boswell avenue is spending a few days at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Casey in Providence.

TAFTVILLE

The members of the Taftville Girls' Athletic club are planning to give a musical entertainment in the near future and they are holding rehearsals frequently for the event.

Scoutmaster Victor H. Davis was in charge of the regular weekly meeting of the members of Troop 3, Boy Scouts held Friday evening in the recreation rooms in the basement of the Taftville Congregational church.

The official reports given out by the state of New York regarding the hunting season there has caused quite a bit of comment among the members of the Taftville Rod and Gun club, for the reports state that the Hungarian partridge which was introduced into the state some years ago has multiplied rapidly and is breeding very satisfactorily. Native grouse are slowly being extinguished, as all the Taftville sportsmen agree, and many of them favor a closed season on these birds for some time. A few years ago the state of Connecticut invested thousands of dollars in Hungarian partridge and liberated them within the confines of the state, but so far as can be learned, not one of them was seen after they were liberated. It is certain that none were killed in this locality and where they all went to has up till now baffled the sportsmen. In spite of this, many of the members of the local club feel that the Hungarian partridge is the coming bird, and they are sure that they would give better satisfaction as such, than the pheasants which are now being liberated. The former bird is a faster flyer and it is said it will not disturb the native grouse which the ringneck pheasant is accused of doing. It is hoped to have a treatise on the Hungarian partridge available in the near future for reference.

The Community Christmas tree in the Memorial park at the corner of Norwich avenue and South B street has been placed in position.

With every brook and creek filled to overflowing and a heavy rainfall all day Thursday, it became one of the topics of the town as to how much more water the Shetucket river would hold. The river is now running fully as high as it did during the time of the New England floods a few weeks ago, and the end does not appear to be in sight.

Mrs. Napoleon T. Parent of South Second avenue has been a recent visitor in New London.

There was no meeting of the National Loomfixers association of Taftville on Wednesday evening but the annual meeting will be held tonight at which time there will be the election of officers.

CHRISTMAS PRESENT FOR FINISHING CO. STOCKHOLDERS

Stockholders of the United States Finishing company of whom there are many in this city, received something in the nature of a pleasant Christmas present Friday when announcement was made from New York that the directors had authorized an extra dividend of 2 per cent. on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividends of 1 1-4 per cent. on the common and 1 3-4 per cent. on the preferred. Common stock dividends are payable Jan. 16.

FORECLOSURES BY DEFAULT IN TWO SUITS IN SUPERIOR COURT

Foreclosure by default for failure to disclose defense was directed by Judge John Rufus Booth in two cases at the short calendar session of the superior court here Friday morning.

In the foreclosure suit brought by Winthrop Trust company of New London, executor of the estate of Byron M. O'Brien, late of Groton, against Hattie B. Gorman, administratrix of the estate of Edward R. Gorman, on property on Latham street, Groton, on which there was a $1,650 mortgage, dated Oct. 16, 1922, foreclosure was granted in the sum of $1,716.30 and the redemption date set at the first Tuesday in February.

In the New London foreclosure suit of Otto Loesch against Elizabeth Jeter Green for a $4,000 mortgage, dated May 3, 1926, on property at Cross and Green streets, judgment was for $3,955 and the redemption date the first Tuesday in February.

Motion to Set Aside

Judge Booth reserved decision after hearing the arguments of motion to set aside verdict and for remittitur in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Morris against Morris J. and Lucie A. Anderson in which the plaintiff was given a verdict for $2,650.

Guardian Ad Litem Appointed

State Attorney Arthur M. Brown was appointed guardian ad litem for Bessie Pearl Dorsey who is a patient in the Norwich state hospital and from whom her husband, John Roland Dorsey of New London is seeking to secure divorce. A motion for appointment of alienist to examine the defendant went off at suggestion of the court. Mrs. Dorsey has been in the hospital since 1913.

Claims in Schwartz Case

Decision was reserved on the claim of Thomas E. America of Washington, D. C., in the case of the Paty Schwartz Co., of which Joseph Schwartz was an officer. Mr. America presented a note alleged to be signed by Joe Schwartz for which he is attempting to secure payment. The Washington man claimed he received the note from another man who owed him $1,300.

Attorney C. Hadlai Hull was confirmed as temporary receiver of the 325 State Street Corp. of New Haven as a result of the application by the New Haven bank, N. B. A., which as trustee of the bond holders brought suit. The bank holds a second mortgage for $130,000.

Frank L. Cook of New London and Boston, Mass., was appointed as receiver for the Ideal Coat and Apron Supply company of New London, for a period of three months, from Jan. 6, to succeed himself. According to Attorney Thomas M. Troland, the receiver has made a profit of over $1,000 a month since he took over the management.

Alimony in the amount of $12 a week was awarded to Laura E. Brown of Groton, mother of five small children, pending the outcome of her divorce petition against Henry E. Brown, also of Groton.

JUDGE BOOTH GRANTS THREE DIVORCE PETITIONS

Three divorces were granted here Friday by Judge John Rufus Booth at the superior court short calendar session.

Margaret H. Dearing, of Poquetanuck, was granted a divorce from John W. Dearing of this city, with change of name to Margaret H. Baer. They were married Jan. 23, 1920, and the divorce was granted on the grounds of habitual intemperance for more than a year past.

Laura Lamontagne Chappell, who married Lawrence Joseph Chappell, of New London, secured a divorce from him on grounds of intolerable cruelty since their marriage day. She was given the custody of four children, aged 11, 10, 5 and three years. Chappell is a marine stationed in the Philippine Islands. They were married Dec. 14, 1914, and the plaintiff claimed that during but one period of but two months she received 19 black eyes Deputy Sheriff J. H. Tubbs testified as to one time she was bruised up and that her husband said at the time he wouldn't do it again.

Mary Grant Dodson, of New London, was granted a divorce from Willard E. Dodson, now of parts unknown. They were married Nov. 1, 1923, and she alleged desertion on Jan. 4, 1924. The court gave her custody of their three-year-old son.

Judge Booth took the papers in the case of James Morsicata, of New London, against Angelina Morsicata, also of that city. They were married Oct. 13, 1915, and have two children.

Judge Booth said that in the case of Dorothy Smith Avery, of New London, who seeks a divorce on the grounds of intolerable cruelty from Lauriston Smith Avery, mental cruelty would constitute intolerable cruelty if it affected her physically. Attorney Morgan for petitioner, placed Dr. Graham Urquhardt on the stand and the physician recalled a visit by Mrs. Avery and he said her mental and physical condition at the time might have been caused by her husband's treatment. Judge Booth took the papers in the case.

The case of Thelma Oram Harris against Russell S. Harris, of New London, went off the list.

WEST HARTFORD MAN PURCHASER OF "COSSADUX"

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 16—Christopher M. Gallup of West Hartford has purchased the real estate in North Stonington formerly owned and occupied by the late Edward Man and Mary Hewitt Man, his widow, and known as "Cossadux." The property is located on both sides of the Norwich and Westerly highway, adjoining property of Thomas B. Hewitt, and comprises the large manor house, a farmer's house, barns and various farm buildings, and has about 160 acres of farm and wood lands.

This estate was acquired by Mr. Man about 18 years ago through the purchase of several smaller farms adjoining each other, and at that time the old original farm house was torn down to the framework and the present house was built on this foundation.

It is understood that the purchaser who bought the property through Frank W. Coy, Westerly real estate agent, will use the main house as a permanent residence, and with a manager installed in the farmer's house, will enter the poultry farming business on an extensive scale.

MILK AND CHRISTMAS SEALS GO HAND IN HAND

Evidence of co-operation on the part of some of the leading Norwich business concerns with the work of the Christmas Seal committee is daily being manifested.

The Avery Farms, one of the city's best known dairies, seeing the novelty of the idea and desiring to wish their patrons "Merry Christmas" purchased a large quantity of Christmas seals and pasted on their milk bottle which were delivered to their customers Friday morning.

Several business firms have made plans for seals to be placed on their monthly bills and one of the largest factories in the city will have a seal on the pay envelope of every employe.

The Christmas seal is a bond of humanity.

BISHOP ANDERSON IN NORWICH SUNDAY MORNING

Bishop William F. Anderson of the New England area of the Methodist Episcopal church is to preach Sunday morning at the 10:30 o'clock service at the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church.

Bishop Anderson is widely known as one of the ablest statesmen of his denomination. He has oversight of all Methodist Episcopal churches in New England a total of about 1,000 to which he gives vigorous leadership. He is active and virile despite his years of service. Physically he is tall and graceful and of distinguished appearance. He served with distinction as leader of the educational interests of this church before he was elected to the episcopacy. He has recently made a careful personal inspection tour of the stricken sections of Vermont. He will talk to the men briefly at the Sunday school hour.

CHEER UP MESSAGE TO BE GIVEN IN SERMON

At the Central Baptist church Sunday evening the "Cheer Up! Man" Pastor Edward Eells, will unfold the science of happiness in his helpful talk "Cheer Up! A Call to the Life Worth While." This address has been enthusiastically praised during four years in six states. Pastor J. Harlow Graham of Trinity Methodist church says of it: "I have no hesitation whatever in stating Rev. Edward Eells will charm any kind of audience with his message. He and it are absolutely unique. His talks come gently without urging, with a naivette and an artistry that are irrestible. And he has a real message." Not only pastors but editors and presidents of men's clubs, Kiwanis clubs and delighted listeners join in appreciative comments. An old gentleman in Oxford, Mass., explained "You should have a thousand dollars every time you give it" The pastor of a Baptist church in Huntington, Mass., declared "He could easily have kept his audience with him another hour," and another in Amherst condenses his comment into a sentence: "Cheer up! You won't go to sleep."

In the morning the nursery will be conducted as usual in the cradle roll room during the morning worship and those in charge would be glad to have a larger number of young children to care for. The pastor will preach on "Isaiah and His Messianic Prophecies."

COST CLOSE TO $3,000,000 FOR C. V. REHABILITATION

Between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 will be required to reconstruct the Central Vermont railroad as a result of damage done by the flood of a month ago, according to a statement made at St. Albans, Vt., Thursday by Judge John W. Redmond of Newport, Vt., one of the temporary receivers appointed by Federal Judge Howe at Burlington on Monday to take over direction of the road's affairs. Receiver Redmond's statement was the first announcement of the amount of money required to restore the line to normal operating conditions. He declared that restoration of service would be accomplished as soon as is humanly possible.

Although there is a total of $12,836,300 in refunding bonds of the Central Vermont railroad outstanding, which were guaranteed by the Grand Trunk Railway Co., and assumed by the Canadian National railway, as its successor, the offer of the latter road to take up such bonds, upon presentation in New York, with payment in New York funds with interest to date, was taken advantage by holders of only $169,000 of that total. In financial circles, it was taken to mean that bondholders of the Central Vermont are satisfied that the Central Vermont will successfully meet the financial strain caused by ravages of the flood.

The action of the Canadian National, in offering to take up such bonds, is said to be the first instance of a railway agreeing to take up outstanding bonds of a subsidiary in receivership prior to maturity of the bonds.

The work of rehabilitation of the road is proceeding at a rapid rate and will be continued as expeditiously as possible.

PARK CHURCH FEDERATION HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of Park Church Federation was called to order at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon in the parlors of the Osgood Memorial by the president, Mrs. Frank Hempstead.

For the devotional exercises she read from Luke II, 1 to 22 verses, of the birth of the Savior and offered prayer.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved; also the annual reports of both these officers, that of the secretary, Mrs. James A. Bidwell showing the many and varied activities of all the different departments of the federation, proving a very real interest in each one, and a great amount of accomplished work.

The treasurer, Mrs. Howard L. Stanton showed a good balance to start the new year.

A recommendation from the executive board was received, to buy 100 pieces of china, 50 cups and 50 plates, for the use of the young people. An amendment to this motion asked that a committee be appointed to look into the matter and report at the next meeting. Also the federation were asked to approve the action of the executive board in sending to Mrs. W. Clayton Burgy and to Mrs. E. A. Harris a gift of $10 each in appreciation of their faithfulness in positions recently resigned by them.

Letters of thanks from each were read, Mrs. Burgy stating that she would buy something to be useful near her piano, and Mrs. Harris to start a bank book for her son Paul. It was suggested that a shower of cards be sent to Mrs. Burgy and the following telegram of greeting from her was read:

Would that I could fly in the Spirit of St. Louis and join you in your Xmas party today. Many thanks for your kind remembrance to me. I send love to each and every member of federation and wishes for merry Christmas and happy New Year. God bless you all.

VANDALIA BURGY.

Mrs. William Allen presented a gift of $25 toward china as a memorial to her cousin, Mrs. Emily Pierce Wattles, with whom she had often "washed dishes."

It was voted that only the interest of the $1,000 bequest of Mrs. Mildred Blackmar should be used, as far as possible.

After the Christmas carols, six little children in white gowns carrying candles came in and sat before the open fire and opened their gifts, their stockings hanging from the mantle. Ruth Prentice recited "Twas the Night Before Christmas." The others were Janet Pullen, Betty Wolf, Nancy Kimball, Emily and Arthur Page. This was arranged by the program committee, Miss Louise Howe, who took Mrs. Burgy's place, Mrs. E. J. Graham, Mrs. H. L. Stanton, Miss Hannah Crowell and Mrs. O. L. Johnson. NAMES OF LOEB AND LEOPOLD ARE LINKED WITH ROBBERY

CHICAGO, Dec. 16—(AP)—The names of Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, slayers of Bobbie Frank, now serving life sentence in the state prison at Joliet, were linked with yesterday's robbery of the University of Chicago, by police tonight.

Investigation of the robbery, in which nearly $23,000 was taken, brought a statement from the chief of police that some one familiar with the institution's business office planned the holdup. Other evidence uncovered indicates, according to the police, the job was done by former inmates of the state prison.

Both Loeb and Leopold were at one time students at the University of Chicago. Questioning university officers, the police learned Loeb and Leopold had frequently cashed checks at the purser's office during university days, and were familiar with the building.

NORWICH BIRDS BEST IN NEW LONDON POULTRY SHOW

A pen of young Black Langshans, owned by George Wilson of this city, captured the Governor's cup for the best pen of birds in the 17th show of the Southern New England Poultry association, now being held in the state armory at New London. The judges, Louis C. Bonfoey of Saybrook and Louis P. Ives of Guilford, in selecting the first pen, centered their attention on the Langshans, a pen of Dark Brahmas, owned by Selectman Henry J. Latham of Groton, and a pen of White Plymouth Rocks, owned by Harold Doney of Westerly. The judges appeared to have difficulty in selecting the best birds, for much time was spent in judging the merits of all birds in each of the three pens.

The Langshans, however, were predicted as winners by poultrymen at the show, for they were superior to the White Rocks, and as the Dark Brahmas are parti-colored birds it was said that they would be handicapped in the judging.

A silver loving cup, donated by Senator Hiram Bingham for the best standard bred male bird, was captured by the first prize White Rock cock, owned by Mr. Doney. The best female, which took the secretary of state's cup, was a White Rock pullet, owned by Mr. Doney. The best bantam in the show was a first prize winning Golden Seabright hen, owned by A. A. Haley of Mystic. The best in the English class was a Buff Orpington, owned by W. D. Fesler of New London. A first prize White Leghorn cockerel, owned by Thomas Thorpe of Westerly, was the best in the Mediterranean class. The first prize White Rock pullet, which took the secretary of state's cup, was adjudged the best bird in the American class. The best in the Asiatic class was the first prize Black Langshan pullet, owned by George Wilson of Norwich.

MOTOR TRUCK CAME NEAR PLUNGING OFF BRIDGE

Gregory Longo, 17, of Boswell avenue narrowly escaped a plunge off Preston bridge into the Shetucket river about 8 o'clock Friday morning when the Maxwell delivery truck he was driving skidded on the bridge. The machine slid about 50 feet on the icy surface, climbed onto the sidewalk and the front end crashed through the iron railing. All that stopped the truck from going off the bridge was the eight inch curb which held the rear wheels from climbing onto the sidewalk. Part of the front end of the machine was suspended above the river.

Longo and Philip St. Lawrence, who was riding with him, jumped from the truck. Longo was driving the machine back to the Broadway Fish market where he is employed. As he approached the bridge Longo realized that he had forgotten to deliver a package in the East Side section and applied the brakes, intending to turn around. The machine zigzagged across the bridge on the icy highway. About 10 feet of the iron railing fell into the river and the curb was moved nearly two inches at the point where the machine struck it. There was apparently little damage to the truck. Temporary repairs were made to the bridge.

SUPERVISOR SPOKE FOR PRESTON PARENT-TEACHERS

The monthly meeting of the Preston Parent-Teachers association was held at the Poquetanuck school house Wednesday evening. After the business meeting of the association over which Mrs. Appleton Main presided, the audience was entertained by the following program arranged by Miss Mary Corcoran; Humorous reading by Mr. Perry of Norwich, entitled a Real Yankee. This was followed by a dance by Miss Genevieve Haley and Miss Jennie Genusweska. Another recitation by Mr. Perry was well rendered and received well merited applause. James F. Connelly, supervisor of the schools of Preston, gave an interesting talk on his trip to the Holy Land and showed several souvenirs, among which was a flask containing water from the River Jordan and photographs taken in native costume. The members of the committee for the January meeting are Mrs. Charles Harkness, Mrs. Kingsborger and Mr. and Mrs. George Lamphere.

FINED IN CITY COURT ON WET DRIVING CHARGE

When Oscar Hanson, U. S. coast guard, was presented in the city court Friday morning on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor, he pleaded not guilty claiming that he was stunned in the accident which accounted for his condition resulting in the charge against him. However several witnesses testified that he was under the influence of liquor and Judge Arthur P. Libby fined him the customary $200 and costs.

Hanson was arrested by Constable L. A. Fenton Thursday night after the machine Hanson was driving ran into an automobile driven by Michael Shea of Jewett City on the Gallows Hill road. A shot gun and about 30 shells were found in Hanson's car, and another man who had been riding with him escaped before the arrival of the officer.

Both machines were somewhat damaged in the crash, but no one was hurt, except Hanson, who claimed that he was stunned.

CONNECTICUT JURISDICTION FOR C. V. R. R. RECEIVERS

Judge Edwin S. Thomas in federal court at Hartford Thursday, appointed George A. Gaston of New York and Judge John W. Redmond of Newport, Vt., ancillary receivers for the Central Vermont railroad in this state. Action of Judge Thomas was taken upon petition of attorneys of the Canadian National Railways, owner of two-thirds of the stock of the Central Vermont and principal creditor of the latter road. Their jurisdiction was extended to Massachusetts under order of Federal Judge James A. Lowell at Boston on the 13th, and Thursday's action by Judge Thomas gives them jurisdiction over all Central Vermont property in this state.

SUIT IS WITHDRAWN AGAINST HUBBELL ESTATE

A suit brought for $5,000 damages by Ellen Dumont, of this city, against Martin E. Jensen, administrator of the estate of the late Algernon S. Hubbell, of this city, has been withdrawn without costs from the superior court. Mr. Hubbell died on Jan. 29, 1927.

The suit was brought on the grounds that an oral agreement was entered into on June 21, 1921, between the plaintiff and defendant wherein in consideration of the plaintiff going to live in one of the tenements in the house where Mr. Hubbell lived at 272 Franklin street and served him from time to time and be subject to such demands as he might make upon her, as long as he should live, he promised to give her, the property at his death, by will or otherwise.

The plaintiff claimed that she lived there and carried out her part of the claimed agreement until Oct. 1, 1926, when M. Hubbell refused to carry out his part. She claimed that she was never compensated for her services which were worth $30 per week for the 278 weeks from June 1, 1921 to Oct. 1, 1926, a total of $5,560.

The suit was brought in August of this year after the claim had been disallowed by the administrator.

SUB. S-4 WAS SUNK OFF PROVINCETOWN WHEN HIT BY DESTROYER SATURDAY P. M. SIX OF THE CREW KNOWN TO BE ALIVE

The Destroyer Paulding Hit the S-4 as the Submarine Was Coming to the Surface—Huge Hole Was Stove Near the Conning Tower—The Sub is Resting on the Ocean Floor in 100 Feet of Water—It is Believed That a Large Number of the Crew Must Have Perished in the Collision——Pontoons Are Being Dispatched to the Scene From New London and Brooklyn—May Be Two or Three Days Before the Rescuers Will Be Able to Lift the S-4.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 18—(AP)—Six men imprisoned in the punctured hull of the submarine S-4 which lies on the ocean floor in 100 feet of water off Provincetown harbor were hopefully awaiting rescue while their span of life grew rapidly less.

Divers who went down to survey the hull of the submarine, rammed and sunk yesterday by the coast guard cutter Paulding, brought back the pathetic story of an undersea conversation conducted on either side by rappings on the steel hull. "How long will you be?" was the question asked and repeated by six men, perhaps the sole survivors of the S-4 crew, from their prison in the forward topedo compartment of the vessel. But the only answer the rescuers could give to the plea was a qualified one.

"We are doing everything possible," the divers tapped out in the international code.

There was no serious gas condition in the compartment, the submarine men said, but the air was poor. Air lines were applied to the valves of the sunken vessel and immediate steps were taken to supply those within with purer atmosphere, but even the most optimistic among the officers of the salvage fleet expressed little hope that the lives of the men would be saved. The damage to the hull of the submarine appeared to be very great.

Pontoons despatched from New London, Conn., and Brooklyn, N. Y., were delayed by wind and rough seas, and had not reached here early tonight. It was admitted that raising the submarine by pontoon, especially in prevailing weather conditions, would require considerable time. Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, in charge of the work of salvage, said every effort would be made to speed up the work.

During the more than 24 hours that the men on board the S-4 were imprisoned before their messages were heard hope and despair had alternated in the hearts of those directing salvage operations.

The first ray of hope came when early today the hull was located by means of an anchor, later the S-8, a sisters ship of hte S-4, was able to receive replies to signals, divers who went down from the mine sweeper Falcon signalled by means of hammers and received replies from the forward torpedo compartment. Finally the actual messages were exchanged.

The report of the divers that there was a large hole on the starboard side of the S-4 under the control compartment, led to the belief that a large number of the crew must have perished in the collision, while there was no definite proof that men were not still alive in other parts of the hull, officers said it was unlikely that compartments other than the forward torpedo section had escaped flooding.

A stiff breeze was blowing tonight, stirring up a heavy chop in the open sea off Wood End, where the submarine went down. Three mine sweepers with the Falcon in the center, acted as the base for diving operations. The submarine tenders Wandank and Bushnell were anchored some distance off while four coast guard cruisers moved about. Strong searchlights from the navy vessels lighted up the scene.

Captain E. J. King who had charge of salvage operations in the case of the S-51, sunk off Block Island two years, arrived here today by seaplane to perform a similiar service, while a fast navy destroyer went to Boston tonight to meet Commander Edward Ellsberg.

MAY TAKE THREE DAYS TO LIFT THE SUNKEN SUB

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—(AP)—A message from Rear Admiral Brumby to the navy department tonight said that divers had found six men alive in the torpedo room of the sunken submarine S-4 off Provincetown, Mass.

The message added that air was being pumped to the submarine tanks and that a conversation, by means of hammer knocks on the submarine's hull, had taken place between the divers and the men inside the torpedo room.

No further details were given in the message which was sent at 7.55 p. m. This indicated that the rescue work was proceeding despite heavy seas and darkness.

Navy officials were jubilant over the Brumby message and immediately it was received. Secretary Wilbur telephone President Coolidge.

Three torpedo men listed in the navy records as members of the crew of S-4 when she went down after colliding with the coast guard destroyer Paulding, were Russel Archibald Crabb of San Diego, Frank Sniser of Ridgefield Park, N. J. and Roger Leslie Short of Boonville, Me.

These three, navy officials believe, undoubtedly were among the six men found alive in the topedo room of the craft.

Belief that it would be two or three days before rescuers lifted the S-4 from her stranded position on the bottom of the sea was indicated tonight by officers in commenting on the fact that one of the pontoons en route from the Brooklyn navy yard to the scene of the disaster had broken loose from its carrier.

Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operation, said this made little difference because it probably would not be needed for two or three days. Ten pontoons in all were being carried to the S-4's assistance.

The weather bureau said tonight that bad conditions for rescue operations were existing tonight at Provincetown, where a barometric reading of 29.50 and an 18 to 28 mile wind reported. There was a low pressure area over Newfoundland and the weather was expected to continue adverse tomorrow near the rescue scene.

STORY OF THE COLLISION AS TOLD BY ENSIGN

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The submarine S-4 rolled over and sank bow first when the destroyer Paulding hit the undersea craft, officers of the Paulding said today in describing the crash.

Ensign George Phannemiller, who was on watch on the Paulding at the time, gave this version of the collision:

"I saw the periscope first but thought it was a fish stick, the marker which fishermen use for their nets. I shifted the helm because I did not want to get this supposed stick jammed in our screw. Next, I saw a part of the submarine's conning tower. Then the crash came.

"The submarine turned over and sank bow first at an angle of 40 degrees within a few minutes."

A statement issued by the officers of the coast guard cutter Tampa, through Captain Malloy, senior coast guard officer, described the accident.

"The Paulding was patrolling the vicinity of Cape Cod on the afternoon of December 17, the statement said. "The visibility was good and the weather was good. The first intimation of the presence of a submarine was when her periscope emerged from the water directly in front, too close to avoid. Then the helm of the Paulding was shifted and full speed given.

"The Paulding struck the submarine forward of the conning tower, ripping a long hole in the underwater body of the submarine which rolled over and sank within a few minutes."

No one on board the Paulding saw anyone on the submarine at any time before or after the collision. The Paulding lowered a life boat which searched for any survivors from the submarine but found none.

The Pauling then dropped a buoy to mark the spot where the submarine sank. The Pauling was then filling with water but manager to get into Provincetown harbor."

S-4 MORE BADLY DAMAGED THAN WAS THE S-51

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Divers who inspected the hull of the sunken submarine S-4 today reported that the vessel suffered more serious wounds in her collision yesterday with the coast guard destroyer Paulding than those which sank the S-51 off Block Island two years ago, when that sunbmarine was rammed by the steamship City of Rome.

The divers said the S-4 had a large hole in her starboard side eight feet forward of the gun and into about the center line. This is slightly forward of the conning tower.

Answers to the signals of the divers came from the forward torpedo compartment, and the men said there was a possibility that there were life also in the after compartment. The position of the hole in the hull indicated that the control compartment was flooded.

"LUCKY KELLEY" HAS HAD PREVIOUS EXPERIENCE

CHICAGO, Dec. 18—(AP)—Charles Beresford Calcott, 19-year old machinist's mate aboard the ill fated S-4, when she sank, was aboard the S-7 when it sank several years ago off Goat Island in the Pacific.

Young Calcott has three sisters and two brothers living in Chicago and its suburbs to whom he is known as "Lucky Kelly."

NEW LONDON MAN IS ABOARD THE SUNKEN SUB

NEW LONDON, Dec. 18—(AP)—Arthur Frederick Hodges, machinist's mate aboard the submarine S-4 when it sunk off Providencetown yesterday, was the second son of Mrs Sophia Kenerson, of New London to meet with disaster at sea. The first was Wallace Hodges who was drowned 12 years ago when the tug T. A. Scott was sunk by a Grman submarine off New London.

Mrs. Kenerson, a widow, learned today that her son, Arthur, was one of the crew of the S-4. When the news was broken to her she collapsed and her condition was reported as critical.

DIVER ASSERTS THAT SIGNALS WERE ANWERED

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 18—(AP)—When a navy diver knocked against the wall of the torpedo room of the sunken submarine S-4 today his signals were answered but no answer came to knocks on the control room. This information was contained in a report received at the submarine base hers from the mine sweeper Falcon, engaged in rescue work off Provincetown.

The report said that Diver Thomas Eady found a large hole on the starboard side of the S-4 and forward of the gun, which is in front of the conning tower.

No signals were possible from the engine room and motor room of the submarine, the message said, because the decks were obstructed by radio antenna wires and other debris.

When the report was sent the divers were securing salvage air lines to the tanks, preparatory to rescue attempts.

Colonel Lindbergh Saw Two Bull Fights

Disregarded Protests From Humane Societies in the United States.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today saw not only one but two bull fights, despite some sixty protests from individuals and humane societies in the United States against his thus giving countenance to the Mexican national sport.

The finest that Mexico can produce in the way of bull fighting, horsemanship, lass[illegible] cowboy stunts, native dances [illegible]or parades, were marshalled [illegible] delectation of the flyer. He performed at a "charro," or lassoing and riding exhibition, in the morning. In the afternoon the flyer attended one of the regular Sunday afternoon bull fights which always draw great crowds, but which broke a record today by attracting more than 20,000 fans, packing the grandstands to utmost capacity.

Sandwiched in between these two performances was a review of more than 100,000 workmen who paraded in the central section of the Mexican capital to show their affection and admiration for the flying colonel. The young aviator watched the processions from a balcony of the presidential palace. With him were Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, Secretary ofindustry and Commerce Luis Morones, and other high government officials.

The parade was organized by the Regional Federation of Labor, Mexico's foremost labor organization, which was created and is still dominated by Morones. The parade was the only one ever given for any foreigner.

In regard to his attendance at the bull fight Colonel Lindbergh said that it was impossible for him, while a national guest of Mexico, to decline an invitation to see one of the country's favorite sports, even though that invitation was not part of his official program.

Ambassador Morrow, who also received a number of protests against Lindbergh's acceptance, took the position that it was Lindb[illegible]gh's per[illegible]al affair and not to be construed as either approval or disapproval of bull fighting but as courteous conduct on the part of the nation's guest.

The Charro exhibition, arranged by the National Association of Charros, was a picturesque demonstration of skillful horsemanship. The cavaliers were headed by General Roberto Cruz chief of police of Mexico City, who is one of the most noted horsemen in the nation.

WOULD LEAVE CONVICTED CRIMINALS TO EXPERTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith's proposal that disposition of convicted criminals be left to a board of medical and legal experts bears the same relation to progress in criminology that the declaration of independence does to American history, Professor Harry E. Barnes, of Smith college, declared today.

Speaking before the Freethinkers' society of New York, Professor Barnes said that such a proposal, "coming from so eminent an executive as the governor of New York is in striking contrast to the attitude of mind shown in the so-called Baumes law.

"Governor Smith's idea," he said, "is as far advanced over the Baumes law as Einstein's theory is over the ancient, crude ideas of astrology. The governor's proposal is too timid and too moderate, but it is, nevertheless a long stop forward and an encouraging recognition of the modern trend for scientific criminology."

50 MEN WERE RESCUED FROM SUB IN LONG ISLAND SOUND

BRIDGEPORT, Dec. 18—(AP)—Hope for the rescue of the 42 men in the United States submarine S-4, which sank after a collision with the United States destroyer Sturyevant recalls the rescue of 50 men from the United States submarine S-48 which sank in Long Island sound on December 7, 1921.

The men were trapped in the craft for 11 hours before an oil tug saw S. O. S. signals flashed by about a dozen of the crew who had clambered through torpedo tubes to the stern of the boat which protruded from the water.

The S-48 set out on a trial trip to New London with 50 men, including navy officers and officials of the Lake Torpedo Boat company in the forenoon. When about four miles off Penfield Reef, the submarine made a sudden nose dive to the bottom of the sound and the craft did not respond to her operating gear. Chiang Kai Shk replied by wire, saying that he and his associates accepted full responsibility for the break, but that it was brought about by Russian interference in Chinese affairs.

SAYS EX-DRY DIRECTOR LACKS FACTS FOR CHARGES

WATERBURY, Dec. 18—(AP)—"Major Chester P. Mills, ex-prohibition director of the New York and Connecticut district, does not have the facts to substantiate his statement that Waterbury and New Haven are two of the wettest and wickedest of the eastern cities," said Rev. R. H. White, assistant superintendent of the Connecticut Temperance and Anti-Saloon league in an address today at the Grace Methodist church. "It is never fair to make comparisons as each city has its own problems and conditions," he said.

"If the enforcement of prohibition requires a higher type of officials than now control our public affairs we can and we will obtain such men rather than surrender the rights and privileges bestowed on us by the eighteenth amendment."

PRISON GUARD ARRESTED ON SUSPICION OF MURDER

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—(AP)—A fellow guard was arrested today charged with suspicion of murder in connection with the shooting to death of two guards in the banking offices of the real estate trust company last night.

The prisoner, George Roffel, was held without bail by a magistrate for a further hearing. Authorities declined to state what they had learned to cast suspicion on Roffel, a former policeman, except that he had a prison record. Some of the detectives advanced the theory that Roffel had shot the other guards, Harris Jones, of Oaklyn, N. J., and Harry Webb, of this city, during a quarrel.

The bodies were found in different parts of the building, one in the savings department and the other in the trust department. A pistol from which four shots had been fired was found near the body of Webb.

KIDNAPED GIRL WAS SLAIN; PARTS OF HER BODY FOUND

Fiend Murdered 12 Year Old Los Angeles Girl—Abductor Had Demanded $1,500 Ransom Which Had Been Paid—Portions of the Body Were Found by Police in Elysian Park, Los Angeles—Separate Packages Contained the Little Victim's Two Legs and the Two Forearms—The Girl's Mutilated Body Had Been Thrown From an Automobile Upon a Lawn Near the Home of Her Father, Perry M. Parker, Assistant Cashier of the Los Angeles First National Trust and Savings Bank.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Dismembered portions of the body of little Marian Parker, kidnaped last Thursday, and part of whose remains were returned to her father last night by her abductor-killer in return for $1,500 ransom, were found by police today in Elysian park here.

Despite an all night search by hundreds of police and detectives and posses of citizens, no trace could be found of the fiend who stole and murdered the little 12-year old school girl.

A member of one of the civilian posse made the grewsome find this morning by the side of a road leading into the beautiful Hill Park area of Eastern Los Angeles. Wrapped in newspapers in four separate packages were the little victim's two legs and the two forearms.

Captain of etectives Herman Cline said that from the location of the gruesome bundles beside the road, it was apparent that the murderer had driven through Elysian park some time during the night and thrown the packages out one by one. They were scattered along the roadway for some distance.

Immediately upon receipt of the information that the dismembered parts of the slain girl's body had been located, Captain Cline dispatched men from the homicide squad to the scene with instructions to note each bit of evidence available before moving the packages.

Surveilliance was continued today over every means of transportation from the city and the police were confident that the murdered still was in Los Angeles, afraid to leave.

What appeared to be a possible clue was shattered at 2 o'clock this morning when Herman Cline, chief of police detectives, announced that one suspect arrested at Rustic Canyon, near Santa Monica, had been released.

The girl's mutilated body was thrown from an automobile upon a lawn near the home of her father, Perry M. Parker, assistant cashier of the Los Angeles First National Trust and Savings bank.

Parker received a telephone call at his home at 7:15 o'clock last night instructing him to proceed to the corner of Fifth street and Manhattan place with $1,500 in gold certificates and his daughter would be returned.

Soon after the father arrived at the designated spot a small machine drew up alongside Parker's automobile. In the seat beside the driver, the banker saw his child. He was told by the kidnaper that the girl was asleep.

"Here's your child," he said to Parker. "Give me the money and follow instructions. She is asleep."

The father handed over $1,500 in $20 gold certificates as designated.

After receiving the money, the man drove ahead of the father about 200 feet and stopping the car, put the body of the girl on the grass.

As the kidnapper drove off, Parker rushed to his daughter's side, clasped her in his arms and found she was dead. It was a gruesome sight that met the eyes of the parent. Both of the child's legs had been cut off close to the body—her little arms were severed at the elbows. A wire had been twisted so tightly around her throat that it left a gaping wound. The wire was run around the back of the head and to the face where it was thrust through her eyelids.

This was done presumably, to keep the girl's eyes open after death to give her the appearance of being alive.

The child was lured from the Mount Vernon Junior High schol grounds last Thursday noon. The kidnaper told the girl's teacher that he was employed in the same bank with Mr. Parker, who had been taken ill.

When Marian failed to return home at night the father communicated with the school authorities and upon learning the facts, notified the police.

Five ransom letters were received, beginning Friday morning. Each threatened death if the money was not forthcoming or if the police were informed.

The last of the five letters was received after the body had been recovered. It had been caught in the Christmas rush and was delivered by special messenger. The girl herself penned two of the notes, begging her father to comply with the demands.

The letters apparently written at the dictation of her captor, were addressed to the father and mother. One read:

"Dear Daddy and mother:

"Daddy, please don't bring anyone with you today. I am sorry for what happened last night. If you don't meet us this morning, you will never see me again. Love to all."

(signed) "MARIAN PARKER."

P. S.—"Please, Daddy, I want to come hom this morning. This is your last chance. Be sure and come by yourself or you won't see me again—MARION."

The second letter from the child read:

"I wish I could come home. I think I will die if I have to be here much longer, won't someone tell me why this had to happen to me. Daddy, please do what this man tells you, for he will kill me if you don't."

It was a stunning blow to the family that includes Marian's twin sister, Marjorie, a brother, Willard, about 20 years old, and the child's grandmather, besides the parents.

An excellent description of Marian's abductor was obtained by the girl's school teacher.

He is between 25 and 30 years old, white, about five feet, eight inches tall, around 150 pounds in weight, tain featured and smooth shaven, with medium complexion. He has dark brown wavy hair which has the appearance of being waxed. He speaks very good English and apparently is well educated. He wore a brownish-gray herring-bone overcoat and had on a dark grey hat.

The kidnaper drove a dark colored Ford roadster. Part of the license number, all of which was not obtained, is 677-67. It is not known whether these are the first, last or middle numbers.

The gold certificates handed him last night were numbered serially from K-68016901 to K-68016975.

SUSPECT ARRESTED BY LOS ANGELES POLICE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The police late today arrested a suspect in the Marian Parker murder case whose name they refused to divulge. Officers stated however that the prisoner was a young man of 25 years, the son of a Los Angeles doctor, a military school and university man and known in the past to have committed offenses against young girls.

The police further divulged the fact that the imprisoned suspect was in a position to know intimate details of the Parker family life.

DASTARDLY CRIME SHOCKED "HARD-BOILED" DETECTIVE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18—(AP)—"Hard Boiled" Herman Cline, captain of detectives of the Los Angeles police department, he who prized the safe return of little Marian Parker, over the possible capture of her abductor, broke down and sobbed last night when he learned the child had been murdered.

And in Cline's breakdown came the revelation that he had agreed at the request of Marian Parker's father to withdraw all police activity from the case on Friday night in order that the child might be returned to her home alive. Cline even agreed to the payment of the ransom.

The "Dear daddy and mother" letter written by Marian to her parents was ringing in Cline's ears to return her to the Christmas fireside of the Parker home, to her mother, her twin sister: that was Cline's first objective. The ends of Justice might be served later.

CONGRESS TO ADJOURN FOR ANNUAL HOLIDAY RECESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—(AP)—Congress will surrender to the spirit of Christmas after three days of work this week and depart from the capitol for its annual holiday recess.

The urge to be home for the hanging of stockings already has capitivated some of its members and there was a slight exodus from the city last night and today. By adjournment Wednesday it is doubtful if a quorum of either body will be found in the respective chambers.

Nevertheless, the house will continue to the last the industrious mood it has shown since the opening session with its leaders planning to dispose of several minor bills tomorrow and the alien property return measure by Tuesday night.

The senate, however, will be shy of executive fodder and probably will use most of the three days acting up on several additional investigations proposed last week, including one by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, for a broad inquiry into public utility corporations.

A Communion Meditation

("In this cannot pass away!" Am. Ver. Matt. 26.42).

"If this cannot pass away!"—
Grief too great for flesh to bear!
Friendships failing in this crisis!
Enemies are lurking near!
Some disciples proving false!
Truth bereft of gripping power!
Unbelief has steeled its heart!
And the storm clouds loom and lower!
"If this cannot pass away!"—
This experience I dread,
Solitude, by man forsaken,
And of Thee my Living Head,
Except I drink it." O this cup!
Ere my earthly race is run;
"Not my will, but Thine, O Father,
Not my will but Thine be done!"
Drinking thus, extreme of anguish,
Then the cross for such as we!
Burdened Brother, with another
Plead "O Lord, Remember me!"
"If this cannot pass away."
This dread cup I so much shun;
"Except I drink it! O my Father,
Not my will but Thine be done."
—By Rev. William Wood.

December

Long bars of gold on western sky—
A sign that night is drawing nigh,
The sun is sinking in the West,
December skies like this, so clear,
Disclose to eye a picture dear,
To soul, a thought of home and rest.

The eastern sky is flushed with rose,
And luminous the whole east glows
To greet the coming of the sun.
December morns when bright and fine
Exhilarate like drafts of wine,
And life's a new day just begun.

December woods with song don't ring
As ring the woods in bonnie spring;
But we can see on snowy tree
The flicker's yellow plumage gay,
The flash of blue from saucy jay,
The black cap of the chick-a-dee.

December woods are rich with green,
For there the Christmas wealth is seen
In laurel, holly and the pine.
The Child's birthday we honor still
With peace on earth, to men good will
And with that thought our wreaths we twine.

December gives us Christmas day,
With merry laugh and jocund play,
But soon departs its final light.
Sadly we hear the tolling bell
Bidding the brave old year farewell,
As morning greets a New Year bright.

There's an old story about a man who after listening to abuse and villification from another quietly retorted, "All that you said I was you are." An ancient anecdote puts Buddha in the situation of that man, and tells of Buddha calmly inquiring of his reviler, "If you offer something to a man and he refuses it, to whom then does it belong?"

The man replied, "It belongs I suppose, to the one who offered it."

"Then," returned Buddah, "the abuse and vile names you offer me I refuse to accept."—Stray Stories.

DANIELSON

POLICE DOG IS CAUGHT IN SNARE FOR FOX

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 18—The wanton brutality of those who set a snare in the hope of catching a fox—and often times cause cruel suffering to other animals—was again illustrated today when a snare was shown here from which a splendid police dog, that had been roaming the woods, was released by a hunter yesterday.

This particular police dog was not injured, but owes his escape from a lingering and torturous death to the happy circumstance that the one who brought his release just happened to come along. It is an incident of this little story that the dog seemed to sense his danger, and showed the utmost gratitude after gaining his freedom.

The old, familiar twisted wire strands are again in use in making the snares. The use of them is, of course, illegal, but they are set out and cunningly concealed with the intent of catching foxes. Over a long period of years the snarers have operated in this section of Windham county. Catching them is difficult. A suggestion offered today to the end that some of them may be brought to court is that dealers in the kind of wire used to make the snares might be canvassed for a list of persons to whom they sell the commodity. Then a process of elimination might result in some prosecutions.

There is on display at this time in a window of the Windham County National bank a framed copy of the New York Herald of April 15, 1865, carrying the story of the assassination of President Lincoln. The copy is a well preserved one. It is attracting a very considerable amount of attention as a really historical issue in these latter days.

Saturday morning the funeral of Adelard Brousseau was held from his home in Attawaugan at 9 o'clock, with a high mass of requiem at St. Joseph's church in Daybille. Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor, was the celebrant of the mass. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. Relatives acted as bearers. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The Danielson Town basketball team lost still another game, by a narrow margin at Clinton, Mass., Saturday night. That score was 39 to 22, and it was narrower than appears on paper. The Danielson boys have been unable to rid the jinx that has been haunting them since they started their season early in the month—but they will. The team is playing good basketball, and has been meeting high class teams, and not setups. The Taftville team will be here for this week's game, and Danielson will try real hard to send them homew ith the short end of the score.

It would appear that people are getting good and careful, if the absence of arrests today in this territory and the promise of no court cases for Monday mean anything. There was not an arrest hereabouts over the week end by either state or borough police, and no accidents of any consequence up to late this afternoon and today, and of the unusual amount of activity going on on the eve of Christmas. Danielson was crowded with shoppers Saturday, and business men reported an excellent and highly encouraging business.

Announcement was made today to members of the Westfield Congregational church that as the result of the Every Member canvass on December 10 pledges for current expenses aggregate $4,030.40, and for world service $1,151.90. These totals are of December 15, and are expected to be materially increased before the end of the year.

Again this year the Federation of Churches will distribute Christmas baskets to needy people in the community. On Thursday of this week generous people will have an opportunity to share in this benevolence by giving vegetables or other things that contribute to the making of a Christmas dinner. Such offerings are to be left at the gymnasium of the Congregational church.

Inmates of public institutions in Killingly and neighboring towns will not find the world so cold-hearted on Christmas day. They are to have their holiday dinners, their gifts and, in some instances, their Christmas trees. A very happy time is being planned at the Temorary Home for Children, coming from the various towns of Windham county, in the Sawyer district of Putnam. It may not be inopportune to suggest at the opening of Christmas week that gifts sent to the home are sure to bring joy to the scores of youngsters who are there and who will be without relatives or friends, in numbers of instances, to visit them and remember them on the anniversary of the coming of the Prince of Peace.

The Wakatatina Camp Fire Girls are to share in the distribution of Christmas cheer to the needy of Danielson. They have planned to prepare a Christmas basket to be given to someone not named.

Today found small ponds in the vicinity of Danielson thronged with skaters, enjoying the new, but not very safe, ice.

Telephone employes in the Danielson, Moosup and Putnam divisions open the holiday week with a Christmas tree party in Putnam Monday evening.

A practically unlimited supply of Christmas trees is being offered for sale in Danielson this week, at very moderate prices, a fact that should tend to stop raids on forest lands, which will be under close watch from now until Christmas.

Members of the Girls' Friendly society of St. Alban's church have a meeting scheduled for Monday evening.

The Christmas tree and entertainment of the Congregational church at South Killingly is scheduled for Wednesday evening of this week.

More personal tax cases are scheduled for consideration by the town court, these having to do with persons owing back taxes—not the one assessed during the current year. Incidentally, all persons obligated to pay a personal tax for 1927, have only a few days more to attend to the matter.

As Christmas Approaches was the subject of the sermon—one of a series of three to be delivered on successive Sundays—at the Westfield Congregational church today.

Miss Blanche Gauthier has been confined to her home on Broad street by illness the past few days.

In various schools of the town on Friday of this week there are to be Christmas exercises. The schools close on the afternoon of that day for the holiday vacation.

This afternoon the annual canvass of members of St. Alban's parish was carried out, with visitations to homes of members of the church by committees in charge of the work.

Motorists from this section who have been in northern Vermont within the past few days report that there is nearly a foot of snow blanketing that section of the country.

Singers are being invited by a committee of the local post of the American Legion to assist in the exercises at the community tree on the eve of Christmas on Davis park and to join the carollers who will sing about town.

A marriage here on Thursday of last week by Judge W. Fenner Woodward, acting as a justice of the peace, was that of Blanche Maynard and David Williams, both of New London.

Mrs. Zoe Lacombe and daughter, Mrs. Lida Bastien, are at Springfield to remain with relatives during the Christmas season.

There are to be five masses at St. James' church on Christmas day. Choirs of the church are engaged with rehearsals of the special music for the festival.

All warnings notwithstanding, motorists, the majority of them with Rhode Island cars, were raiding forest lands around the territory today for Christmas trees, and getting away with it.

Miss Wilbur is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Alice Roxanna Slye, who made her home with Miss Wilbur and Mrs. Ella Wilbur Wood who lives at Putnam Heights.

Word has been received here of the death of Andrew Lincoln Lyon at his home at Asbury Park, N. J., on Saturday. He was in his 87th year and was born in Woodstock where he still maintained his summer home, Breshwood Hut in West Woodstock.

Mr. Lyon enlisted in the Civil war from Woodstock but after the close of the war went to New Jersey to make his home and was one of the pioneer school teachers of Monmouth and Ocean counties in that state. He spent the past summer at Woodstock and seemed to be in excellent health. He is survived by two children, Mrs. Belva Cliver, the wife of Alvin B. Cliver of Asbury Park and with whom he made his home and Claude Lyon, who also lives at sbury Park. Burial will be at Mount Pleasant cemetery at Asbury Park.

Two large Christmas trees in the city which are decorated at night with colored electric lights suggest the coming of Christmas and both have been erected by Ralph C. Thurston, superintendent of the Electric Light and Power company. One is on the lawn at the home of the Misses Joy, where Mr. Thurston makes his home, and the other on the lawn of the Masonic club house on South Main street.

Otis Wilbur, who has been conducting a garage on Main street, was before the city court on Saturday charged with embezzlement on complaint of his aunt, Mrs. Lavellee. According to her complaint, Wilbur had borrowed a liberty bond from her which he wished to use as collateral for a small loan at the bank. He used the bond to borrow a larger amount that he had said he wanted to do and it was thought that he was planning to leave town. On making full restitution, the case was nolled.

The local Y. M. C. A. branch is making plans for the holding of the second annual skating carnival to be held on January 6th and 7th at Perry's pond where the skating sports were held last winter. The entries will close December 28 and County Secretary L. Edwin Hill will receive entrants for the following events and classes:

The ice carnival of last year proved to be very interesting and it is hoped that this year's will be even more enjoyable. Owing to the weather, the events of last year had to be postponed from the origial date set and of course the same trouble may happen again this year.

ACCIDENTS IN MERIDEN OVER THE WEEK-END

MERIDEN, Dec. 18.—(AP)—With twelve fractured ribs and a hernia of the right lung, Albert Yara, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Yara, of Hobson avenue, this city, is in a critical condition at the Meriden hospital, the victim of one of several accidents reported to the local police over the week-end.

The boy suffered his injuries at 10:30 o'clock this morning when crushed between an automobile and a hydrant on South Colony street.

A twelve-hour investigation, conducted by the local police in conjunction with the New Haven police, resulted in the arrest at 10 o'clock tonight of Frederick E. Soper, 54, of 19 Cromptron street, New Haven, driver of the car. Charges of reckless driving and evading responsibility have been lodged against him.

Soper was one of three out-of-town drivers to be arrested over the week-end. Peter Kozakieicz, 21, of 329 North Burritt street, New Britain, was arrested Saturday afternoon on a charge of drunken driving; while C. E. Smith, 35, of 42 Arbor street, Waterbury, was arrested a few hours ealler on a charge of reckless driving.

The accident in which the boy was injured occurred when Soper, in an attempt to avoid a collision with another automobile, drove his car un the sidewalk. The boy was pinned against a hydrant. All of his right ribs were crushed, one of the fractured ribs piercing his lung.

Soper, according to the police, drove off from the scene of the accident, leaving the task of caring for the injured boy to another motorist.

Possessed with the marker numbers of Soper's car, the local and New Haven police traced Soper to his home, reaching him at 8 o'clock tonight. Acting on advice given him by the New Haven police, Soper came here at 10 o'clock tonight to report the accident. He was immediately placed under arrest, later being released under $500 bonds.

Kozaklewicz was arrested following a minor accident on North Colony road. Three of his companions were arrested at the same time. Lawrence Arnold, 21, of 197 North Burritt street, New Britain, and Michael Luke, 22, of 296 High street, New Britain, two of the three, were each charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. The third companion, Frank Szyszka, 20, of 338 North Burritt street, New Britain, was charged with intoxication. All of the men have been released under bonds.

BOY AND HIS SISTER SHOT WHILE PLAYING

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 18.—(AP)—An 8-year-old boy was in a hospital here tonight permanently blind from the effects of shotgun fire and his 6-year-old sister, less seriously wounded, also was a patient, while police and county officers searched for two men who the children said shot at them yesterday.

The boy, Frank Chop, and his sister, Emma, were playing in a field near their home. According to the account given by little Emma as surgeons picked shot from her face and chest, "two men with guns" walking in Interurban tracks near where the children were playing, fired directly at them when the children shouted a greeting to them.

"Hi, there!" Frank and Emma called to the men and waved.

In response, one of the men aimed his shotgun at the children and fired, spraying the youngster's face and cheeks with shot. They stumbled home and crawled in bed, where their mother, Mrs. Isadore Chop, found them on her return from a shopping trip to the city.

AN ATTEMPT MADE TO ROB SAFE IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Dec. 18—(AP)—An attempt to rob the safe in the Model Bakery here early this morning was interrupted by a 14-year-old boy, on whose information police later arrested a pair of well known ex-convicts and solved the mystery of a series of recent spectacular robberies in Hartford.

Within an hour after the attempt, Detective Sergeant Charles J. Hallisey and Detective Peter A. Anderson, at the point of revolvers, captured Daniel G. "Otto" Nash, 26, of 154 Wethersfield avenue, ex-convict, jail breaker, and one time crack shot in the United States army, who was charged with the crime.

A short time later, Arlington McChohan, 26, of 7 Lisbon street, also well known to the police as an ex-convict, was brought to the police station, where he, with Nash, confessed to a series of recent "breaks" which had hitherto, completely baffled the police.

TO BE BATTLE IN CONGRESS OVER FLOOD CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—(AP)—Battle lines are being drawn tighter for the impending fight in congress over flood control.

Opponents of the army engineers' plan are preparing for a thrust for recognition of proposals seeking more liberal financial treatment of the situation by the government, administration forces and the army engineers are sticking to their guns for an 80-20 per cent division of the cost, and individual relief plans still are coming forward in both houses.

The administration or engineers' plan has been embodied in a bill by Chairman Jones of the senate commerce committee and indications now are that its opponents will make a determined attack against it before the Christmas recess and probably put forward a measure of their own incorporating many of the views of witnesses who have appeared before the house flood control committee in the last six weeks.

Opponents of the engineers' plan propose to center their attack on its recommendation for financing the project. The concensus of more than a hundred representatives of Mississippi valley states and a number of national organizations has been that the entire cost should be born by the government.

The army plan, however, recommends that the government bear 30 per cent and the states 20 per cent of the expense, and that the states also pay the costs of rights of way for flood works.

$1,000,000 FOKKER AIRCRAFT CORPORATION FORMED

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Formation of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America with capital of more than $1,000,000 and headquarters at Wheeling, W. Va., was announced today.

Production of planes for commercial and government service is scheduled to begin next spring.

The Atlantic Aircraft corporation which has a plant at Teterboro airport, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., where Fokker planes have been produced since 1924 is to become a subsidiary of the new company.

Anthony H. G. Fokker is associated with the new company as designer and consulting engineer and the new corporation holds the sole manufacturing rights to Fokker aircraft in the western hemisphere.

Lorillard Spencer of New York, president of the Atlantic Aircraft corporation is president of the new company.

ANOTHER BROADSIDE FROM THE MAYOR OF CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 18—(AP)—Mayor William Hale Thompson unleashed another broadside tonight against Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew for the latter's alleged pro-British activities in Chicago public schools at the opening of the German theater closed since the world war.

Following his address, the audience adopted a resolution commending the mayor for his fight against British propaganda.

"Bill Thompson's word is good," said the mayor, "and so long as I am mayor of Chi go, they will never again teach in the schools, supported by your taxes, that George Washington was a rebel. McAndrew not only encouraged that, but he boasted that he took the picture 'Spirit of 1776' off the walls of his office.

"McAndrew is going to be kicked out of office," he said. "We are going to make it so hot for him in America that he will have to go over to Buckingham Palace, where he will be more welcome than he is here."

TWO BOYS NARROWLY ESCAPED DROWNING

SOUND BEACH, Conn., Dec. 18—(AP)—Members of the local fire department were hurriedly organized as a rescue squad this afternoon, when informed by telephone that two small boys had fallen through the ice on a pond near here.

The two boys, Michael and Anthony Batish, 4 and 8 years old, had succeeded in crawling out of the hole through which they had fallen, and were stretched, exhausted, on the ice, when the firemen reached the pond.

Both boys were rushed to the Stamford hospital where they are being treated tonight for submersion.

LEPPER PLEADED NOT GUILTY TO MURDER CHARGE

CRANSTON, R. I., Dec. 18—(AP)—Arthur Evans, 18, alias Arther Lepper, alias John Hoyt, pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder when arraigned in the eighth district court here this afternoon before Judge Henry D. C. Dubois. Evans, accused of murdering Harold E. Hillman, manager of a chain store on the night of March 13, 1926, waived examination and was held without bail for the grand jury.

MILITARY STILL ON DUTY AT OKLAHOMA CAPITOL

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 18—(AP)—While a half dozen National Guardsmen patrolled before senate and house of representatives chambers at the state capitol today to prevent any assembly orf the house, most of the members were at their homes in various parts of the state.

The special session leaders who remained in Oklahoma City over the week-end declared that Monday would probably bring a climax in court action when the district court of Oklahoma county hands down its decision as to whether it will issue a permanent injunction to Governor Henry S. Johnston, preventing the house or senate from meeting.

DIED FROM INJURIES INFLICTED BY AUTO

PITTSFIELD, Mas., Dec. 18—(AP)—Joseph Sala, 45, of Lee, died at St. Luke's hospital here tonight from injuries received last night when he was struck by an automobile driven by John J. Shea, of this city.

Shea and Basilio Bachettini, of Westfield, were arrested on charges of manslaughter.

THE SINKING OF THE S-4

When a steel vessel strikes a submarine a hard blow it means serious consequences for the latter. The situation is even worse when the submarine is under water. It means that there is little chance for the crew to escape or for the underwater boat to remain afloat.

The sinking of the S-4 off Provincetown indicates that there has been a large loss of life. Whether it will be possible to save any lives is the problem that is getting immediate attention with all possible efforts being directed to that end.

Until all the details of the collision have been thoroughly sifted, if in fact it will ever be possible to learn of the situation aboard the S-4, it will be difficult to understand why such a collision should have occurred. Inasmuch as it is supposed to be the duty of the submersible to keep out of sight that very fact ought to be sufficient ground for making it possible for it to know where any other vessel is and keep away from it.

The shocking consequences of this sinking, coming two years after the loss of the S-51 off Block Island while proceeding on the surface, emphasizes anew the grave dangers involved in submarining. The experience in connection with the raising of the latter is being put to good use in the rescue work that is under way off Cape Cod. With the best in advisers, divers and equipment available it is to be hoped that those who have received the protection of the water tight compartments and are alive may be rescued. They are undergoing a frightful experience and though they are unwilling subjects they are putting to a test the effectiveness of the naval department to cope with such a situation.

While it was well demonstrated at the time of the loss of the S-51 that facilities for meeting a similar situation should be made available, there was no telling when a repetition might occur. It was hoped there would be no occasion for a tryout so soon, but now that it has occurred the value of what has been provided should be determined very soon. The necessity of being able to cope with such marine disasters even in time of peace has been established.

GERMANY AND REPARATIONS

The report which Agent General Gilbert makes regarding the manner in which Germany is meeting its reparation requirements must be looked upon with gratification up to the present and with a hopeful look for the future. It is quite evident that Germany is undergoing changing conditions. Some of these are getting to be of benefit in meeting its obligations, while others are indicative of less certainty in that direction. It is to Germany's advantage and a credit to it in more ways than one that industrial conditions there are manifestly better. It furnishes reason for caution when there is an inclination to boost its annual budget to figures which recently called for a warning on the part of the agent general.

By this third annual report as the representative of the reparation commission, Mr. Gilbert shows that Germany has met its billion and a half marks under the Dawes plan for the third year without strain. In the ensuing year this sum will have to be increased by a quarter of a billion marks. Germany isn't wavering in fact it is raising its own budget through salary boosts and for other reasons in spite of this larger reparation sum which it faces, and it is doing some of this preparation for larger expenditures because it knows that it has a million less unemployed than it had a year ago, and because the half million now receiving doles is only a quarter the number getting such aid at the first of the year.

It is to be expected that these conditions will continue as favorable, if in fact they do not improve. Germany is apparently banking upon the latter, and yet there was golden advice contained in the recent warning which the agent general gave in urging Germany to consider well its plans for expenditures lest they be larger than its revenue would warrant.

Germany is making good progress toward recovery and thus far under the Dawes plan is respecting its terms It is expected that it will continue, and the assistance that will be given through the return of the German property still held in this country should be speeded up by congress.

BAD PRACTICE

When reports were put out through the Hearst papers relative to the Mexican slush fund which was reported to have been provided for the purpose of creating a sentiment favorable to Mexico, they were accepted with a very liberal layer of salt.

Now that an inquiry is underway by the United States senate to get at the facts in the case, with stress being laid upon the part which four senators were said to have played in connection with such a fund, there appears to be an increased reason for doubt.

Among the witnesses called in the investigation is Mr. Hearst himself, who was wanted for the purpose of telling what he knew about the documents and anything else he knew concerning their publication. There had been some investigations on the part of his agents but they made no attempt to find out whether there was any truth to the allegations concerning the four senators. Their names were not published, but have since been made known at the investigation. They have denied emphatically any conection with such a fund, and from the testimony which Mr. Hearst gave he did not have any proof that the money was paid and he didn't believe that it was paid. He thought there might be a senate inquiry to get at the truth of the matter and yet he didn't believe that there was any truth to the charges which were being put forth only in an unsubstantiated story which he was publishing. He was thus setting forth a questionable story of a very serious character for the purpose of making a sensation about something that didn't exist.

This is journalism of a character which cannot impress a reading public. There's a question whether those who have been wrongly influenced by the publication of such claims will ever get the poison out of their mental systems. The investigation should of course go through to the finish. Those responsible for the papers, alleged to be forgeries, should be found out if possible, but the idea of publishing something as the truth which was believed to be false should not pass without rebuke.

DO IT NOW

By the time another Monday rolls around you will be immersed in the joys of Christmas, enthused by your remembrances and relishing the best the land affords. You will be radiating the happiness of the season. You may also be hearing about those instances where households and children have experienced nothing of the kind because circumstances would not permit it and because no one had been thoughtful of their predicament.

You are not obliged to but, now that we are on the home stretch to Christmas, it is time to give a thought to those very households, those very children, before you have a chance to say, "Oh, I wish I had only known it before".

If you would be willing, really willing, after learning of such opportunities to make a merry Christmas for some one, you ought to be willing to take time by the forelock and do it now while it means something, while there is a chance, while you can put your feelings into action.

Bear in mind that there are those who know where such homes are, and where worthy individuals have a dark outlook for rejoicing on Christmas day and remember also that there are those waiting and anxious to be your messenger in carrying messages of good will that will help to brighten the day. You are in fact among those they are looking for, looking for before Christmas instead of after.

Dig down into your pockets and extend the Christmas spirit through the Salvation Army kettles, or any other organization which is striving to reach those who need and deserve something out of the routine on Christmas day.

Be able to say, "I helped to make someone's Christmas happier." Don't wait and say, "I wish I had known."

OUR AIR DIPLOMAT

Mexico's response to the flight of Charles A. Lindbergh to the capital of that country has been quite as impressive, in proportion, as that extended in Paris. There's no getting away from the fact that it is real. He has arrived there at a time when other representatives have been creating a better feeling. He has visited Canada on the north. Now it is quite logical that he should visit Mexico to the south. Whatever will contribute to the improvement of relationships across the Rio Grande is to be commended.

Mexico is making the most of his stay in that country without any abatement in the enthusiasm. In view of the receptions he had been accorded elsewhere, even the Mexicans cannot marvel at the response to his appearance in their country. It isn't going to eradicate the past but it cannot fail to improve the relationship between the two countries.

In the same way and for the same reason there cannot fail to be good results from that projected flight to the other countries of Central America. It is unusual, but it is most certain that there is none other who could do it better, none other the country would like to see make the flight with greater satisfaction and none other in whom there would be greater confidence placed as to the success of his flight or as to results.

Charles A. Lindbergh is our first air diplomat but he is setting a pace that will be extremely difficult for another to follow. More power to him.

EDITORIAL NOTES

With the new year just around the corner keep your eyes and ears open for the first robin.

What progress are you making with that set of new resolutions for the rapidly approaching 1928?

The man on the corner says: Are you keeping your Christmas list of wants in a conspicuous place?

Bear in mind that through the Salvation Army kettle you can reach those who need Christmas cheer.

Those who are expecting sleds and skates from Santa Claus are not exactly pleased by the offerings of the weatherman.

Talking about Congressman Tilson as a candidate for vice president or senator simply shows how well fitted he is for most any office.

Just because Connecticut has per capita individual deposits of $689.81 in its banks don't expect that everyone can step up and demand that sum at will.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

A blue gas flame produces the most heat.

Cornmeal makes a good breakfast cereal.

A hen turkey is more tender than a gobbler.

Egg whites should be used as soon as beaten.

Fried apples served with pork chops are delicious.

For drying glassware the all-linen towel is best.

When making bread use milk that is luke warm.

Hot salted vinegar will brighten copper and zinc.

Split finger rolls with the centers scooped out and filled with creamed chicken are nice.

Half-bleached linen is stronger after a few washings.

For creamy banana sauce mash two ripe bananas and add the stiffly beaten white of an egg.

For clover rolls put three tiny balls of dough in each compartment of the muffin tins and bake.

Use baking powder dough for dumplings for a stew. Place them on top of the boiling meat and cover tight.

When stewing meat use only enough water to prevent burning and all of the goodness will remain.

A roll of wrapping paper and a ball of string kept in a convenient closet will be appreciated by all of the family.

Geraniums thrive if you feed them cold tea once in a while and hydrangeas seem to like weak coffee. Pour onto the roots only.

REKINDLING A FIRE

When, as sometimes occurs, the fire dies out entirely it will be found easier to build it again on top of the ashes than to let the ashes down and try to build the fire on the bare grate. The way to do this is to put your paper and wood on the bed of ashes and light the paper. Then shut the furnace door and shake the grate lightly The shaking process should continue until a gentle roar in the chimney indicates that there is sufficient draft coming up through the ash bed. Then, if the coal is put on at this point, it will be found that it will not drop through the grate, as it would if the fire was built on the bare grate.

THE CRYSTAL CLOSET.

Yes, it is time to get at the cut-glass and crystal, house cleaning is upon us. Use a little borax and very little soap in the wash water and a little bluing in the rinse water. The glass will fairly radiate.

FRESHEN THE CARPET.

Darn the worn carpet with a rug wool, being careful to match the color perfectly. It will greatly reduce the shabby appearance and it will wear much longer if mended before very far gone.

CONCERNING WOMEN

In America there are 376 women in business as stockbrokers.

Miss Mary Maskelyne, granddaughter of a famous illusionist of the last century, is the first English girl to become a professional magician.

A wonderful cross-stitch bed quilt worked by 428 Warwickshire women was shown at a recent exhibition of home industries in London.

When the proposed bill extending suffrage to women on the same terms as men is passed in England, 5,400,000 names will be added to the electoral roll, so that the women will outnumber the men in voting power.

Mrs. W. Maben, of Pachena Bay, near Victoria, B. C., has an eight-mile trap line each winter, running from Marion Lake at the mouth of the Pachena river. Last year she trapped 86 fur-bearing animals, most of them raccoons, minks, otter and marten.

Male strongholds in London that have been undisturbed by women for nearly 500 years are now threatened by the invasion of "Miss 1927." Members of the ancient City Companies are shaking their heads over the announcement that a woman has applied for admission to the Stationers Company.

WRAP REAL LACE.

Never store real lace wrapped in paper, as the chemicals used in some paper, will discolor lace. Wrap it in some soft material.

TIGHTEN SCREWS.

To tighten screws that keep working loose, remove, dip the tip in glue and replace immediately. They will not work out again.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Do not ask a patient what he or she wants to eat. Meals should be served to tempt the appetite and be a pleasing surprise.

Gratuitous advice anent the attending physician, treatment, diet, etc., that some people feel it their duty to give, must not be tolerated in the sickroom.

Hot sand or salt is soothing for neuralgia and other pains. Make by sewing up like a bean bag. Heat in the oven.

Besides local treatments for dandruff, it is necessary to build up the health and stimulate the circulation by plenty of exercise.

If your chin is fat and flabby you may use an astringent bandage. Dampen the bandage in the following astringent lotion: 2 drams powdered alum, 1 ounce rose water, 1 ounce glycerine, 2 ounces cologne water. Leave the bandage on for about two minutes.

BRIGHTEN WITH WATER COLOR

One housewife declared she wouldn't be without a few cakes of good quality water color paints. She uses them to touch up broken wallpaper, etc., and tells in the following now she removed a paper lamp shade. She says: "I had an elaborate yellow lamp shade with black butterflies on it, which I thought I must give up; it was so faded and dusty. But I put a cake of sepia in a little water and with a brush splashed all the shabby parts of the shade. When it was dry I went over it here and there with rose madder. The colors ran into and blended with each other and with the yellow, in a soft effect like autumn leaves, so that it is prettier than ever."

TO HIDE THE UNSIGHTLY DARN

Many times stockings are discarded on account of a darn just where the top of the shoe rubs the heel. If a tiny flat tuck is taken just under the heel by the arch of the foot it will pull the stocking just far enough below the shoe to hide the unsightly darn Then you will not be ashamed to wear the stocking you have given up as hopeless.

FOODS THAT HAVE TO BE CARVED

Foods which have to be carved should be served on platters large enough to insure ample room. Foods which may have their appearance spoiled during the carving operation should not be placed around a roast.

CHEAP TOPS

Here is a hint for the boys and girls who like to spin tops. Two boys gathered a number of acorns, made holes in the flat ends and pushed match sticks into the holes. Boy, you should see them spin!

BETTER DUMPLINGS

When dropping dumpling batter from a spoon into broth, dip the spoon in the hot broth between each operation. The batter will not stick to the spoon.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Gold lace fashions a sweet little evening hat that features the scalloped edge of the lace for the flange.

An opera coat of scarlet velvet has three tiers. It has a chinchilla collar and cuffs.

An imported Canton crepe frock in navy is fashioned like a coat dress, with yoke, hip yoke and cuffs of a soft French gray.

To keep the hat off the closet shelf, there are hat-stands covered with velvet in a deep violet shade, and trimmed with bows of blue.

A Reboux black felt hat that cups the back of the head smartly has a tiny brim that, starting at nothing on the sides flares into a visor

A stand-up collar and narrow cuffs of flat fur give a tailored aspect to a brown velour coat that fastens with six big buttons.

The smartest coats seen upon the streets these days are the black ones trimmed with badger fur. The contrast of dark and light is delightful.

Scarfs of subdued coloring that are particularly nice for sports wear are imported from London. They can be worn in many different ways.

Pajamas that have a decided air of sophistication are of flesh colored silk covered with black lace, with long draperies trailing from the shoulders.

Gold jewelry for daytime wear is increasing in popularity. A very new and attractive necklace, made of rolled gold, consists of many tiny spikes joined together.

Smart shoes to wear with new autumn suits and frocks are of alligator or lizard-skin in the shades of brown aptly designated as coffee brown.

A lovely cretonne for winter consists of a coat of gray, trimmed with darker gray krimmer, shoes and bag of reptile, and an umbrella of plaid in tones of gray.

It would be hard to imagine anything lovelier for an evening frock than one of the new chiffons delicately embroidered in gold or silver thread.

So popular is velvet this season that even the accessories are made of it. Charming little envelope bags come in all the pastel shades of velvet, with clasps of rhinestones.

SIMPLE PARTY FROCK

A charmingly simple little frock for a girl of twelve, which will be at home at any party, is of beige chiffon with three flounces upon the skirt. The middle flounce is embroidered with a running garland of flowers in gay silks. The waist is plain, with a round neck.

KNITTED LINGERIE

A negligee which would make an ideal gift for the invalid or some one living in the country, is made of blue wool machine-knitted in a fancy weave, with colored wool flowers embroidered upon the shawl collar.

CUT-STEEL BUCKLES

Cut-steel buckles play a leading role these days, being equally at home upon black or brown shoes. Some of the newest and most attractive are very large, and are backed with several pieces of leather notched along the edges. Cut steel buckles are used upon grey and black shoes and bronze upon brown shoes.

LAUNDRY HINTS

All colored embroideries should be soaked in cold water to which salt has been added for ten minutes before washing and only the mildest of soaps should be used.

Silk handkerchiefs should be washed with borax in tepid water, with little or no soap. Iron them before they dry.

When washing wool hosiery, put slipper trees inside the stockings while they are still wet, not the solid boot trees with a strip of metal connecting heel and toe. When drier in this way stockings are worn more comfortably.

Any stain from fruit on table linen should be attended to before the linen is put to soak. Hold the strained part over a vessel and pour boiling water through it. This is better than soaking in water, as it prevents the stain from spreading.

SCIENTIFIC CLEANING WAYS.

Linoleum and similar flooring must be protected against cleansing agents which have an excess of free alkali. This is likely to attack the finish. To preserve the surface gloss use a mild neutral soap, preferably in jelly or paste form. The same caution applies to surfaces finished with paint, varnish, shellac or lacquer. Apply the soap to a small area at a time, rinse with clear water and rub dry with a clean cloth before cleaning further.

Rubber composition floors call for different treatment. Tests made by scrubbing various color combinations of rubber flooring 50 times proved conclusively that an alkaline soap is safer and more effective than a neutral soap.

Copper and brass require a soap abrasive or a solvent polisher if corrosion has set in. A good laundry soap will remove grease or loose dirt, but it will not remove a bad case of verdigris or corrosion. On iron and steel surfaces an alkaline laundry soap or powder is efficient. Nickel surfaces and fixtures in good condition can be cleaned with soap. If they have become discolored they may need a mild scouring medium first.

In cleaning lavatories or toilet bowls, first consider whether the enamel surface is new and smoothly finished or whether it has already become scratched and roughened. In the latter case dirt is harder to clean off and calls for a soap powder or a scouring powder. If the surface is new and well glazed it can be kept so by using nothing harder than laundry soap and hot water.

Cement floors of the garage and basement respond well to water in which either soap powder or a general household soap has been dissolved. Scrub with a broom or a long-handled brush and rinse out with a hose.

KEEP DOWN COAL BILL

Hold down the coal bill by keeping all your cinders. Have a box into which they can be thrown as they are taken from the grates; then when you have a sufficient quantity, pour water over them from a watering can if possible—to lay the dust. Then "riddle" them free from all the small, fine dust. After the sifting process only nice-sized cinders will be retained. They will burn admirably in the kitchen range and will give out quite sufficient heat for ordinary needs and help out the coal supply very considerably.

PEELING ONIONS

Pour hot water over onions, allow them to remain for a few minutes, then drain and pour cold water over them. The skins can be removed easily

TO TEST EGGS

Place an egg in a pan of water. If fresh it will lie on its side. If a few days old it will tilt upwards. If stale, it will stand on end. If very old, it will float.

RECIPES.

Apple Fritters: Pare and chop tart cooking apples. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and lemon juice and let stand a while. Make a batter of one and one-third cups of flour, two teaspoons baking powder, a pinch of salt, sifted together. Add two-thirds cup of milk and one egg well beaten. Add the prepared fruit and drop by spoonfuls into fat hot enough to brown a cube of bread in sixty seconds. Cook until brown, drain on unglazed paper and serve hot with a sauce of confectioner's sugar.

Apple Cobbler: Wash, pare, core and quarter cooking apples. Put in a saucepan, add one-half cup of water and one-half cup of sugar. Cook until the apples are tender. Make a batter by creaming two tablespoons butter, add two of sugar, one egg well beaten. Add one-half cup of flour sifted with one-eighth teaspoon of soda and a pinch of salt, alternately with one-quarter cup of sour milk. Mix the batter well and pour over the hot fruit which has been poured into a baking dish. Bake in a moderately hot oven about 25 minutes. Serve with lemon sauce or cream.

YOUR HEALTH

CO-OPERATION.

By Albert Fay Lowell, M. D., Gardner, Mass. Member Gorgas Memorial.

Physicians in a community realize more and more that they are not doing their duty by simply earning their living in that section, but that it devolves upon each individual doctor as well as on the group of doctors as a whole, to safeguard those under their care, not alone in treating the sick patients, but in teaching the community to keep well—to educate them in the means of avoiding sickness, and with a definite aim to make that particular group of people contribute its part in bringing up the average of the span of life.

In spite of the fact that comparatively few people have availed themselves of the certain methods of avoiding diseases which in the past have ravaged communities, nevertheless, in the ten years from 1910 to 1920 four years were added to the average term of life in this country. These added years would be sufficient, for instance, for a man to live and see his son or daughter through college.

Although a person who comes of long-lived ancestors naturally and rightly expects to duplicate the record, he may be the exception and fall by the wayside, unless he takes account of stock at regular intervals. Our manner of living differs materially from that of our ancestors and we have more ways of getting into trouble physically, yet, by availing ourselves of the means at hand, we have many more ways of keeping out of trouble, if we are forehanded at going about it.

Insistence on a complete and thorough yearly examination places a man in a position to know what he may undertake with some probability of its fulfilment. When a man assumes business obligations his physical ability to see it through is of as much importance as is his financial status.

Through the advances made in preventive medicine during the last few years with the aid of our state boards of health in making public presentation of their information for the use of communities in their jurisdiction, we are freed from many of the scourges of the past. The individua must, however, take his own accounting in order that the small troubles may be taken care of before they have done damage. These great things which scientific medicine is trying particularly to overcome are cancer, tuberculosis, and the crippling results of sepsis. Individual care and examination in the early stages are our only means to combat these.

CHILD TRAINING

EXPENSIVE TOYS.

Mrs. Nestor Noel.

Christmas day was over, with all its excitement, its glamour and fuss. I remarked to a lady whose children had been given expensive toys, "I suppose the little ones are feeling very happy."

"Happy!" she echoed in disgust, "those children have everything they want, but they are never happy."

What an admission for a mother to have to make!

In contrast to this home, I could not help recalling one where the mother made each gift while the children were asleep. She was not strong, and she worked hard during the day for small remuneration. There was no father and the family was large, so the eldest daughter helped earn the living. Boots and shoes were always needed.

When I called there Christmas morning, the children rushed joyously towards me, each showing the gift which mother-love had created so they should not be disappointed. Even the two boys had re-wrapped their presents in paper to protect them. They unfolded each carefully to show me the treasure within. Happy? Yes, these children were certainly happy.

It is not expensive toys that make Christmas bright and gay. On the contrary, I think too many of these things rank with too much plum cake—the more they have, the more unhappy are the children. They cannot appreciate anything; they are so surfeited. I have seen mechanical toys strewn all over a handsome carpet. There were so many that the children could not keep count of them and they were a source of irritation rather than pleasure. The parents, having been unusually lavish, could not understand why the children were unusually peevish.

On the other hand, I have seen children of wiser parents revelling in a few toys which cost little money. Everyone knows that little girls love dolls that they can hug to their hearts better than little stiff, unhuggable, mechanical dolls which walk the floor and dance! These heavy, expensive toys are to be shown to visitors, and the child must constantly be cautioned to be careful with them. There is little need to warn the average girl to be careful of the less expensive, huggable doll, because she loves it and wants to treat it kindly. Those who are to buy the children's Christmas toys need more wisdom than money. They need to know children in general and the particular children that they hope to make happy. As a general rule it is well to remember that children like to do things. A toy should not be a thing merely to look at and very expensive toys are rarely appreciated. A little study behind each child's gift will add much to the happiness of Christmas

IN DAY'S NEWS

Labrador.

"Labrador, since the definition of its boundary with Canada, is being discussed as a possible summer haven for yachtsmen and a source of wood pulp," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "Though the southern end of Labrador is in the latitude of London and the northern tip opposite Petrograd, no warm ocean current washes its shores to produce the temperate climate of northern Europe. Cold winter winds sweep down from the Arctic across a rocky and sparsely inhabited coast, though explorers say the short summers are delightful.

"The entire region at present has only about 3,600 population, about 300 less than 40 years ago. North of the settlement of Hopedale, half way up the coast from Newfoundland, the country is peopled mainly by Eskimos, who have been largely Christianized and live in neat wooden houses, supporting themselves by seal and cod fisheries. In the interior scattered Indians and half breeds hunt the fox, marten, bear, wolverine, and other fur bearing animals which haunt evergreen woods stretching as far north as the Arctic boundary of forestation.

"This fur belt covers large areas of the interior of Labrador in all but the extreme northern part, but only touches the rocky coast at the heads of long bays and the mouths of rivers. As a future source of paper pulp this hitherto little rargeded region is of immense value, and already a few mills have been established and concessions granted. Pulp forests are one of the potential sources of wealth. Another asset is unlimited water power of the numerous coastal rivers.

"White settlements are mainly on the southeastern coast of Labrador. Here a sparse but sturdy population of Scotch and Scandinavian extraction, together with a few French Canadians, carry on cod and whale fisheries. The number of white inhabitants is quadrupled during the summer months by Newfoundlanders who come north for cod fishing, the principal industry. Of late years the whale, seal, and cod have all decreased in numbers in Labrador waters. This is thought to be one reason for the steadily diminishing population of the coast. Another factor is that contact with diseases of civilization has proved fatal to whole communities of Eskimos and Indians. Missionaries are making heroic efforts to save the remainder of the native races from extinction by teaching them to adapt their mode of living to changed conditions, and these good officers have met with considerable success.

"One effort to compensate for the diminishing number of sea animals has been the introduction into Labrador of the reindeer, which for centuries been the main support of the Lapps of northern Scandinavia and which has been successfully raised in Alaska. This attempt is said to have proved successful and promises one solution of the food problem if the development of pulp and milling industries is extended. Another alleviating condition is that work in mills already established has helped lift the workers from entire dependence on the fluctuating fortunes of fishing and hunting.

"Wireless stations are bringing larger settlements into closer contact with the outside world. It is predicted that when this means of communication has been extended and coasts are better charted and lighthouses built that Labrador with its rocky inlets and bracing climate will become, like Norway, a rendezvous for summer yachtsmen. During the short northern summer Labrador is pictured as a land of supreme beauty. Rocky headlands run far into the sea. Deep fiords cut the fir covered hills of the interior, where sub-Arctic vegetation flourishes, and salmon streams invite the fisherman. Grand Falls, on the Hamilton river, is nearly three times as high as Niagara."

Former Norwich Leaders

John Carleton, Carbon-Paper Man.

(From Norwich Bulletin, Nov. 1, 1895.)

John Carleton, a well known citizen of Norwich, died at his home on Happy street Thursday at the age of 81. He was a native of Norwich, and in early life lived in the old Charlton homestead at Norwich Town, and was engaged as a merchant tailor. He was an energetic business man and during his long life built several buildings in town. He was one of the first residents on Jail Hill, where forty years ago he bought a large tract of land in a sightly location with a westerly and southerly view, and on which he has since lived.

He was a bright and entertaining talker, well versed in scripture, and for many years traveled inall parts of the United States selling Yankee notions and the carbon paper of which he was inventor and manufacturer, entertaining his audiences with instructive quotations and pleasing stories.

He enjoyed good health until a year or two ago and was a remarkably well preserved man for one of his years.

"WRONG NUMBER" CAUSES DRIVER INCONVENIENCE

An error in reporting a registration number to the New London police caused Solomon Wechsler of Jewett City considerable inconvenience Sunday evening. The New London police had requested the local police to instruct Mr. Wechsler to report Monday morning at the New London city court on a charge of evading responsibility, in connection with an accident Sunday evening when a driver drove away after sideswiping a machine in New London. The New London police were furnished with the number N-1643, which is the registration number on Mr. Wechsler's machine.

Shortly afterwards Mr. Wechsler was seen at Franklin square by the police and informed that he was wanted at police headquarters. At headquarters he was at a loss as to what all the trouble was about as his car had not been out of the garage Sunday until about 7.45 o'clock in the evening when he drove to this city and parked it at the Elks home. After receiving the order to report in New London Monday morning, he drove to the New London police station, and there satisfied the authorities that he was not the man they were looking for and that there was an error in taking the registration number of the fleeing machine.

MACHINES COLLIDED ON NORTH MAIN STREET

Early Sunday evening two machines, a Ford coupe, and an Erskine sedan, were slightly damaged when they collided at the corner of Eighth and North Main streets. The coupe, driven by Stanley A. Safewicz, of Griswold, received a damaged front fender and bumper, and the sedan, driven by Edward Sullivan of No. 76 Mowry avenue received a bent running board.

OSCILLATOR CONVEYED FIRST SIGNS OF LIFE

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—The Oscillator, through which first signs of life aboard the sunken submarine S-4 were heard, is a drum-like attachment on the shell of the submarine, which vibrates a grating sound that can be heard about 200 yards.

The sound is detected by a microphone connected to the hull of another submarine or ship. This system of signalling is used only in emergencies, and was developed during the war, when a secret method of signalling was necessary.

STAFFORDVILLE PREACHER AT CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

"Cheer Up! A call to the Life Worth While," was the theme of the address by Rev. Edward Eells, of Staffordville, who was the speaker at the Sunday evening service at the Central Baptist church.

In opening his interesting address, which was generously illustrated with quotations of happiness poetry, Rev. Mr. Eells spoke of the value of the expression we carry about with us, but said that the smiles which avail most are those that bubble up from the inside and are not a veneer on the outside. He advised that everybody experiment in the therapeutics of gladness, making laughter and song component parts of every life. Where there's a will there's a way, he said, and happiness can be a matter of will to keep the brightest side out. The only genuine science of happiness is with him who links his hand with God. It's your duty to cheer up and join the society for persistent gladness. "Flood some path with sunshine, it will make you happy too."

Dr. Charles Barber Eldred, 68, formerly of Norwich, died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Miss Jennie M. Eldred, 1 Wilcox Manor, Pawcatuck. He was the son of Abbie Jane Eldred, now over 90 years of age and residing near Providence, and the late Charles Henry Eldred of Westerly. For many years he was a practicing dentist in Norwich. Matthew J. Geary

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Dec. 18—Matthew J. Geary, warden of the borough of Jewett City, died late Saturday night at the home of his sister Mrs. J. H. Cleary, on Boswell avenue, Norwich. Warden Geary's health had been failing for a long time, but he did not give up his work in Aspinook bleachery until early in November.

He was very closely identified with Jewett City, having lived here for over thirty-five years. His business had been that of a barber most of his life, and he conducted that business in Finn block for years. He had served the borough as its warden for five years. He filled the office capably always with an eye to the borough's best interests. He had never missed a meeting of the board since he became warden. He had served as foreman of A. A. Young, Jr., Hose and Ladder Co. between ten and twelve years, twice as long as any other foreman. He was a man whom his associates always liked, very charitable in his judgment, ready to help generously any worthy cause, or any person in trouble. In the homes where he boarded, he was especially liked for his courteous, considerate demeanor. To his family he had been a helpful and devoted son and brother.

He was born in Montville, the son of Thomas and Bridget Hines Geary. He is survived by a brother, John J. Geary of Montville and by three sisters, Mrs. John Malone of New London, Mrs. Michael Murphy of Montville and Mrs. J. H. Cleary of Norwich.

Warden Geary was a member of Very Reverend Michael McCabe assembly K. of C., of the Fraternal Order of Eagles No. 367, and of A. A. Young Jr. Hose and Ladder Co. No. 1.

The borough flag was displayed at half mast Sunday on Fanning Park, and will so remain daily until after Warden Geary's funeral.

FLAMES DESTROY TWO STORY SHED
TWO OTHER CALLS FOR FIRE DEPT.

Fire was discovered in a two-story shed in the rear of 423-425 Main street and a call was sent to the fire department at 10.57 o'clock Sunday morning, Squad A, Engine 1 and Deputy Chief Henry R. Taft responding. The shed is owned by Mrs. Nellie Tanner, colored, and is occupied by Sam Carpenter, colored, who has sleeping quarters in the second story. Two lines of hose, 1 1-2 and 2 1-2 inches, were laid, the former being put to service by Squad A, who soon had the fire under control. The 2 1-2 inch hose was not required to combat the flames. Damage, which will amount to about $100, was done to the roof of the shed, the interior was gutted and the cornice of the house, 423-425 Main street, was scorched to some extent. The fire was caused by a defective oil stove located in the second story.

There were two other calls for the department during the day.

At 12.02 o'clock Sunday afternoon the second call was received by the department for a fire in the house at 59 McKinley avenue owned by the estate of Miss Catherine Lyons and occupied by Roderick F. Sullivan and family. A great amount of smoke was perceived by a member of the family, but its origin could not be found, so the fire department was summoned. Grease and meat burning in a pan over the gas stove was found to have been the cause of the dense smoke. Some damage was done to the wall near the stove. Squad A and the deputy chief responded to the fire.

The third call came at 1.16 o'clock Sunday afternoon for a supposed blaze in the house at 160 Prospect street owned by Dominic Kartanys and occupied by Michael Dulcko. A board had been placed over the top of the chimney and when a fire was started in the stove by a tenant, considerable smoke circulated in the house, there being no way for the smoke to escape. Squad A, Engine 2 and Deputy Chief Taft responded.

NORWICH TOWN TO HAVE COMMUNITY TREE

Plans are progressing for the Community Christmas tree celebration to be held on Norwich Town Green Christmas night Sunday, December 25. The annual event is under the supervision of the Norwich Rural association. The president, Walter T. Camp, is having the cooperation of several committees in seeing to it that every thing will be complete, to make the celebration joyous for the people of Norwich and suburban districts, as all will be privileged to attend. It is expected that all will aid by participating in the chorus singing. Frederic H. Wyant, chairman of the music committee has called a rehearsal for Tuesday evening at 7.30 in the Norwich Town Congregational chapel, to make preparations for the leading of the community singing. It is also the plan to have if possible, a brass quartette to accompany the singing of Hark the Herald Angels Sing, Once in Royal David's City, Adeste Fidelis, Silent Night, Joy to the World, The First Nowell, It Came Upon the Midnight Clear, We Three Kings of Orient Are, O Little Town of Bethlehem and While Shepherd's Watched Their Flock.

Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, chairman on lighting, will have general charge of wiring the tree, which is to be done this week by a local firm. Two hundred or more var-colored bulbs are to be used, which will make a brilliant illumination on the permanent tree, which was set out by the Rural association a few years ago. Surrounding the main tree, six smaller evergreens have already been set out, in preparation for wiring. To those who as in former years wish to contribute toward the expenses, are sending donations to Robert Bolsson, treasurer of the Christmas tree fund.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT LOCAL Y. M. C. A. SERVICE

The service at the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon was one of the most impressive held in many months. A large audience was in attendance, filling all the chairs in the gymnasium. After the singing of hymns from the screen and a prayer, four of America's greatest poets were represented on the screen, by a brief story of their lives and illustrations of some of their poems in moving pictures. Whittier's poem, "The Barefoot Boy," Holmes' poem, "The Height of Ridiculous," Bryant's poem, "The Crowded Street," and Poe's poem, "Annabel Lee," were all most beautifully portrayed, and the lines of the poems accompanied the pictures.

Between the reels Edwin Hill, the general secretary, gave a brief talk and he spoke in part as follows: "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest of all, it might have been." How different some lives might have been. I know a boy who is soon to be sent to the Reform school, simply because he will not behave himself How different might his lot have been. Benedict Arnold might have been famous as a good man, but he is now known as a traitor, and I do not know of any boy named after him. Some of our brilliant poets have blessed the world with their poems, but their lives have been far from good examples for us to follow. Many boys and girls are continually making mother's heart feel sad because they fail to play their part as good boys and girls should. This Christmas season is a most appropriate time for all of us to begin to live truer and nobler lives, that we will have no regrets in the days to come.

HELD AFTER ACCIDENT ON TWO CHARGES

Late Sunday night Edward Brown, 23, U. S. S. Shaw, was arrested on South street by Officers John Dunion and Patrick Shahan on a charge of evading responsibility. Brown, driving a Chevrolet roadster, crashed into an Overland driven by Earl Fred Bashaw near the city line in Thamesville, and then attempted to make a getaway. Brown drove his damaged machine down South street, across the railroad tracks and parked it in the darkness near the mill. Then he left it.

Officers Dunion and Shahan who investigated the accident, found Brown's car where he had parked it and shortly afterwards collared Brown. It was found that Brown had no registration for the car with him, so he will have an additional charge of violating the motor vehicle laws against him when he appears in the city court this Monday morning. The Overland sustained a smashed wheel, axle, bent mudguard and smashed running board. Brown's car received a broken fender and crushed mudguards.

The S. S. club met last week with Mrs. Rachel Peterson of Yantic and a very enjoyable evening of radio and sewing was enjoyed. Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by the hostess. The next meeting is to be held with Mrs. Annabelle Enback of High street.

MANY YOUTHFUL DRIVERS INVOLVED IN ACCIDENTS

One in every eleven of those under 18 years of age licensed to drive automobiles during the first six months operation of the so-called sixteen-year-old law was in an accident, according to records of the state motor vehicle department. During the same period about one in every fifteen of these young drivers was convicted in court of some violation of the motor vehicle law.

There were 6,711 boys and girls under 18 years of age licensed during the period and 569 were in accidents. The percentage involved in accidents, to the whole group, was 8.4, a figure exceeded only by the percentage for the drivers in the age groups from 18 to 20 and from 20 to 30 years old. The accident rates for these last named groups was 13 and 12 per cent., respectively. The percentage of all operators involved in accidents during the six months was slightly less than that for the 16 to 18 years old group, being 8.3 per cent.

During the seven months between May 1, when persons under 18 years of age were first allowed to operate cars, and December 1,507, or approximately 7 per cent. of all those licensed, were convicted in court of some violation of motor vehicle regulations. As in the case of the accident rate this percentage was exceeded only by that of the 18 to 20 and the 20 to 30 years old groups, which were 10 and 7.8 per cent., respectively. The percentage for all groups during the period was 4.4.

The majority of the troubles of the young operators apparently came during the second three months of the period, as statistics show that they made a fine start with few accidents during the first three months they were allowed to drive. Another fact that is apparent upon examination of the court records is that the youthful drivers are far less successful in "evading responsibility" and the consequent court proceedings than their older brothers and sisters. While nearly equal percentages of drivers between 30 and 40 years old were involved in accidents, only 3 per cent. were convicted of infractions of the motor vehicle laws, as compared with 7 per cent. of those under 18 years of age.

Records for the period indicate that the older the group of drivers the less it is concerned in accidents and court procedure. The best record is set by the 3,000 drivers of more than 70 years of age, only 3 per cent. of whom were involved in accidents and only .6 per cent. of whom were convicted of motor vehicle law violations.

There are about seven times as many boys as there are girls under eighteen now licensed to operate. The girls of this group are also maintaining the law accident records established by women for the state, which shows that only 6 per cent. of the drivers involved in accidents are women. Very few of the young operators brought into court were girls.

The following table shows the approximate number of persons licensed from May 1 to November 1 in each group, the number of accidents for each group and the percentage of accidents to the number operating cars:

Age Group	No. Lisc.	No. In Accid.	Pct.
16-18	6,711	569	8.4
18-20	14,000	1,851	13.2
20-30	76,000	9,677	12.7
30-40	86,000	7,197	8.3
40-50	66,000	3,904	5.9
50-60	42,000	1,795	4.2
60-70	16,000	617	3.8
70-	3,000	110	0.3

The number convicted in court in each age group and the percentage to the total number licensed in that group follows: 16-18, 507, 7.5; 18-20, 3,375, 3.9; 40-50, 1,611, 2.4; 50-60, 587, 1,436, 10.2; 20-30, 6,001, 7.8; 30-40, 1.4; 60-70, 137, .85; 70 and more, 19, .63.

CHRISTMAS TREES FOR COURT HOUSE OFFICES

The court house is now resplendent in its new appointments, that of several Christmas trees in the rooms of various officers, town clerk, city treasurer and water department. The trees, which are about three feet in height, were presented by City Treasurer Harold S. Burt, while the trimmings were furnished by members of the various offices.

Dog With Peculiar Actions

A dog that has been acting in a peculiar manner on Jail hill for a day or two has been causing some anxiety to residents in that section. The animal has been running around in a regular track on Cedar and Happy street, but does not offer to interfere with any one, although it evades efforts to capture it. First Selectman W. S. Murray and Deputy Commissioner Elliott, who was here Saturday from the Hartford office of the state commissioner on domestic animals, tried to snare the dog Saturday but were unsuccessful. Mr. Elliott decided that the dog did not show signs of madness. The animal has a license tag on its collar and is of mixed breed, part shepherd and hound.

LOCAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS SHOW SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT

Despite unseasonable weather, general business conditions in Connecticut during November of this year showed some improvement over the same month last year, according to the monthly survey of fifteen leading communities, prepared jointly by the local chambers of commerce and the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce.

Postal receipts, hotel business and bank clearings, debits and savings, according to a number of the reports, showed a substantial increase this November over last. Retail business showed improvement in some cities, but a falling off in others. Building permits, real estate sales, gas and electric consumption and telephone installation were inconsistent, in some places showing a gain, and in others, a loss.

Industrial conditions also were spotty, but on the average factories were operating about the same as a year ago. Several communities reported a substantial increase in the number of employes taken on by the leading manufacturing plants.

A survey by the Bridgeport chamber of all vacant rents and stores disclosed that there had been a decrease of 15 per cent. in vacant residences and of 25 per cent. in idle stores compared with November, a year ago. Greenwich reported a larger spread of Christmas buying than in any previous year, an increase in retail trade in that city last month being credited to an urge of earlier Christmas buying.

Surveys in Norwich and New London for the month follow:

Secretary Walter Pilcher, of the Norwich chamber reported as follows: Business conditions in Norwich during November showed slight improvement over last month, and compared favorably with November, 1926. There were 40 building permits issued amounting to $44,975 as compared with $41,420 in November last year. Bank clearings were about 2 1-2 per cent. greater in November, 1927, the total being $26,971,787, in 1927 as compared to $26,662,016 in 1926. Savings deposits on November 30, 1927, were $41,801,679 as compared to $39,373,787 last year. Gas consumption was 12,831,000 cubic feet for Nov. 1927 as compared to 14,247,000 cubic feet in 1926. Electric consumption was 948,640 K. H. last month against 914,500 K. H. in 1926. Telephone installation showed slight decrease for November. Post office receipts for November this year were $10,000 as compared to $9,900 in avember, 1926. Hotel business is approximately the same as in November, 1926. Four retail stores report anywhere from 10 to 15 per cent. more sales volume in dollars and cents in November, 1927, as compared to November, 1926, while three large establishments indicate their business volume to be approximately the same as last year.

Secretary Garlepy, of the New London chamber, reported as follows: November in New London did not present a very pleasing picture. The unseasonable weather caused retail sales to drop considerably. A remarkable thing for this time of year was the reduced price of fur coats made necessary by the warm weather. Employment here was about the same as last month. Postal receipts, telephone, gas and electric consumption all showed a slight decrease for the month.

MANY TELEPHONE INQUIRIES ABOUT SUBMARINE S-4

Several hundred telephone calls were received at the editorial rooms of The Bulletin Sunday evening relative to the sinking of the Submarine S-4 by the Coast Guard Destroyer Paulding. Many calls were due to fact that several wild rumors had been circulated in the city, one of which was that the submarine had been raised with all men safe.

"Y" OUTLAWS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM FAST PLAINFIELD BUDDIES

The Y Outlaws gave the Plainfield Buddies their first defeat of the season Saturday night at the Y gym, winning out in the third quarter after a poor start. It was a rough game with both teams about equally responsible for this.

The Buddies took a commanding lead in the first half and led 8 to 4 at half time. For a time it looked like a Plainfield runaway, but after intermission the locals were able to break through more frequently. Both teams were handicapped, the Y because it was their opener and the Buddies because of the change from pro to amateur rules.

The Buddies passed better than the Y but they seemed to kill this advantage with too many long shots. On the other hand, the Outlaws used their scoring chances to advantage and counted in a better percentage on their shots than did the Buddies.

The Outlaws jumped into the lead on the opening tapoff when Pingree caged a field goal. However the Buddies tied it right up and then went ahead on a foul shot. The Buddies then stepped out and ran up an 8 to 2 lead at the quarter. The second period was a bit closer although the Y never threatened at a tie.

Both teams began mixing it up in the third quarter at even a swifter pace than during the preceding periods with the result that many of the scores came from the foul-line. Two of the Plainfield boys went out via the personnal foul route, Bromley and E. Mercier. Both teams played along with more body contact than anything and at the whistle in the third quarter the Y had taken the lead which they held for the remainder of the way.

The last quarter was at much the same pace and the final whistle found the clubs in the midst of a stiff scrimmage.

Eaton and Peterson were best for Plainfield, these two boys carrying practically all the burden during the final minutes after two of the regulars had been ejected. No Y player stood out for they all showed exceptional teamwork for an opening game. However, the foul shooting of Ray Yerrington and Brown was what really proved the margin of victory.

Brothers of Joseph Win Opener

In the preliminary the Brothers of Joseph put it over a bigger First Baptist team by a 30 to 20 score in the opening Senior Church league game. Henschel caged 18 of the winner's points from a guard berth and this total was far ahead of any other member. The Baptist seemed to be able to get possession of the ball just as much if not a bit more but the Brothers made better use of the pill when they had it.

MCGRAW-TERRIS BOUT TOPS METROPOLITAN CARD

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Topping the week's boxing activities, Sid Terris, of New York's East Side, will battle Phil McGraw, of Detroit in a 10-round match at Madison Square Garden Friday night in a lightweight elimination bout.

The principals have clashed twice previously. In the first encounter, Terris was knocked down four times bu rallied sufficiently to take the judges' decision although there was a storm of protest at the verdict. Terris lost on a foul to McGraw on their second meeting and was suspended by the boxing fathers here.

Seeking the championship of his division, Terris will have to defeat McGraw in the process of scaling the heights. Terris has been picked here as the logical opponent for Sammy Mandell, the titleholder. When Mandell, who hails from Rockford, Ill., ignored a challenge from Terris, the New York state athletic commission placed him on the ineligible list with the understanding he would not be reinstated until he accepted the defi.

In Toronto tomorrow night, Frenchy Belanger, conqueror of Frankie Genroa and Newsboy Brown, will struggle against Ernie Jarvis, of London, for the flyweight championship of the National Boxing association which has a foloiwing in 24 states of the union According to plans announced by Tex Rickard, New York promoter, the winner of the Toronto bout will be matched with Izzy Schwartz, of this city who became the recognized titleholder of the flyweight division in this state by virtue of a victory over Newsboy Brown in Madison Square Garden last Friday night. According to reports, however, the flyweight muddle will thicken as Pennsylvania has intentions of staging an elimination tourney to pick the successor to the crown vacated by Fidel La Barba on the Pacific coast.

BASKETBALL ACTIVITIES FOR THIS WEEK

Basketball this week in eastern Connecticut continues at a brisk pace although activity will slightly lessen in Norwich. The games tonight at the Y gym bringing together C. F. C. and Noank Nuggetts and Y Emps and Norwich Kappa club and the opening game of the Junior Church league on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, are the only games scheduled for the city so far this week. However, attempts are being made for a game SSaturday evening bringing a leading club to oppose the Y. M. C. A.

However, outlying sections will be very busy. Plainfield Pros have the crack Boston Nationals, one of the leading quintets of the Hub City. Danielson and the Taftville Crescents of this city meet at Danielson Thursday night, this being the Crescent's opening game.

The Academy will still be hard at work during the coming week, it marking their second weeks' practice. The Red and White still has a couple of weeks before their opening game, Jan. 7. The Taftville Crescents open their season Monday, Dec. 26, at Parish hall against an as yet unnamed opponent.

The high school end of the sport is also swinging into line with regularity. Chapman Tech, which already has three games in, plays the Alumni Tuesday before closing up shop until Jan. 3 when Saybrook High is met at Saybrook. Windham, opening with a win over the Alumni last week, plays Co. C of Willimantic Wednesday before likewise suspending operations until the New Year when Chapman Tech furnishes the first opposition Jan. 6. Stonington opens this week playing the Alumni Thursday at the Community house, her new playing surface.

AMATEURS NOT PROFESSIONALS ON UNSANCTIONED CARDS

The answer that the A. A. U. will get from Thomas E. Donohue, of New London, state athletic commissioner, if they write, as rumored, asking to class all unsanctioned bouts as professional, was forecast in a conversation with the commissioner here Friday night. Commissioner Donohue talked with sports writers of Norwich, New London and New Bedford, regarding the amateur status of boxers performing on cards other than those sanctioned by the A. A. U. A number of A. A. U. registered boxers also conferred with the commissioner regarding their amateur standing.

Mr. Donohue said that he saw nothing in unsanctioned bouts that would cause an amateur athlete to lose his amateur standing provided he was not paid money for his services or knowingly competed against a professional boxer. He said he failed to see how the A. A. U. could declare a boxer a professional because he boxed on an unsanctioned card unless he took money above a reasonable sum for expenses. He assured the boys that anyone who had boxed on the Pastime A. C. card Friday night could not be classed as a professional. It was a strictly amateur show, but the A. A. U. could suspend any of its members if it saw fit, but could not take away their amateur standing.

PLAINFIELD PROS PLAY BOSTON NAT'LS WEDNESDAY

The Boston Nationals, one of the Hub city's leading basketball teams, is to be the opponent of the Plainfield Pros at the Community House court on Wednesday evening. The Nationals will come to Plainfield with as strong a lineup as has been seen on the local floor this season. Included in the lineup is Snappy O'Connell, player and manager, one of the best guards in New England; Klim, a guard with a reputation of being one of the best basket tossers in Boston; Coo Thompson, a center that is attracting much attention throughout the east; Lauty Waters, considered the basketball find of the season at a forward berth; Carven, the other forward is a second edition of Jimmy Malcolm of the Bristol club and plays the same kind of game.

A team of this calibre should give the Pros a busy evening and a victory over them will give Plainfield a real New England reputation.

HARDING HIGH COACH TELLS WHY HE PICKED BERGHINZO

Jack Mead, coach at Harding high school in Bridgeport, writes the following letter in which he states his reason for picking Berghinzo on his All-State scholastic football team. His letter follows:

As there was some criticism of my choice of the right end of the Norwich Academy football team for a position on the All-State team, I wish to give you my reasons for the selection.

In the first place, it must be remembered that I saw the boy in action but one afternoon during the whole season and judged him on the work of that particular day.

The boy I refer to is rugged and played the best defensive game of any end we met during the season and we met the best in this state. I have confirmed this by consulting my backfield players who are agreed on the high class defensive work of this player during the Harding-Norwich game, and the boy's ruggedness alone assures him of average offensive ability.

Naturally, persons around Norwich will know their players much better than I and what I say of him do may have been a flash in the pan. He may have played over his head on that particular afternoon. However, if his offensive and defensive play for the season was anywhere near the mark of October 22nd then I believe him well worthy of the selection.

Sincerely yours,
JACK MEAD,
Coach, Harding High.

COCHRAN TO DEFEND HIS TITLE AGAINST SCHAEFER

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—For the second time within a year, Welker Cochran, world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion, this week is called upon to defend the title he won at Washington last December.

Having successfully hurled the challenge of Eric Hagenlacher, German star in a a match at Chicago some months ago Cochran now finds youthful Jake Schaefer, former titleholder and son of the "old wizard" of the same name, contesting his claim to supremacy at the 18.2 game.

The opening block, of 300 points, of the 1,500 point match, will be played at the Pennsylvania hotel here tomorrow night. Blocks of 300 points each will follow on Tuesday afternoon and night and Wednesday afternoon and night.

BITTER COLD WEATHER ENDS PRO FOOTBALL SEASON

CHICAGO, Dec. 18—(AP)—The football game scheduled for today as the closing game of the season, between Benny Friedman's Cleveland Bulldogs and the Chicago Bears of the National league, was called off at game time because of the cold. There were about 2,500 persons in the stands, but a bitter north wind with the thermometer sliding down near five above zero made play almost impossible.

"Emps" Outcasts Challenge

The Emps Outcasts, consisting of former "Y" Emps players, issue a challenge for a game to be played on Thursday evening at the "Y" floor against the present wearers of the Emps colors. The roster consists of such players as Dave Tigar, scoring ace of the Emps and Stevens at the forward positions, with C. Henschel, one of the best junior centers in this section at center and Murphy, who has been playing good ball lately, with another man who as yet has not been chosen but may be another of the original Emps to fill in the guard positions This combination certainly can hold its own with any team of its kind in the state. If the "Y" Emps accept challenge answer through the Bulletin.

MALCOLM OF BRISTOL ENDEES HEADS SCORERS IN STATE BASKETBALL

WATERBURY, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Captain Jimmy Malcolm, of Bristol, went back into the lead of the Connecticut State Basketball league scorers in the third week with a total of 56 points, displacing Herm Cohen, of the New Haven Atlas, according to the official records released today by Secretary William P. O'Donnell. The New Departure team leader enjoyed two good nights against the Meriden Endees, scoring 21 points in the series. Cohen was held scoreless from the floor by the Hartford Yankees.

The spurt of the Hartford entry featured the games of the past week. The Yankees defeated two of the strongest clubs in the circuit handing New Haven its first setback on Tuesday and beating New Britain on Saturday night. The double victory for the Capitol city quintet took them out of last place, while Waterbury lost two games, and went into sole possession of the cellar berth, when Meriden handed the Bristol club a defeat Saturday night.

A. A. U. EXECUTIVES HOLD CLOSED SESSION AT NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 18—The executive committee of the Connecticut Amateur Athletic Union met in a closed session last night at the City Hall to consider reported discrepancies and violations of the amateur code in regard to amateur boxing in this state. While all outsiders and the press were excluded from the meeting, scattered gleanings carried the tale that the conference was full of fireworks with several protracted arguments over thealleged professionalism current in amateur ranks.

Of particular interest to New Haven was the inquiry into the situation at Music hall, which resulted in a wholesale suspension of amateurs following charges that they were paid by the matchmakers of the defunct Music Hall A. C. for their efforts. All told, 20 fighters were placed on the suspension list, but disclosures at last night's meeting showed five of the fighters did not accept money for their services and they were at once restored to good standing. The boxers reinstated were Andy Gambardella, Tim O'Connor and Tony Bianco and Joe Oesilio of Waterbury. They will be eligible to compete in amateur tournaments in the future.

Another situation in Bridgeport was cleared up when several boxers who had been on probation following their refusal to accept their prizes at a Park City show were restored to good standing. These warriors, Joe Nagy, Eddie Brody, Billy and Teddie LaCroix, Rus Mauryx and Al Besak, have been under the eye of Chairman Joe Wirtz since October 15.

It was also suggested at the meeting that each city would have one referee for amateur bouts and one set of ringside officials. It was then decided that these officials would not confine their efforts to their own city but would be sent around the state to officiate at other meets. This method has been in use in the west for some time and has worked out in a very satisfactory manner.

Six new clubs were admitted to the organization during the session, while the application of six more were tabled. Those admitted to the organization were the Field Artillery of Norwalk, Elks of Bridgeport, New Haven fire department, Civic association of New Canaan, Health Gymnasium, Norwalk, and Park A. C., Bris- Those clubs whose applications were tabled for further investigation were the Blue Ribbon A. C., of Stamford, Pioneer A. C., of Danbury, Sokol Rosebuds A. C., of Bridgeport, Xavier A. C., of Winsted, Glastonbury A. C. and the Atlas A. C. of Torrington.

CONGRESSMAN FAR FROM SAD OVER ARMY-NAVY BREAK

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—(AP)—Few tears have been shed on Capitol hill over the break in football relations between the Army and the Navy.

Whatever their official views may be, many members of congress personally breathed a sigh of relief at the immediate prospect that there will be no more demands made upon them for tickets to the annual service battle.

Each fall, weeks in advance of the game, senators and house members have been harrassed by an avalanche of requests for the coveted pasteboards, and quite a little of their time and that of their secretaries has been spent in chasing down elusive rumors that so and so might get them a ticket.

Members of congress themselves have been alloted only a limited number of the tickets in recent years, and several of them have remarked at times that one of their most difficult problems was the satisfying of constituent demands.

Frequently, senators and representatives have been forced to go to the "scalpers'" market and pay as high as $20 or more for tickets and that in itself has not set well on the congressional disposition.

Chairman Butler of the house naval committee, epitomized the views of many when he said in commenting on the break: "I have but one fear, they may resume them again."

CUT EXPECTED IN ACADEMY SQUAD TODAY

The first and also the final cut in the Academy basketball squad comes this afternoon when Coach Whitney slices the squad down to the required 10 men.

Just who those retained will be is not even being hinted at for competition was very keen all during last week, the first for the squad.

No doubt the four veterans from last year, Capt. Jim Kelly, Buck LaCroix, Joe Viau and Les Pingree, will be present after the axe falls but the other six men will come from a most promising squad of youngsters, with practically all having had plenty of experience.

The above four men last year filled two guards, a forward and a center and it seems that all that is needed from these men is one forward to complete the team. However, it has been said that Kelly or LaCroix may be moved to a forward and then the problem would be to find a guard. The promising men for the remaining berth are Stevens, Fagan, Tigar, Lynch, Sussman, Henschel and Schwartzburg, all of whom have seen considerable service on the chalked court.

The tentative opening date is Jan 7, although it may be possible that the Alumni will be met during the holidays.

HINKEL RETAINS TITLE AS WALKING CHAMPION

NEW YOFK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Harry Hinkel of the New York Athletic club waded through to an easy victory in defending his National A. A. W. seven mile walking championship against a field of 14 competitors here today with a time of 53 minutes, 11 3-5 seconds. While his winning time did not equal his previous standard, Hinkel's record for the distance is 52.56 4-5.

Since 1876 Hinkel's time has been the second fastest onthe books and was bettered only by the performance of George Goulding, sensational Canadian walker, who strode the route in 50.40 4-4 about 12 years ago.

The New York A. C. star finished with a lead of almost 200 yards, nearly half a lap, over William Carlson of the Finnish-American A. C.

BASKETBALL BRIEFS

Two games are scheduled for tonight at the Y gym. The C. F. C. meets the Noank Nuggets in the headliner while the Y Emps and the Kappa club, a local team, tangle in the opener. The action opens at 7:30.

This Kappa club has about the tallest basketball player in the city, Herb Neilson. This young fellow, who must average well over six feet, handles himself well for his size although his handling of the ball was not quite up to par Saturday night when he played for the First Baptists against the Brothers of Joseph.

The crowd Saturday was the largest of the season but probably that's not much of a distinction for there were few over 100 on the sidelines. It takes the Academy to draw the crowds.

Emile Raymond, former manager of the Taftville Celtics made his city debut as a referee Saturday and although he had plenty of tough moments still he emerged on top.

Bill Nield, Chapman Tech captain is piling up a tremendous lead for other members of eastern Conn. high school quintets to match. Players on Stonington and Academy which have not started yet, are facing quite some job to overhaul him.

South Manchester High already has thre straight wins to its credit. Hartford, East Hartford and Crosby have been the victims.

In dropping one to Torington Saturday Harding surprised some although it must be remembered that the Geary-men always have able representatives on the chalked court. Torrington didn't get into the Yale tournament last year to defend her state title honors of the year before but things point to her traveling to New Haven this spring.

The All-Hellers are again in the field for the holiday season. These five brothers intend to play some of the leading basketball outfits in these parts during the next few weeks. They have a game pending with Springfield Y. M. H. A. while they open with Co. C at Willimantic Friday night.

LOCAL COMMISSIONER DID NOT PERSONALLY WARN BOXERS

The impression gained from the article in Saturday morning's paper that the local A. A. U. commissioner personally warned the registered A. A. U. boxers not to fight at the unsanctioned show on Friday night is incorrect. The commissioner says that he did not see any of the boxers named in the article and did not warn them personally. The only warning that the boxers had was through the press which explained the existing conditions very thoroughly.

The local commissioner attended the meeting of the A. A. U. executives at New Haven on Saturday evening.

YOUNG PESHEENI GETTING IN CONDITION FOR BOUT

When Promoter Jerry Sullivan of New London stages his boxing card at the Lyceum theater in New London on January 28th, Geno Pecheeni, the promising local boxer, will be seen in action against Johnny O'Keefe in an eight round bout. Promoter Sullivan plans to put on four eight-round bouts in which he intends to feature Bobby Mays in one and Kid Wagner in another. Opponents for Mays and Wagner have not been selected, but the Pecheeni-O'Keefe bout has been signed.

Young Pecheeni, who at the present time needs little conditioning, will start work after New Years to get in shape for O'Keefe. O'Keefe is a tough boy and has been fighting steadily of late and on Saturday night lost a close decision to Johnny Scalzi at New Haven. Pecheeni is also anxious to meet this Scalzi boy either before or after his bout with O'Keefe.

Kid Wagner who appeared on the same card at New Haven lost to DeChamplain when a cut over the eye caused the referee to stop the battle in the second round.

TEACHER SUES DOCTOR FOR $50,000 DAMAGES

Damages in the sum of $50,000 are claimed by Miss Mary A. Shea of 104 Connecticut avenue, New London in a civil action suit against Dr. Hugh F. Lena, of New London, brought by her counsel, State Atty. Ernest A. Inglis of Middlesex county. Papers in the suit were served by Deputy Sheriff Nelson C. L. Brown of Noank.

In her complaint the plaintiff alleges she underwent an operation on her neck at the hands of Dr. Lena on Nov. 22, 1926 and between Dec. 18 and 29, 1926, was treated by Roentgen rays or X-rays by the defendant and in such a manner that she sustained burns on her left ear, face, neck and chest which resulted in permanent disfigurement.

INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE MEETS TODAY

Some definite information as to whether the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic Athletic council is to enlarge and become a real representative conference will be forthcoming from the special meeting at the Academy this afternoon of the present four members, the Academy, Westerly, Stonington and Chapman Tech together with invited guests from Putnam, Plainfield, Killingly, New London Bulkeley, Windham and Wheeler school of North Stonington.

For some time now it has been the desire of many to include more schools in this league so that a league title winner would then have a real valid claim to the championship of the territory that the league is supposed to embrace.

Windham and Bulkeley, especially, practically always turn out teams that can compete on even terms with the best in the state. And yet these clubs are not included in the membership of a league in their territory.

The smaller schools, Putnam, Plainfield, Killingly and Wheeler will probably enter without much ado for there is everything to gain in their so doing and nothing to lose. They will gain much more publicity by joining this league than would otherwise be the case, in short they will be pulled out of the rut in which they are travelling and be on a much higher plane than is now the case.

But the trouble lies in the two major independent teams, Windham and Bulkeley. Bulkeley is more or less on the "outs" with three teams of this proposed loop. She has not met Chapman Tech, Windham and Westerly for quite a few years. The trouble in the Windham case seems to lie around the money question. These teams, it is understood, have had trouble in dividing the receipts on the home and home series and as a result they have not met at all for the last three or four years. There is really no hard feelings here, it is mainly a misunderstanding. Westerly and Bulkeley had some trouble with a baseball game several years ago and since then never met.

Chapman Tech and Bulkeley probably present as odd a case as will be found anywhere in Connecticut. These two schools of the same city broke off relations about five years ago and it is reported that the intervening years have not done anything toward healing the break. The situation between these two schools will probably present the hardest problem this afternoon for it would be rather a foolish proposition to form a league for the purpose of being truly representative of this section and yet have two teams in it never scheduled to meet.

The question of officials is also said to be slated for a general "going over" today. Bulkeley uses Central Board men for all her games while Conn. Aggie officials have held sway over the rest of the schools although the Academy has shown a leaning toward the Central Board whenever possible.

Many are hoping for the best and there may be some way out.

WESTERLY

SMOKE FROM OIL HEATER DAMAGES THE SOLOMON STORE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 18—Damage from thick black oily smoke, estimated at $50,000, was wrought to the stock and fixtures of the dry goods store of Lewis Solomon Saturday morning, in the three story brick business block on Broad street, recently purchased by him. The trouble is supposed to have been caused by an explosion at the burners of the oil heating plant in the basement of the main building. When Third Assistant Fire Engineer Columbus Pasetti forced his way, after several unsuccessful attempts, to the basement of the store filled with suffocating smoke, he reported finding the furnace door on the floor and the smoke pipe down. Flame and black smoke poured from both openings and penetrated to almost every nook and corner of the store. Even the Vara Drug store, fronting on High street, and the Barbour Pharmacy on Broad street contained smoke dispelled by opening doors and windows.

Frederick W. Bellamy, passing the store observed the smoke and telephoned Mr. Solomon. A telephone call was sent to Fire Chief George E. Egger, who although a recent sufferer from a shock, reported for duty immediately. Shortly after 7 a. m. an alarm was rung in from Box No. 54, Dixon House Square, and all the pieces of apparatus of the Westerly fire department responded. Fire hose lines were laid from hydrants near-by and the two pumpers were in readiness, but no water was turned into the building. A telephone call had brought Fred W. Harvey, the burner installer, who turned off the automatic oil switch and a helper connected the smoke pipe in the basement. Access to the basement was gained at the rear alley, back of the Industrial Trust building, where Engineer Pasetti, Max Raithel, Jerome Solomon, Robert Wilcox and Fred Harvey and helper reached the furnace room. These men, with smoke protectors, fought their way through the suffocating clouds. While this smoke did not cause as great damage in the clothing store department due to there being no basement connection, the smoke being drawn out by the ventilators on the roof, the main building second and third floors were covered with a sooty smudge to the thickness of nearly an eighth of an inch.

Ladders were placed on the front of the building and the upper large plate glass windows, whose white draperies had become blackened, were swung open. The smoke hid the firemen at the ladder tops.

Assistant Engineer Robert Bonner and George A. McKenzie were early at the store and Police Chief Thomas E. Brown made a hasty visit to the square.

The store remained closed all day with a police officer on duty at the door. In the afternoon General Adjuster Smith arrived in Westerly from Providence and conferred with the proprietor and the four or five Westerly insurance agents with whom policies were held. The Westerly fire department heads were called into the conference. It was reported that the proprietor would not be able to collect for damages on his policies.

When Westerly Forest No. 107, Tall Cedars of Lebanon hel dits annual meeting Ernest N. Gully was re-elected grand tall cedar. Present for the election and installation was Supreme District Representative Harry A. Sanderson of Providence, who was assisted by Frank Becker, grand tall cedar of Providence Forest. Foreman Gage MacGraw states that he expects an early crop of ice this season and there is nothing like being ready when the cold weather hits the village. Last year the men got the most ice cut since the ice house was built five years ago. The men had to stack the ice on the outside of the building. He put away 30 doughnuts while Smiling Scott stowed 39 doughnuts under his belt for a new hat on his rival. A small crowd was in the place and cheered the Noank doughnut champion. Scott made a short speech.

The municipal Christmas tree was a beautiful sight, lighted Saturday night in its position on Fanning Park. The borough flag is at half mast at Fanning Park in memory of Warden Matthew Geary.

A degenerate who is claimed to be dangerous, is at large in the borough. Borough officers and Deputy Sheriff John T. Dolan are making an effort to apprehend the man, who is said to be young and tall, wearing a dark overcoat, and on the two occasions he has been reported to have accosted residents of the village, is said to have had a handkerchief up to his face. About 10 o'clock last Monday evening, after the nightly performance of the picture house in the borough, a little Polish girl, living in Slater's, a remote section of the borough, was stopped by a young man and after a tussle was thrown into the river. The water happened to be high, and the heavy coat worn by the girl, enabled her to keep afloat, so that she reached the shore safely and ran home. Another resident of the borough, a woman, was accosted supposedly by the same person, but she managed to get away.

PLANNING EXPULSION OF GANGSTERS FROM CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—(AP)—A forced exodus of Chicago's most active gangsters and bootleggers, headed by Al Capone, former New York gunman and now self-styled liquor baron of Chicago, will be under way within a few days, Chief of Detectives William E. O'Connor promised tonight.

"And if they, like Capone, insist on staying here," O'Connor threatened, "we will make jails of their homes, making things so hot for them they will be more than glad to leave for other climes."

Meanwhile, Capone, who has been kept under surveillance by the police since he returned from Los Angeles, where he was forced to leave by authorities there, remained sequestered in his mother's home while police formed a cordon about the house with orders to arrest him the minute he attempted to leave. Joseph Martin, a friend of Capone's and Mrs. Capone attempted to enter the home today, but were stopped by the vigilant police. Martin was arrested, but Mrs. Capone was allowed to return to another section of Cicero, a suburb.

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT CONTINUE TO BE MANIFEST IN HEAVY INDUSTRIES

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—(AP)—American business last week was dominated by the holiday shopping season and most other lines were relegated to a secondary position. Nevertheless signs of improvement continued to be manifest in some of the so-called heavy industries and the predictions of a prosperous year in 1927 went on.

Outstanding among the indications of improvement was a gain in operations, substantial increase in unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel corporation at the close of November. Larger purchases by railroads are makers of automobiles and sustained inquiry in a few other quarters contributed much to the stepping up of activity. A firmer stand in prices was evident among producers, quotations on heavy melting scrap rose 25 to 50 cents a ton in some of the principal steel centers.

November foreign trade figures also were regarded as significant inasmuch as the excess of exports over imports had the largest dollar value in any November since 1924. The export surplus for the first 11 months of the year was around $605,000,000, an increase of about $333,000,000 over the corresponding period of 1926.

Improvement in cotton demand also attracted attention in business circles, particularly as the increase was unexpected in view of reports of curtailed operation in the some of the prominent mill centers. Expansion in the dry goods market indicated a disposition of wholesalers to believe in a first class run of business next year. In some lines where inventories have been completed, it has been found that unfilled orders are materially larger than was the case at this time last year.

A further shipment of $7,500,000 gold to England and consignments totaling more than $16,000,000 to Latin America were features of interest, but optimistic comments by well informed bankers tended to alleviate fears which had been held in some quarters that the rising tide of gold exports would cause a serious drain on the credit reservoir.

The stock market, although less a barometer of business prospects this year than in other times, was one of the most active in weeks, culminating on Friday in the fourth 2,000,000 share day of the year. Some observers were inclined to interpret this activity and strength as a prediction of favorable trends.

Distinct signs of improving trade were present in various branches of the metal market, notably copper. An increase in the demand for this metal, coupled with a relatively limited supply, were cited as the principal factors foreshadowing a steady upward trend.

Aviation again came forcefully into prominence with the flight of Colonel Lindbergh to Mexico and further expansion of plans for aeroplane manufacture and commercial air routes. The lumber trade, as well as other phases of the building industry appeared to mark time although somewhat animated by prospects of spring operations.

The credit situation was little changed, time money and commercial paper riding along on an even keel. Bank clearings increased about six per cent over the figures for the same week of 1926. This gain, however, was made possible by huge clearings in New York, whereas declines were noted in most of the remaining cities.
